Because singer Don Williams has indicated that due to health reasons he will be unable to fulfill a contract to appear at the Pennington county fair this year, directors of the county fair association met Tuesday evening to consider alternatives.

Availability of Ricky Skaggs for a Thursday evening program and Johnny Lee for a Friday night fair appearance was discussed by the board. Decision was made to attempt to contract Ricky Skaggs, although he will also be appearing at a large country-western weekend in Detroit Lakes within three weeks of the fair here.

Firewood Piles In City Have Some Elm Wood

Spring inspection of firewood piles in Thief River Falls resulted in finding of 15 locations where elm wood was included in the wood supply, according to John Johnson, city forester.

Because elm bark beetles which can transfer Dutch elm disease over-winter beneath the bark of dead elm wood, persons whose wood supply contained elm wood were given the choice of burning it, peeling the bark or disposing of the wood in a sanitary landfill. Most elected to burn or dispose of the wood, Johnson said.

Random checks of firewood supplies will be made during the summer in a further effort to remove the source for spread of the disease, Johnson added.

WEATHER MODIFICATION was the topic of discussion for a meeting attended by a number of area farmers and other interested persons Tuesday morning at the Thief River Falls city auditorium. Sen. LeRoy Stumpf (left) arranged the meeting and presided at the discussion. Major participants were R. Lynn Rose (center), director of the North Dakota weather modification board headquartered in Bismarck, ND, and Earl Kuehnast, Minnesota state climatologist stationed at the University of Minnesota in St. Paul. Rose and Kuehnast provided technical background and information on weather patterns and attempts at weather modification. Both agreed that the seeding of clouds in North Dakota for hail suppression and rainfall acceleration would have no appreciable affect on rainfall in this area of Minnesota.

Weather Modification Is Study Topic On Tuesday

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

When the technical fog regarding weather patterns and modification technology had lifted in the Thief River Falls city auditorium basement Tuesday morning, farmers and other interested persons attending should have been able to see two things rather clearly:

(1) When it's wet, it's wet, and there isn't anything anyone can do to prevent excessive rainfall or even adequately explain why it happens;

(2) Seeding of clouds in neighboring states with silver iodide to suppress hail and accelerate precipitation has virtually no effect on northwestern Minnesota rainfall.

The meeting had been arranged by Sen. LeRoy Stumpf of Plummer in response to questions raised by area people about the possible effects of cloud seeding on excessive rainfall in this area in the past several years. While some people left the meeting unconvinced, most seemed satisfied that explanations given were as accurate and straight forward as the uncertainties of weather permit.

Participating in the presentation of information and answering of questions were Earl Kuehnast, St. Paul Minnesota state climatologist; R. Lynn Rose, Bismarck, ND, director of the North Dakota weather modification board; Darryl L. Anderson, St. Paul, assistant commissioner of the Minnesota department of agriculture; and Dr. Cedric A. Grainger, Grand Forks, director of atmospheric research in the center for aerospace sciences at the University of North Dakota. Sen. Stumpf chaired the panel.

The Tuesday morning meeting had originally been scheduled for Saturday morning but had to be postponed when principals scheduled to participate were unable to get here because of unseasonal spring storm conditions.

Climatologist Kuehnast traced a history of weather patterns in various areas of the state, noting how they will change from season to season and vary greatly from year to year. He spoke of "100-year" storms, referring to unusual storms which would have that severity in a given area in a frequency of only once every 100 years. And he noted that the Rochester area had three such storms within a year's time.

He speculated that the extremely high rainfall in some areas of northwestern Minnesota — particularly in

Council Approves Nursery's Permit

Reflecting discomfort over a growing list of legal entanglements, Thief River Falls city council voted 5-2 to approve a special use permit for Tim Shea's Nursery at the conclusion of a special meeting last night in city auditorium.

Following testimony which was dominated by legal opinions from the city attorney, and lawyers representing both the nursery and local businesses which face competition from it, those approving votes were cast with an air of resignation rather than approval of the business, which will be in operation for only two months of the year, May and June.

Opposition to the firm came primarily from local nursery owners who own property in the city and operate year around. "We'll gladly compete with them on a year around basis," was the comment made by one of the local nursery owners.

Attorney John Novachek, who stated that he was representing the opposition, raised a number of issues regarding whether the Shea nursery could legally operate in Pennington county without a special transiet merchant license. He also gave an opinion that councils had not gotten in trouble for denying special use permits if they had legitimate reasons for denial.

In response, city attorney Bob Wurst advised that council was considering a narrow issue of a special use permit, and should base their decision only on whether the business met standards for granting special use permits, which are stated in the city's zoning ordinance as follows:

1. The establishment, maintenance or operation of the special use will not be detrimental to or endanger the public health, safety, morals, comfort or general welfare.

2. The special use will not be injurious to the use and en-

Chairman Olin expressed his sincere thanks to all of the boys, leaders and parents participating. Special thanks were given by Olin and district commissioner Bonnie Van Schaick to all committee chairmen, members and volunteers who helped set up and clean up the arena under the direction of Robert Bredeson, physical arrangement chairman.

Thanks were also expressed to the county fair board, city council, parks and recreation department, Lampert Lumber company, Hardee's and the Thief River Falls Elks lodge. Appreciation was also expressed for assistance and donations for the Canadian hospitality functions, including host families.

Modification Of Weather Aired Here

Pennington, Marshall and Red Lake counties — could result from the area being at the "crossroads" of storms traveling from northwest to southeast and northeast to southwest.

Weather modification board director Rose explained the natural process of precipitation forming and how persons attempting to accelerate rainfall try to trigger that response. He described weather modification as a "science developed around the dream of being able to do something about the weather".

While his organization has been blamed previously with taking potential rainfall away from Minnesota areas faced with drought conditions, this is the first time it has been accused of creating too much rainfall in another area. He said that writers and others who are critical of weather modification attempts and spread speculative stories about possible effects are generally not fully knowledgeable in meteorology or climatology.

He said that the North Dakota program was originated in an attempt to reduce hail storms which during the period from 1948 to 1960 had caused a 12.71 per cent crop loss in southwestern North Dakota. Cloud seeding with silver iodide has been done every year since 1961, he said, and from 1966 to 1978 the hail loss in the southwestern area of the state has averaged 7.93 per cent.

He noted that cloud seeding success is based on production of rainfall increases of only .04 to .05 inch on a rainy day. The seeding of clouds by airplane is directed at specific cycles in specific cloud formations, he said. The effort is to provide a nucleus to collect water droplets in sufficient quantity to become heavy enough to fall as precipitation. Successful efforts will provide results within three hours' time, he said, with downwind exposure of an estimated 90 miles.

Since the cloud seeding in North Dakota is confined to the area primarily west of Devils Lake, rainfall from that seeding reaching into northwestern Minnesota is virtually an impossibility.

Rose said that the weather modification program in North Dakota uses about 650 to 700 pounds of silver iodide a season. He said the program has been considered economically feasible and is financed 60 per cent by the participating counties and 40 per cent by the state. A new seeding agent incorporating salt crystals around silver iodide will be used extensively this year to speed up the process creating droplets of rain.

If all the rainfall from selected clouds fell on the target area, he said, the silver iodide would amount to about one-thousandth of an ounce per acre. He pointed out that weather modofication efforts through cloud seeding serve only to initiate an action sooner than nature would provide it.

Rose said research is constantly being conducted to monitor rainfall and that work on downwind studies has been underway since 1976. Much of the research is done by outside scientists from the University of Oklahoma, Colorado state university, University of North Dakota and North Dakota state university.

He also said, in response to a question of jurisdiction, that North Dakota and other states practicing weather modification claim the right to water that exists above the state.

joyment of other property in the immediate vicinity for the purposes already permitted, nor substantially diminish and impair property values within the neighborhood.

3. The establishment of the special use will not impede the normal and orderly development and improvement of surrounding property for uses permitted in the district.

4. Adequate utilities, access roads, drainage and necessary facilities have been or will be provided.

5. Adequate measures have been or will be taken to provide ingress or egress so designed as to minimize traffic congestion in the public streets.

6. The special use shall, in all other respects, conform to the applicable regulations of the district in which it is located.

7. The planning commission may recommend, and the council may stipulate such conditions and restrictions upon the establishment, location, construction, maintenance and operation of the special use as deemed necessary for the protection of the public interest and to secure compliance with the requrements specified in this chapter.

Attorney Karen K. Braaten, who represented Shea Nurseries, reiterated Wurst's opinion, adding that delaying a council decision was costing the Sheas money, since they had already ordered stock, which she described as perishable. She suggested that unnecessary delay could result in legal action against the city to recover losses. Braaten further advised that the Sheas had met previous requests of the council for site plans and drainage studies.

City building inspector Bob Bregler, Fire Chief Dave Bjorkman, City Planner Jack Quinlivan and Engineer David Kildahl testified that those plans met requirements for building permits and fire codes.

Referring to allusions which had been previously made regarding the accountability of Shea Nurseries, Braaten noted that the firm had been in the same location in Grand Forks for 10 years, suggesting that their expansion to five cities did not indicate that they were a "fly by night" operation. She further noted that the partnership, which consists of Tim and Darlene Shea and Roger and Marge Zahl, would have five full-time employees for the two months that the Thief River Falls branch is open. Property for the business is being leased from Ev Ault of Thief River Falls, for a percentage of the profits.

Noting that the council was concerned for the protection of its existing businesses, Mayor Bob Carlson commented that they were "backed into a legal corner." However, when the unpopular vote had been cast and the permit had been approved, 5 to 1, Carlson cast his vote against the special use. Alderman Ken Murphy cast the other no vote.

PARTICIPANTS in the discussion on weather modification Tuesday morning at the Thief River Falls city auditorium included Darryl L. Anderson (left), assistant commissioner of the Minnesota department of agriculture, and Dr. Cedric A. Grainger, director of atmospheric research in the center for aerospace sciences at the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks. The meeting with the meteorological experts was arranged due to concern by area farmers that cloud seeding in neighboring states may contribute to excessive rainfall in this area in recent years. The experts refuted that contention.

MAY BASKETS containing flowers created from egg cartons and construction paper were filled by Thief River Falls nursery school students Elizabeth Odette (left) and Erica Owen. The nursery school is located in the former Knox elementary school building.

Watch Out For Divers Sunday In Beach Area

Volunteers from the Northwest SCUBA Divers club of Thief River Falls will be cleaning the river bottom in the vicinity of the public beach at Bill LaFave park, starting at about 12:30 p.m. Sunday.

About six divers are expected to be in the water removing debris such as cans and bottles which could be hazardous to waders and swimmers.

Club members note that the area will be marked with flags warning that divers are present, and ask that boaters use extra caution and avoid operating in the area while they are working.

The first states to have equal pay legislation for women were Michigan and Montana, in 1919, according to "Labor Firsts in America," a publication of the U.S. Department of Labor.

Protection Of Groundwater Is WMB Objective

Over three years ago the waste management board conducted a series of public meetings around the state in which citizens were asked to suggest criteria for the siting hazardous waste management facilities. Protection of groundwater was, by far, the criterion most often cited.

On April 25, the waste management board, along with other state agencies and various health associations, co-sponsored a conference dealing with the relationship between waste disposal and groundwater contamination. Entitled "Groundwater and Waste Disposal: What's the Health Connection?," the conference featured presentations by state and federal officials specializing in the fields of health and waste management. They discussed how improperly managed wastes have contaminated groundwater and the impacts such contamination can have on human health.

Some of the points made at the conference were:

— Although waste management techniques have improved in Minnesota in recent years — advancing from rodent-infested open burning dumps to the use of sanitary landfills — most of the more than 100 sanitary landfills now operating in the state are leaking contaminants that could affect groundwater resources. Therefore, there is a pressing need to utilize alternative waste management methods, such as "waste-to-energy" incinerators, composting and recycling.

— Toxic chemicals can enter the human body through ingestion, inhalation or through the skin. Scientists divide the effects of such chemicals into two categories: acute effects resulting from single, concentrated exposures and chronic effects caused by long-term, low dose exposures. Acute effects are much easier to study and measure.

The long-term or chronic health effects resulting from exposure to contaminants in groundwater are extremely difficult to quantify, and there is little information available on this. This is especially true for persons who have been exposed to contamination from waste disposal sites because many different types of chemicals could be ausing health problems.

— Analyses of problem waste sites around the nation have indicated that waste solvents may be causing most of the groundwater contamination. However, in the rural Midwest, groundwater contamination is generally due to the application of nitrates over large areas of soil.

— In general, when calculating the costs for production of chemically-based products, American companies have not factored proper management of wastes into product prices. This is one reason why our country has a history of poor waste management.

— In proposing environmental regulations and other standards related to the public health, government officials must often rely on "risk assessments" that analyze potential health effects in terms of probability. Most people, however, have difficulty understanding risk assessments because we, as a society, prefer clear answers to health questions and do not like to deal with uncertainties or probabilities.

— Although there are no risk-free solutions, our waste management practices could be greatly improved and the potential for groundwater contamination vastly reduced.

For further information on the recent conference on waste disposal and groundwater contamination, write to the Waste Management Board at: 7323 58th Ave. No., Crystal, MN 55428; or call (612) 536-0816, (toll-free) 1-800-652-9747.

$500 SCHOLARSHIP was the pleasant surprise received by Lori Dusek (left) at the Lincoln high school senior awards banquet Monday evening in the school cafeteria. The scholarship was presented by Helen Anderson, representing the Lincoln high school class of 1972, which donated funds for the award. Lori's selection was made by the class' committee from among 20 applicants for potential selection. She plans to attend Moorhead state university.

Corporations Are Ready To Act If Unit Tax Spreads

Four out of every 10 of the largest corporations in the country have indicated that they have taken or are considering taking action — including relocating to other states — if states they are operating in move to impose or have imposed unitary taxation on their worldwide income, according to a just-released survey.

The survey of chief executive officers of the country's 1000 largest industrial and service companies, revealed that corporate taxes at the state level increased dramatically since 1980, primarily due to tax rate increases and unitary taxation.

The survey was sponsored by the international accounting and consulting firm of Arthur Young and the Washington, D.C.-based council of state chambers of commerce, as part of an effort to provide state legislatures and others with the corporate perspective on the controversial worldwide unitary tax issue.

Meanwhile, a presidential commission under Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan and including the chairmen of Exxon, Ford and IBM met May 1 in Washington in a continuing attempt to resolve what is fast becoming a critical issue.

The survey revealed that 46 per cent of the companies reported an increase in pretax profits from 1980 to 1982. However, many companies experienced higher tax rates despite lower profits with over half (55 per cent) of the companies reporting that their effective state corporate tax rate increased during the same time period.

Among the companies reporting an increase in their effective state corporate tax rate, the rise was substantial. Almost one-third (32 per cent) of the companies indicated that their effective corporate tax increased by over 15 per cent from 1980 to 1982. Further, over a quarter (26 per cent) of these companies reported that the increase was primarily due to unitary tax.

According to Robert E. Matson, director of state and local tax services for Arthur Young, much of the corporate tax increase coincides with the Reagan administration's new federalism policy, in which states must bear a greater burden for local spending programs.

Since 1982, for the first time since World War II, federal aid to the states fell. Meanwhile, state expenditures exceeded revenues by $2 billion in 1982 and jumped to $4.2 billion in 1983.

"There is tremendous pressure being put on states to shore up their eroding revenue base," Matson said.

Furor over worldwide unitary taxation heated up last December when the U.S. supreme court let stand an earlier ruling allowing states to treat each company and its foreign subsidiaries as one "unitary" or worldwide company when calculating its taxable income. Corporate opponents of the worldwide unitary tax method argue that it is unfair and penalizes out-of-state profitable activities.

"No state should have the right to tax activities related to interstate commerce," said one corporate respondent.

Still another CEO angrily replied, "The unitary method of taxation encourages older industrialized states not to control their costs. It encourages them to raise revenue by taxing extraterritorial values."

Another respondent said, "I believe now is the time when the business community has to take a stance. . . Where do you go to feel safe?"

According to the survey, dramatic increases in the effective corporate tax rate were most frequently reported in California (40 per cent), Illinois (29 per cent), New York (22 per cent), Massachusetts (18 per cent), Minnesota (16 per cent) and Florida (15 per cent). Of these states, California and Massachusetts are vigorous proponents of the worldwide unitary taxation method, while Florida has recently voted to adopt it; Illinois and Minnesota utilize domestic unitary taxation.

To date, 11 states have adopted either domestic or worldwide unitary taxation and legislatures in other states are expected to consider bills this year to implement some form of unitary tax. According to one Florida legislator after the method was adopted, "It was like finding money in the street."

But, according to Arthur Young's Matson, the survey indicates that state efforts to compensate for reduced federal aid through imposition of worldwide unitary taxation appears to be backfiring with companies saying that they will take severe action to minimize its impact. Copies of the survey findings have been distributed to the presidential commission studying the issue.

Thirty-eight per cent of the companies reported that they have taken or are considering taking action as a result of changes in unitary taxation. Of these, 34 per cent said they would relocate to another state, while 41 per cent said they would move to alter their corporate structure to minimize inter-company operations. Other responses indicated some companies would opt for a divestiture of various subsidiary divisions.

"No matter how you slice it, if these companies are taken at their word, their action could result in significant economic disruptions in states which are actively applying worldwide unitary taxation," Matson observed.

Farmers Join Stangeland In Ag Testimony

Farmers in counties hit by three or more years of natural disasters need more than the traditional federal farm programs to get back on their feet. That is the message a key House subcommittee heard from Congressman Arlan Stangeland and other Minnesota farmers at a Washington hearing Tuesday.

"These are hard-working families who pursued solid management practices but are now in trouble through no fault of their own," Congressman Stangeland told the House subcommittee on conservation, credit and rural development.

That subcommittee was hearing public testimony on H.R. 4610, a bill authored by Congressman Stangeland to consolidate up to $500,000 of farm debt for farmers in counties hit by three or more years of natural disaster. The loans would be at five per cent interest, and farmers could qualify for up to five years of deferral on repayment.

Farmers in counties adjoining the perennial disaster areas could qualify for the same relief on a case-by-case basis.

"The $500,000 limit would prevent this from being a bail-out bill for land speculators," Congressman Stangeland said.

Persuasive testimony was given by Minnesota farmers Willard Brunelle of Crookston, Bruce Elseth of Newfolden, Jim Noyes of Erskine and Russ Iverson of Middle River.

Speaking for the chamber of commerce from Thief River Falls, Cecil Anderson noted that farm disasters also destroy jobs and investment in rural towns. Marvin Zutz, a farmer from Red Lake Falls, also testified for the Minnesota Wheat Growers association.

Congressman Ed Jones (D-TN), chairman of the subcommittee that controls all legislation affecting farm credit, was impressed by the presentation. Other subcommittee members who heard the testimony included Reps. Jimweaver (D-OR), Berkley Bedell (D-IA), Glenn English (D-OK), Charlie Stenholm (D-TX), Robin Tallon (D-SC), Richard Durbin (D-IL), Joe Skeen (R-NM), Sid Morrison (R-WA), and Steve Gunderson (R-WI). Congressmen Lindsay Thomas (D-GA) and Bob McEwen (R-OH) also attended the hearing.

Congressman Stangeland asked Chairman Jones and the subcommittee to work with him in expediting action on this legislation.

Fumigant Use Restricted To Non-EDB Type

Farmers and other grain managers are cautioned by the Minnesota department of agriculture to be aware of and observe all restrictions regarding the use of grain fumigants, including the federal suspension of all grain fumigants containing EDB (Ethylene Dibromide).

"Since Feb. 3, 1984, when the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) ordered immediate suspension of EDB fumigants for use to eliminate insects in grain, it has been illegal for anyone to sell or to use this type of grain fumigant.

"Sale or use of an EDB fumigant on grain can result in enforcement action by the Minnesota department of agriculture against the responsible party. This action may hinder the movement or sale of grain illegally fumigated," Commissioner Jim Nichols warned.

He pointed out that there are supplies of approved grain fumigant products that do not contain EDB available from regulated farm chemical dealers.

Farmers and other grain managers are requested to inspect their current inventories of grain fumigants to determine whether any of these list Ethylene Dibromide or EDB as an active ingredient. Any such fumigant found must be isolated from potential use, and the supplier of that product contacted for recall instructions.

Any grain handler not able to return EDB fumigants found in inventory should contact the Agronomy Division, Minnesota Department of Agriculture, 90 West Plato Boulevard, St. Paul, MN 55107. Telephone number is (612) 296-8547.

Commissioner Nichols also cautioned all grain fumigant users to read and follow exactly the label instructions for proper and legal applications of the respective products. All fumigants, like all pesticides are hazardous because their purpose is to kill a selective target. The only safe and legal way to use any pesticide is to apply only as the label specifies.

Police Dog At Greenbush Shot

Shooting a highly-trained German Shepherd which has aided in criminal investigations and missing person searches throughout a wide area of Minnesota has resulted in the appearance of four young men in Roseau county court Tuesday.

"Brutus", a five-year-old dog owned by Tom Wachsmuth, police chief at Greenbush, was stolen from the Wachsmuth yard Saturday and found on Sunday. The animal had been taken about six miles southwest of Greenbush, tied to a tree with a wire, shot with a high caliber rifle and stuffed into a culvert.

The animal had been used a number of times by Pennington county and Thief River Falls law enforcement officers, primarily in tracking of missing persons and in drug investigations. "Brutus" was instrumental in the arrest of a man who committed an armed robbery at Riverside Grocery several years ago, tracking the suspect from the store to the door of his house.

Making a first appearance in Roseau county court Tuesday were William Arnold Pederson, 22, Northland, CO; Jonathan Joseph Jenson, 21, Kevin Joseph Foldesi, 22 and Clay Allan Stephens, 22, all of Greenbush.

Pederson and Jensen were charged with felony theft, aggravated criminal damage to property, and aiding the abetting theft. Bond was set at $10,000 for each person. Foldesi was charged with aiding and abetting theft and criminal damage to property and bond was set at $7,500. Stephens was charged with aiding and abetting aggravated criminal damage to property and bond was set at $750, according to the Roseau county law enforcement center.

Chief Wachsmuth, who has been police chief at Greenbush for the past year and a half after serving as a Roseau county sheriff's deputy since 1976, said "Brutus" was valued at $6,000. He and the dog had attended a 16-week training school for investigative canines. He said the dog was quite aggressive to strangers when they first returned from the school, but that he had worked with the animal over the past few years to assure that it was friendly to everyone.

"I'm sure that he probably played with and licked the people who stole him all the way out to where he was killed," Wachsmuth told the Times in a telephone interview. "He had become a very friendly animal unless I wanted him to be otherwise. That training to be friendly apparently contributed to his death."

In addition to tracking and drug detection, Wachsmuth said the dog had been trained in a number of other areas of law enforcement assistance. He also said that the shooting of the dog apparently was in retaliation for a traffic citation he had issued to one of the defendants last week.

The four men have been scheduled to make their first appearance in Roseau county district court on May 15.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

The article on the City Council meeting of April 24, 1984, which appeared on the front page of the Thief River Falls Times, Wednesday, April 25, 1984, alarms me very much.

First, "resident business people" amounted to one party that owns and operates two businesses within the city. Other parties represented large "chain stores" and the party quoted in the paper's article does not even live within the city limits. There are not seven or eight nurseries in Thief River Falls. When the party was questioned later and asked to name the seven or eight, the word nurseries was denied and flower shops was meant.

Second, zoning of the location was not a problem as the headlines insinuate. A special use permit, unless voided by previous laws, codes and regulations is a formality which needn't turn into a three ring circus. Council did not listen closely and hear that five jobs would be filled by local people ready to start working on May 1; a manager, two full time and two part time employees.

Third, Council's remarks were rude and insulting and the reporting is certainly biased. My understanding of the journalism profession was that both sides were to be fairly represented and if economic growth and competition is to be stifled in Thief River Falls, then it is time to call in the proper agencies for this is truly "The Last Frontier."

State Senator — District I

Over the next few weeks in my column I will be presenting a wrap-up and review of the major issues covered by the Minnesota Senate during the recently completed 1984 legislative session.

This week I would like to concentrate on the major tax relief bill approved by the legislature, an action that will provide over $500 million in major tax relief to the state's farmers, homeowners and businesses statewide over the next three years.

The 1984 legislative session will be remembered as the year the state turned an inherited $1 billion deficit from 1982 into a projected $900 million reserve by 1985; sent back over $500 million in major tax relief and economic development incentives to taxpayers and the state economy, and preserved the integrity of the state's budget in the process.

The key accomplishment of the legislature was its ability to maintain the fiscal integrity of the state by balancing its budget and returning over $359 in tax relief this year, $117 million next year and guarding against future economic pitfalls by adding $125 million to the state's reserve fund.

Some of the major items included in the 1984 tax bill were:

— The January 1, 1984 retroactive repeal of the 10 per cent surtax ($335 million);

— $73.3 million in immediate property tax relief to farmers, homeowners and businesses;

— $8.05 million in sales tax and $171.2 million in other relief in FY 1985;

— For the next biennium, $22.8 million in income tax relief, $48.3 million in property tax cuts, $25.2 million in sales tax relief and $11.3 million in miscellaneous costs;

— Assorted other tax improvements made: Political contribution credit; conservation tillage credit; farm loss modification adjustments and increases in the tuition deductions for elementary and secondary schools;

— $22 million in taconite tax relief;

— Major property tax relief changes include: Raising the $2,000 cap on ag mill credits from $2,000 to $4,000; increasing the credit available on the first 640 acres of homestead, the first 320 acres of non-homestead and seasonal and recreational properties;

— Targeting tax relief to property owners experiencing 1984 tax increases over 20 per cent;

— Returning the split classification system to its pre-1983 basis;

— Reducing the commercial-industrial assessment ratio on the first $60,000 to 28 per cent;

— Returning $3.3 million in lost local government aids to local units;

— Making the wetlands credit eligible, and — Dropping the sales tax on new industrial equipment from six per cent to four per cent.

In general, the most significant accomplishments of the 1984 session were our ability to turn a $1 billion state budget deficit two years ago into a $900 million surplus, and the fact that we will be returning the vast majority of this projected funding back to the taxpayers of Minnesota over the next three years.

Over 70 per cent of the predicted state surplus beyond the budget reserve will be returned to taxpayers, with the income tax surcharge ($325 million) and property tax relief ($72 million over three years) becoming the highlights of this tax cut package. It is hoped that the good economic news we have been receiving will continue into the 1985 session and that we will again be able to make further tax relief available to our farmers, homeowners and small businesses.

State's Crop Inventories Down April 1

Crop inventories on Minnesota farms this April 1 were down by 45 per cent from the level of a year ago and the lowest for that spring date in seven years, according to agriculture commissioner Jim Nichols.

Inventory comparisons also revealed that the first quarter 1984 disappearance of grain and oilseeds from Minnesota farm storage was the lowest in five years. But total disappearance for the quarter was second high to the record crop movement of a year ago, indicating heavy marketings by the commercial traders.

The estimated 250.1 million bushels of January-March shrinkage in farm crop inventories represented an estimated $717.4 million in gross market value; but Commissioner Nichols pointed out that farmers received far less cash than that because much of the corn was fed to livestock for production of meat, milk and eggs.

With the national carryover of grain and oilseeds also at a long-time low due to the 1983 acreage reduction and severe drought, Commissioner Nichols said that Minnesota farmers currently hold a strong marketing position on crops that won't be replaced until the late summer and fall harvests.

Minnesota's total carryover in farm and in commercial storage positions on April 1 was estimated at more than 699 million bushels of corn, soybeans, wheat, barley and oats. This placed Minnesota third highest in the nation behind only Iowa and Nebraska, and accounted for more than 17 per cent of the U.S. oats and barley carryover, nearly 13 per cent of the corn and soybeans, and more than five per cent of the wheat.

At first quarter 1984 average Minnesota market prices, the farm-stored inventory of the five crops had an estimated gross value of $1.66 billion.

But, Commissioner Nichols pointed out, that valuation was almost $746 million short, or 31 per cent below the year ago carryover valued at more than $2.4 billion.

Nurses Week Being Noted May 6 to 12

May 6 is National Nurses' day, and in Minnesota Minnesota nurses week is being observed May 6-12. To mark this event, registered nurses from throughout the country are meeting with organizations to talk about the nursing profession.

In Minnesota Nurses' association District I, nurses will meet at Toupin's Chalet in Warren May 10 at 7:30 p.m. for a dinner and any interested nurses are welcome to attend.

Carmelle Pinsonneault of Warren is president of District I of the Minnesota Nurses' association, which belongs to the American Nurses' association, nursing's national professional association. There are 165,000 nurses who belong to this organization.

"Perhaps you feel that you know and understand the nursing profession," Mrs. Pinsonneault said. "I imagine you have friends or family members who are nurses. You have received nursing care, perhaps during a hospital stay or during a visit to a community clinic. I imagine that these experiences and acquaintances with nurses form the basis of your knowledge about nursing. If I am right, your knowledge about nursing, although generally accurate, is incomplete. I would like to fill in some gaps for you."

She points out that registered nurses have completed a basic nursing education program and passed a licensing examination which allows them to practice nursing in this state. Beyond this many specialize in different fields such as administration, coronary care, intensive care, advance cardio-life support, teaching and supervising, obstetrics, nursery, gynecology, psychiatry, podiatry, gerontology, urology, medicine and surgery. Some have obtained degrees outside of the nursing profession.

In order to maintain a nursing license, registered nurses continue education through a series of professional programs each year. In addition to hospitals and nursing homes, nurses work in industry, schools and the community.

Mrs. Pinsonneault said the public should also equate nurses with politics. "My colleagues and I feel that we have a responsibility to become more active in politics," she said. "We are committed to giving our patients the best possible care at prices they can afford and in settings that cause the least disruption of their lives. However, we cannot fully meet this commitment without working with those who establish our national health programs like Medicare and Medicaid."

Legislature Had Money, Not Time

Special To The Times
by Jim Robins
Northern Star News Service

Legislators had the pleasant task during the 1984 legislative session of deciding what to do with nearly a billion dollars of unexpected revenue flowing into government coffers over the two-year budget period.

That made some decisions rather painless, however, the session didn't run as smoothly this year as leaders had hoped it would.

Even year sessions, following years when most of the big money decisions are made, run shorter. This year, leaders were aiming for a very short session starting a couple months later than usual and running only six weeks.

The compressed schedule caused an end of session logjam, forcing weary legislators into long floor sessions, resulting in the session running a couple days longer than expected.

Legislative leaders admit the short session experiment didn't work out very well because the legislature wanted to get as much done as usual but there wasn't enough time to do it.

Taxes

Early in the session, the tax question appeared likely to split the legislature. House DFLers and IRs, facing re-election in the fall, pushed hard for repeal of the income tax surcharge retroactive to the beginning of the year. At first, Gov. Rudy Perpich and DFL senators questioned whether there would be enough money available.

Perpich proposed mid-year surcharge repeal coupled with a lower business tax. Business leaders indicated they weren't all that impressed with the gesture.

The question became moot when new revenue projections indicated an even faster growing surplus. Just about everyone got behind the retroactive repeal proposal which eliminates the 10 per cent personal income tax surcharge in 1984.

After property tax statements were mailed, a cry for property tax relief went out. Agricultural property owners were particularly vocal and the bill includes about $15 million in agricultural property tax relief, most of it coming in 1985.

Relief in 1984 will go to some of the state's largest farms. The tax bill raises the $2,000 camp on agricultural credit to $4,000, requiring refiguring of tax statements for farms above the $2,000 cap.

Although many legislators had hoped to see more property tax relief in the bill, it was the kind of legislation filled with enough tax relief that few lawmakers were willing to vote no.

Education

Much of the same logic applies to the education bill where the vote was nearly unanimous. However, there was considerable disagreement over some fine-tuning questions.

The top question came on the level of state aids reducing the equalized mill levy for education. It was generally agreed that the 24 mill rate had to be reduced because it was a temporary move away from the "Minnesota miracle" that had shifted school funding from local property taxes to state revenues.

Many legislators pushed for reductions of two to four mills, which would have brought the levy down to 22 or 20 mills. DFL leaders appeared willing to accept a 23 mill level, however the final bill set is at 23.5 — only a half mill reduction.

Perpich asked that school funding be set at $1,550 per pupil unit, up from the current $1,475. Many legislators indicated a willingness to go higher, to as much as $1,650, to help counteract recent lean budget years. The final compromise set funding at $1,585, a 7.5 per cent increase.

The education bill includes extra money for advanced training of teachers and experienced staffs and helps fund summer school sessions which had come out of local taxes entirely.

Supplemental Appropriations

Some say the term 'supplemental appropriation' is too kind for this type of bill and prefer to call it a Christmas tree or garbage bill. It's the product of the end of the session rush and contains all the work that probably would have gotten legislative approval if there had been more time to consider the various proposals.

Although not many of its provisions are controversial, despite its price tag approaching $200 million, the idea of a super bill hammered out by a conference of only 10 legislators caused a lot of criticism.

The bill is larger than usual although it is typical of session-ending legislation designed to tie up loose ends. With the extremely short session this year, there were more loose ends. The big bill had difficulty passing, getting a 69-58 vote in the House and 36-30 in the Senate.

Sen. LeRoy Stumpf of Plummer and Rep. Wally Sparby of Thief River Falls both voted yes.

Livestock Weighing

The livestock weighing law has been an item of legislative concern. The law mandated that stockyards handling 500 units a day or more use state weighers. Critics of the law questioned the arbitrary 500 unit figure and some questioned the need for state involvement.

Others noted that state weighers assure an independent weighing at a cost that has remained stable in recent years.

The new livestock weighing law, which was included in the supplemental appropriations bill, seems to have support from both sides.

Yards with state weighers will continue to have them, while others are eligible to bring in state weighers if they wish. Currently, the state weighers pay for themselves through the fees they collect. If the cost increases, the new law calls for state funds to make up the difference.

Unemployment Compensation

No action on unemployment compensation translates into problems for Minnesota businesses. The legislature failed to take action this year and state employers will be hit with $360 million in additional federal taxes and penalties through 1988.

The compromise that fell apart would have added $274 million in state taxes, while reducing benefit increases by $69 million.

DFLers tried to force some IR support for the bill and failed, then could not muster enough votes among their own members in the House to pass the bill. It failed 62-70 in the House, after passing 35-31 in the Senate.

Sen. Stumpf voted no and Rep. Sparby voted yes.

When the state passes new laws mandating changes and taking away powers from local governments, there is often a cry against the loss of local control. Although the state retains ultimate authority, many legislators, particularly conservatives, feel the state has taken away too many powers they believe would be best handled locally.

This year roles were reversed with liberals fighting to stop bills curbing local authority over gun control and rent control.

Gun Control

Minneapolis and St. Paul have ordinances that are stricter than state law controlling guns. A bill proposing uniformity and easing the stricter local laws passed the legislature. Proponents claimed that without uniformity, people would have to know local gun laws when they travel in the state.

Opponents feel that higher crime potential in urban areas merits the flexibility of different approaches in different parts of the state.

The House passed the bill 79-40, while the Senate favored it by 47-15. The suspense didn't end there, though, as Gov. Perpich had a difficult time deciding what to do with the bill. He vetoed it.

Sen. Stumpf and Rep. Sparby both voted yes.

Rent Control

An effort to ban local rent control ordinances passed the legislature in 1983, but was vetoed by Gov. Perpich who said the will of the people, through a referendum, should prevail.

This year the proposal allows localities to pass rent control at the general election, but does not allow local councils to pass rent control on their own which had been the law until now.

Critics of rent control claim it hurts both landlords and renters by creating an artificial scarcity of rental units.

This year the governor signed the bill after it passed in the Senate 35-17 and the House 111-12.

Sen. Stumpf and Rep. Sparby both voted yes.

Court Unification

The argument over unifying the state's courts goes back more than a decade and it appears that it will go on for a few more years.

Proponents of unified trial court, presently split between county and district courts, say that the change would speed justice and make the system more efficient.

Opponents note that steps have been taken already and some districts are experimenting with unification on their own. The critics feel a unified court will result in lack of balance with rural counties losing judges and loss of local oversight making it almost impossible to remove judges from office.

Both chambers passed a unification bill, but the House version went much further and authors there called the Senate bill "less than half a loaf." The differences weren't resolved and the issue can be expected to come up again next year.

Sen. Stumpf and Rep. Sparby both voted yes.

Reducing the Legislature

Some people said lawmakers would never vote to reduce their numbers. Well, 1984 marked the first time the legislature got halfway there. The House passed, 93-38, a bill that would have reduced the House from 134 to 112 and the Senate from 68 to 56. The Senate did not act on the bill.

Those who favor the reduction point that Minnesota has the largest Senate and one of the largest legislatures overall. Opponents note that Minnesota is a large state geographically and fear that a smaller body would be more likely to become full-time.

Rep. Sparby voted no on the reduction bill.

Lottery

The governor and opinion polls said a lottery would be a good thing for Minnesota, raising revenue for the state and small retail businesses.

Opponents saw it differently, calling it immoral and claiming the voluntary tax would take the most money away from people who could least afford it. Other critics said pari-mutuel horse racing should be allowed to get on its feet first.

Proponents said give voters the right to decide, but the legislature was not prepared to say yes. In the Senate, the bill failed to pass on a 33-33 vote. Sen. Stumpf voted yes.

In the House, an effort to send the bill back to committee, killing it, passed 68-59. (Therefore, a yes vote is against the lottery, a no vote favors the proposal.) Rep. Sparby voted no.

21 Drinking Age

Although there was a lot of noise made before the 1984 session about a big push to raise the drinking age from 19 to 21, the proposal failed to get a vote in either full chamber.

Senator Explains Revised Program For Wheat, Corn

Senator Rudy Boschwitz' plan to give wheat farmers a second chance to sign up for the 1984 government program — and stave off potential record surpluses in the fall — was made official when President Reagan signed it into law during a White House ceremony.

The wheat plan was part of a longer bill that reassessed a number of agriculture program, including corn, cotton and rice.

"Chalk this one up to tenacity," Boschwitz said after the ceremony. "There were times when I really thought this wheat plan would not get off the dime, no matter how many meetings or negotiating sessions we had. I'm quite pleased we were able to put something together."

Farmers who want to participate in the revised 1984 wheat program may sign up for it through May 4. The USDA conducted an earlier signup for the 1984 wheat program from January 16 through March 16 nearly 240,000 farms — or more than half of total U.S. wheat base acreage — were signed up.

Signup for the revised program will continue to May 4 at county offices of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

Wheat producers who did not plan to sign up for the old program but would like to participate in the revised one may sign up for it.

Farmers who previously signed up for the 1984 program need not act unless they want to change their level of participation in the revised program. They may change their participation in both the wheat program and the payment-in-kind (PIK) program by notifying their county office of the ASCS.

Boschwitz was the main Republican author of the wheat provisions in the revised farm program. He participated for months in behind-the-scenes maneuvering in the Senate agriculture committee, of which he is a member.

The revised farm program improves the 1984 wheat program and establishes programs for both wheat and corn in 1985, Boschwitz said. The new law for the farm program also contains additional funding for export credits and for loans by the Farmers Home administration at terms more favorable to farmers.

"Farmers will have higher income because of the new farm program, and we will spend less on the program because of lower carryover stocks. Basically, farmers will gain far more for the paid diversion programs than they give up by foregoing a slight increase in the target price," Boschwitz said.

The revised wheat prolram, designed to curtail growing surpluses of the grain, contains the following provisions:

+ 1984 crop: $4.38 target price (down from $4.45); 10 per cent paid diversion with 50 per cent advance payment at time of signup; 20 per cent unpaid set aside; 10-20 per cent PIK with 85 per cent payment rate.

+ 1985 crop: $4.38 target price; 10 per cent paid diversion with 50 per cent advance payment at time of signup; not more than 20 per cent unpaid set aside; early July announcement in accordance with current law.

The revised farm program's provisions for corn are:

+ 1984 crop: No change in 1984 program.

+ 1985 crop: Freeze target price at $3.30; if carryover exceeds 1.1 billion bushels, total acreage cutbacks of 5-20 per cent (combination unpaid setaside and paid diversion) of which not less than five per cent is paid diversion and any reduction over 15 per cent to be equally proportioned between paid diversion and unpaid set aside; early September announcement in accordance with current law.

The USDA will not reopen signup for the 1984 feed grain program.

Winter wheat producers who are covered by federal crop insurance will not have to pay premiums on diverted acreage, and may benefit from higher yield guarantees.

John Block, secretary of agriculture, said the USDA's federal crop insurance corporation (FCIC) would accept revised acreage reports from winter wheat producers who had already filed their reports.

A producer, to be eligible for the increased yield, guarantees and reduced premium liability, must file a revised acreage report with the FCIC by May 8.

In addition, the revised report must designate acreage to be destroyed in order to comply with the new program. The farmer must give FCIC a notice of intention to destroy the acreage and must have received written consent from the agency.

A producer who fails to revise his acreage report will not receive consent from FCIC for insured acreage to be destroyed. The producer must care for the acreage until harvest to receive an indemnity.

Volunteers Aid Sports Programs

It was mentioned in The Times Monday that May 6-12 will be observed as National Volunteer Recognition Week across the United States. Words of praise and thanks were given to the many volunteer groups who provide time, talent and money to various programs within the Thief River Falls community.

It would seem appropriate, then, from our angle to give an added plug to the many volunteers involved in the Thief River Falls athletic programs.

Programs staffed almost entirely by volunteer workers like the Thief River Falls Amateur Hockey Association (TRFAHA) and the Thief River Falls Backcourt Club make it possible for the youth of our community to participate in hockey and basketball at the younger levels.

And an organization like the Thief River Falls Sports Boosters Club is a vital part of the athletic community with its numerous program-backing projects.

School District 564 budget cuts in recent years have necessitated additional volunteer efforts from individuals and groups to maintain the eight community-funded sports programs: swimming for boys and girls; cross country for boys and girls; golf for boys and girls; tennis for boys; and baseball. Withint the extra help with financing, those programs, which are not funded by the school, would be dropped.

It was explained in Monday's article that volunteer help comes from a variety of sources. Parents participate because they have children involved in the programs; others who have had children in the program previously continue to offer their help because they enjoy the work and realize the benefits the programs offer to the youngsters; and there are volunteers who work within the programs who have had no children involved, but offer to help simply because they also see the possitive aspects of the programs and wish to contribute their time.

And while youth sports programs can be used solely for recreational purposes, they obviously are needed as teaching tools if the community is expected to experience success athletically at the high school level.

Secret of earning a state tournament berth in any sport is the development of youth programs.

"You're only as good as your youth teams were," Detroit Lakes hockey coach Duane Earnest told Ralph Anderson of the Detroit Lakes Tribune in a recent series dealing with dreams of landing state tournament berths at the high school level.

"In order for us to be a state tournament contender at the high school level, we must have quality production at the Pee-Wee level," continued Earnest.

Numbers and quality of players are essential in producing top youth teams, and to insure those numbers, the volunteer help is needed in almost all areas of the programs — coaching, club officers and the general membership.

Several ingredients are required in a successful program, noted Earnest, including cooperation from parents, the players and the community. The parents must encourage their children to attend practices and games, and in many cases have to provide the transportation; the players must dedicate themselves to enjoying the sport and strive to become as good as they possibly can through extra work on their own; and the community must be supportive in what the programs are trying to achieve.

TRF Girls, Crookston Boys Are Quentin Jones Track Winners

Thief River Falls girls and Crookston boys were the team winners Tuesday at the 13th annual Quentin Jones Invitational high school track meet at Prowler Field.

Crookston boys collected 152 points under sunny, but windy and cool temperatures, followed by Thief River Falls with 94, East Grand Forks 74, Warren 73, Marshall County Central 57, Warroad 38 and Roseau 33.

Thief River Falls girls outscored runner-up Roseau 143-133, while East Grand Forks finished with 101 points, Warren 50, Warroad 43 and Marshall County Central 19.

It was the best outing of the 1984 season for the Prowlers in both the boys and girls competition. Coach Tom Schafer's girls won for the first time in six outings, bouncing back from a sub-par performance indoor at Crookston just last Friday. And it was the highest point total of the year for coach Tim Olson's boys.

"The girls put in a good effort," praised Schafer. "I knew it was going to be close, but I was hoping we would win. We had lost to East Grand Forks and Roseau indoors, so this has got to do a lot for our confidence."

"We're really satisfied," mentioned Olson. "We're very happy with out performances. I'm sure the kids were excited. It was a long day, but it was worth it."

Thief River Falls' depth beat Roseau's individual standouts in that two-team race among the girls. The Rams won eight of the 16 events to just three first place finishes for the Prowlers, who obviously scored their points with more overall places.

Roseau's Lisa Brateng was the meet's individual standout with a hand in four victories as she won the 100 and 200-meter dashes and also took the long jump while anchoring the Rams' winning 440-yard relay. Lynn Peterson was a double-event winner for the Rams in the shot and discus, while Ruth Grafstrom won the mile and Kelly Michael took the two-mile.

Sophomore Michelle Puetz had a hand in all three Thief River Falls wins as she ran a first place 1:04.87 in the 440-yard dash, and anchored both the 880 and mile relay teams. Tricia Armstrong, Vikki Weigand, Bobbi Thompson and Puetz ran the 880 in 1:59.2, with Stacie Kruta, Thompson, Cindy Kruta and Puetz running the mile in 4:30.3.

A portion of the meet was run in meters, used in Minnesota State High School League competition, but some of the races remained in yards.

Warren's Emily Anderson was a double-event winner in the 100 and 200-meter hurdles.

Thief River Falls trailed Roseau 75-67 midway through the meet, but took the lead 83-80 behind Puetz' win in the 440, then out-scored the Rams 34-8 in the next two events — the 200-meter hurdles and 880-yard run to take command.

While depth won it for the Thief River Falls girls, lack of it cost the boys. The Prowlers matched Crookston's five victories in the 17-event meet, but didn't have the numbers to keep pace with the Pirates.

Winning for the Prowlers were Randy Swenson, 16.75 in the 110-meter hurdles; Chris Helle, 10-6 in the pole vault; and Jeff Langan, 42.32 in the 300-meter intermediate hurdles, along with the sprint medley relay team of Tim Peterson, Scott Fowler, Dan Iverson and Kevin Kezar in 4:06.8; and the 44;-yard relay of Fowler, Langan, Kezar and Swenson in 3:44.70.

Crookston's Bruce Solheim was the only individual double-event winner as he took the 880 and mile runs.

Marshall County Central made an impressive showing in the sprints yesterday as Brett Hanson won the 100-meter dash, Brian Rud won the 200-meter dash and the Nordics' 440-yard relay team of Hanson, John Douglas, Kevin Boe and Rud won in a time of 47.21.

Teams return to Prowler Field next Tuesday for the Thief River Falls Invitational, a 4 p.m. meet for both boys and girls. But first the Thief River Falls boys will compete Friday at Grand Forks Red River and the girls will compete Saturday at Bemidji.

Prowlers Defeat Moorhead 4-2

Thief River Falls spotted Moorhead a 2-0 headstart Tuesday before the Prowlers rallied to beat the Spuds 4-2 in a key early season North Sub-Region 8AA high school baseball game played on the fairgrounds diamond.

Brian (Scott) Johnston scattered seven hits in a strong pitching performance for the winners, and the Prowlers milked just three hits for all they were worth in beating the Spuds for the third time in the past five years.

Thief River Falls' victory came just one day after Moorhead routed Bemidji 16-6 in another important early season North Sub-Region 8AA showdown where the leaders are already jockying for post-season seeding positions.

Bemidji, scheduled to visit Thief River Falls Friday for a 4:30 p.m. game, jumped out to a 5-0 lead at Moorhead Monday, but then surrendered 15 runs in the bottom of the second inning when the Spuds batted around twice, collecting 11 hits and seven walks off three Bemidji pitchers. Winning pitcher Tim Hill was 3-for-3 in the inning with two triples.

Yesterday, though, it was the Spuds who were unable to hold onto a lead. They scored twice in the top of the third when Don Gnadt had a lead-off double and Dean Atichson, the Spuds' No. 9 hitter, came through with an RBI single. Vance Zuehlsdorf replaced Atichson on the bases with a fielder's choice play and scored on back-to-back singles by Brad Steffan and Darrin Kramer.

Thief River Falls tied it 2-2 in the bottom of the fourth after the first two batters had been retired. Tim Bottem ignited the come-back with a home run over the right field fence. Johnston then drilled a shot off Moorhead pitcher John Ussatis that was ruled an error. Todd Ortloff singled to center field and an error on a ball hit by Joe Blankenfeld scored pinch runner Steve Solheim.

Winning runs were scored in the sixth when Ryan Drees led off by reaching base on an error. Walks issued to Bottem and Ortloff loaded the bases with one out and Blankenfeld singled to right-center for one run. Ryan Bakke was a strike-out victim while fouling off two attempted suicide squeeze bunts with Bottem at third, and after Gary Cornell took two called strikes, Bottem broke for the plate and came up with a successful steal of home that gave the Prowlers a two-run cushion.

"We played a good ball game," reported Thief River Falls coach Charlie Cornell. "We deserved to win. It was a big win for us. Hopefully it'll give us the confidence we need."

It was just the second game of the weather-plagued 1984 season for the Prowlers, who rallied for a 4-3 victory over Red Lake Falls in their season opener back on April 19. The Prowlers were scheduled to host Middle River-Marshall County Central today (Wednesday) in a 4 p.m. make-up game before taking on Bemidji.

It was the first loss in three games for Moorhead, with the Spuds falling to 2-1 in the North Sub-Region 8AA standings. They beat Fergus Falls 6-5 earlier. Bemidji lost for the first time in five games Monday against Moorhead, dropping to 1-1 in North Sub-Region 8AA after earlier beating Park Rapids 13-4. In the only other North Sub-Region 8AA game to date, Detroit Lakes defeated Park Rapids 9-3.

Moorhead doubled Thief River Falls 14-7 in junior varsity play Tuesday.

Golfers Win Title At RLF

Led by senior Jim Geatz' medalist effort, Thief River Falls won its first invitational tournament title of the 1984 high school golf season Tuesday in an eight-team field at Red Lake Falls.

Thief River Falls shot a four-man 326 to edge East Grand Forks by one stroke. Last Friday the Prowlers were second, six shots behind Fosston, in the 14-team Fergus Falls Invitational. They were fourth in a field of 18 at Bagley in their 1984 season opener April 24.

After East Grand Forks' 327 yesterday came Hallock with a 344, Warren 347, Stephen 359, Red Lake Falls 362, Clearbrook-Gonvick 368 and Norman County West 385.

Geatz won medalist honors with a 77 on rounds of 39-38. Bob Geatz (39-42) and Bob Breiland (41-40) both came in at 81 for the Prowlers, while Eric Charlson (44-43) had an 87; Jim Breiland (47-42) 89; and Dan Upham (46-47) 93. Bob Geatz was medalist at Fergus Falls.

Coach Jack Boyer's Prowlers will golf Friday at 9:30 a.m. at Park Rapids.

A SUCCESSFUL baton exchange was completed between Thief River Falls teammates Scott Fowler (right) and Dan Iverson to start the third leg of the Prowlers' winning sprint medley relay team during the boys' portion of Tuesday's Quentin Jones Invitational high school track meet held here. Crookston boys won the team trophy with a 152-94 victory margin over runner-up Thief River Falls.

Crookston Wins TRF Title Monday

Cold weather shortened Monday's Thief River Falls Invitational from 18 to 9 holes, but the high school golf meet for girls was completed nevertheless, with Crookston emerging as champion in the eight-team field.

Shooting a four-player 227, the Pirates finished five strokes ahead of both Roseau and Mahnomen, who shared second at 232. East Grand Forks came in at 244, Thief River Falls 252, Fosston 269, Thief River Falls junior varsity 326 and Bagley 327.

Meet medalist was Sara Huglen of Roseau with a 51. Nancy Bywater of Crookston and Barb Brunsdale of Mahnomen both came in at 53.

For the Prowlers, Kathy Reuter shot a 59, Michelle Olson and Kari Jorde each had a 63, Cindy Kain 67, Kirsten Pollick 70 and Gayle Borchert 77.

Thief River Falls will golf Thursday at Fosston at 10 a.m. and Monday at Roseau at 9 a.m.

Falls Clinic Races Will Be Held Saturday

Final preparations are being made for the first Falls Clinic-sponsored 10-kilometer (6.1-mile) race and 2-mile Fun Run, scheduled to be held Saturday beginning at 9 a.m.

Both races will begin at the main clinic entrance at First Street, loop through the city and return to finish behind (south side) of the hospital.

Special race T-shirts will be given to everyone completing either race. Trophies will be awarded to the first place male and female finisher in four age categories: 19-and-under; 20-29; 30-39; and 40-and-over.

Entry fee is $2. Entry forms are available at the Falls Clinic, Northwestern Hospital and TG Sporting Goods. Entries will be accepted until starting time, but early sign-up is encouraged to help in race planning.

Traffic control and participant safety will be provided by city police and volunteers along the course. Soft drinks, fruit and yogurt will be provided at the finish line.

Race director Dr. Jim Langland explains that regular exercise has been shown to lead to a reduced heart attack rate, lower cholesterol levels, lower blood sugar content, lower blood pressure, improved sleep patterns and reduced stress. The motto, "Health In The Long Run," has been chosen to reflect those benefits.

DNR NEWS

Mille Lacs Regulations

Fishing on Mille Lacs lake will be prohibited between the hours of 10 p.m. and 6 a.m. from May 14 through June 10, the Department of Natural Resources reminded anglers recently.

Fishing season opens Saturday, May 12, so opening weekend anglers will be able to night fish if they so desire.

Under another special Mille Lacs fishing regulation, northern pike may not be taken until July 24. Elsewhere, the northern pike season on inland waters opens with the walleye season on May 12.

Night fishing ban is designed to enhance the walleye population in Mille Lacs by reducing the catch rate.

It is hoped that reducing the take of northern pike will result in a greater number of trophy northerns available for anglers.

Camping Reservations

Camping reservation system for state parks initiated in 1981 has been so well received by the public that it will be expanded again for the 1984 camping season, the Department of Natural Resources announced.

Fourteen state parks will be participating in the system this summer, said Davidson, DNR Director of State Parks.

Each of the 14 parks will allow up to 50 per cent of its campsites to be reserved. Reservations are made by telephone or in person and will be taken only at the park for which the reservation is requested.

A campsite may be reserved for one or more nights, although anyone wishing to reserve a site for a Friday or Saturday night must reserve for both nights.

Campsites may be reserved for a minimum of one night (except Friday or Saturday nights) and for a maximum of fourteen nights, from Memorial Day weekend through Labor Day.

Beginning May 10, park personnel at the 14 parks will take reservations from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. Reservations may be made no earlier than 15 days and no later than 24 hours prior to the arrival date.

A reservation will be held until 8 p.m. of the day of arrival. To hold a reservation past 8 p.m., visitors must call within 24 hours prior to arrival. If a visitor arrives after 8 p.m. and has not been granted an extension of time as stated, the campsite may have been rented on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Only one campsite (the location of which is at the discretion of the park manager) can be reserved by a camping party. A reservation fee of $3 (not refundable) is charged and is paid upon arrival along with appropriate camping fee.

Initial telephone call will be the only confirmation of a reservation. No written confirmations will be sent.

Cancellations should be made by calling the park at which the reservation was made.

Reservations can be made at the following parks:

Father Hennepin State Park, 612-676-8763; Gooseberry Falls State Park, 218-834-3787; Jay Cooke State Park, 218-384-4610; Itasca State Park, 218-266-3655; Lake Bemidji State Park, 218-751-1472; Lake Carlos State Park, 612-852-7200; St. Croix State Park, 612-384-6657; Sibley State Park, 612-354-2055; Whitewater State Park, 507-932-3007; Wild River State Park, 612-583-2125; William O'Brien State Park, 612-433-2421; Crow Wing State Park, 218-829-8022; Helmer Myre State Park, 507-373-5084; and Savanna Portage State Park, 218-426-3271.

Officials emphasized that this reservation system does not start until Thursday, May 10, at 8 a.m. Telephone reservations will be taken only Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Rain Gauge Program

For the seventh consecutive year, state agencies will be cooperating in a program to record precipitation on a daily basis in most of Minnesota's 87 counties.

Soil and Water Conservation Board, Soil and Water Conservation Districts and the Department of Natural Resources (State Climatology Office, Division of Waters) have been striving to establish rain gauge stations at 12 mile intervals across the state.

Gauges are set up at the corner of alternate townships to provide a systematic gathering of valuable information for government agencies and individuals concerned with agriculture, flood warnings, soil erosion, and the planning, engineering and design of structures, ditches and tile systems.

Information gathered from the SWCD rain gauge observers is funneled to the State Climatology Office where it is processed and computerized. Information based on the date is distributed to each county or Soil and Water Conservation District.

DNR Guidelines Cover State's Wetland Areas

Contractors who work in protected waters or wetlands within the state must notify the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) before the work is started.

Requirement was included in amendments to Minnesota's water laws passed by the legislature in 1982.

Protected waters and wetlands are shown on DNR water inventory maps that have been filed with county auditors. Contractors, owners of waterfront property, the general public and enforcement officials can therefore identify which water bodies are covered by the law.

A "Contractor's Permit Verification Form," requested by the Land Improvement Contractors Association, has been developed under the legislation. The form is available from county auditor's offices, DNR regional offices and contractor associations.

Officials caution any contractor planning to work in or near protected waters to file this form with the DNR and avoid violating state law.

National Wildlife Federation News Release

Washington, D.C. gets more snow than Antarctica, says the National Wildlife Federation's "Ranger Rick" magazine. Antarctica's average annual snowfall is only five inches. But because of the area's frigid temperature, the snow doesn't melt. Instead, it piles on top of the previous year's snow, forming a thick ice cap.

Fifty per cent of Americans depend on underground water for their drinking water, says the National Wildlife Federation. Yet no legislation specifically protects groundwater from contamination.

Water contamination has been a worry for many centuries, says "National Wildlife" magazine. Historians believe that Rome's last emperors were poisoned by lead linings in water pipes and wine jugs.

To prevent getting separated during a flood, some ants on the North American prairie cling together, forming a big ball, says National Wildlife's Ranger Rick magazine. The ball becomes a floating raft that constantly tumbles, giving each ant a turn to breathe. Amazingly, few ants drown.

Barbary apes may help the British retain their hold on the Rock of Gibraltar, according to International Wildlife magazine. If the apes ever leave, tradition says, so will the British. Ever respectful of tradition, the English maintain a steady population of apes on "the Rock" by transporting them there from North Africa.

Ants are always out scouting for food. No matter where you drop food, sooner or later an ant is likely to come across it. When an ant discovers food, it gets excited. As it scurries back to its nest, it leaves behind a chemical trail. When it gets back to the nest, other ants smell the trail and follow it to the food. Once these new ants reach the food, they get excited too. So on their way back to the nest, they also leave chemical trails. Soon many ants are hurrying along the trail to the food. In no time, your candy is covered with hungry ants, reports Ranger Rick magazine.

Some kinds of ants raid the nests of other ants and carry the larvae and cocoons back to their own colonies. These captured ants grow up to work in their new colony as slaves, explained the National Wildlife Federation.

Grant Received For Bald Eagle Research Study

Outlook for the endangered bald eagle improved further recently when the Du Pont Company awarded a second grant for research and captive breeding of bald eagles at the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's Patuxent Wildlife Research Center. The grant is for $30,000. This is the second year in a row that Du Pont has contributed to the eagle project.

At a ceremony in Washington, D.C., Secretary William Clark presented Du Pont Executive Vice President Robert C. Forney with a "Service Citizen's Award" in recognition of the company's support of the eagle recovery program.

"Du Pont's support has enabled the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to significantly expand the number of young eagles produced in captivity and released into the wild," Clark said. "Their contributions have been substantive, meaningful, and an extraordinary example of conservation leadership from our major private corporations."

"Du Pont is proud to be part of this unique cooperative effort to restore the nation's bald eagle population," Dr. Forney said. "The government's eagle propagation program is an excellent example of the numerous public and private sector initiatives dedicated to preserving our nation's wildlife heritage for future generations."

First Du Pont grant of $50,000 in 1983 enabled a doubling of bald eagle research and propagation activities at the Patuxent Wildlife Research Center, the site of the world's largest captive bald eagle breeding colony. Since last year, the colony has been increased from 8 to 15 pairs of birds with the potential to supply as many as 30 eaglets annually for release to the wild in states where eagle populations remain low.

Since the Patuxent breeding program began in the mid-1970's, more than 50 healthy eaglets have been returned to the wild to replenish eagle populations in nine states — New York, Virginia, Delaware, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maine, Georgia, Tennessee and Ohio.

Bald eagle is listed as an endangered or threatened species throughout the lower 48 states. Although the species has made a gradual comeback in recent years, bald eagles are slow to recolonize areas where their numbers were greatly reduced or eliminated. The captive breeding and release program focuses on speeding the eagle's recovery in such areas. This year, as a result of the grant, Patuxent scientists anticipate releasing 18 to 20 bald eagle chicks.

Du Pont grants are being used to modernize and refurbish bald eagle flight enclosures at Patuxent, to purchase additional equipment for incubation of eagle eggs, and to build additional brooders for hand-rearing of eaglets.

The 1984 grant by Du Pont and its subsidiaries, Conoco, Consolidation Coal and Remington Arms, also will support new and expanded research activities. These include experiments to conduct physiological studies, increase fertility by artificial insemination, and improve hatching by using bantam hens instead of incubators.

In addition to financial assistance, Du Pont will continue a variety of educational efforts to increase public awareness of the initiatives underway to replenish bald eagle populations throughout the county. The company has printed 100,000 copies of a 19-page eagle booklet for distribution by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service at national wildlife refuges.

About 5,000 to 6,000 bald eagles, including 1,450 to 1,500 breeding pairs, reside in the lower 48 states year-round. An estimated 30,000 bald eagles reside in Alaska year-round.

Plan Panels To Recommend On Water Quality

If agriculture is hurting water quality in Minnesota, most people would be willing to help pay for a solution to the problem. This is one of the results of a recent survey conducted by the center for new Democratic processes in cooperation with the Minnesota department of agriculture and 10 other agencies and organizations concerned about the issue.

Ned Crosby, director of the center, says this result is not surprising even at a time when there is a strong interest in cutting state taxes. "Our survey shows that 50 per cent of the public is willing to pay higher taxes to improve water quality. Also farmers are the most respected group in the state. That's why, if farming is hurting water quality, a clear majority of the public is prepared to help pay for a solution."

The survey was conducted in March of 1984, as part of a novel project which the center for new Democratic processes is conducting this year. The center will be randomly selecting a group of people who will serve on a "citizens panel" modeled after a jury. This "citizen panel" will study the issue of agriculture and water quality and objectively come up with recommendations about what should be done.

The survey showed that most Minnesotans are strongly committed to the maintenance of water quality. When asked how high a priority should be given this by the state legislature, 74 per cent answered "very high" or "high". This was not as high a percentage as that given education (91 per cent) or crime (86 per cent), but was condiderably higher than that given transportation (45 per cent) or recreation (25 per cent). Also 50 per cent agreed with the statement, "If it turns out that higher taxes are needed to improve water quality in Minnesota, then this is something we ought to do." There were 38 per cent who disagreed with this statement, while the rest are unsure.

The high regard in which farmers are held can be seen by the answers to several questions. Those surveyed were read a list of nine occupations and asked how much they admire the people who work in them. Farmers led all others on the list as being admired "a great deal", with doctors coming in second. Most Minnesotans (72 per cent) feel that farmers work harder than the average person. Half the public (49 per cent) believes that farmers do not earn a fair return on their labor and investment while only 31 per cent believe they do (20 per cent are unsure).

Purpose of the survey was to help the center select those who will serve on the "citizens panels". Of those surveyed, 17 per cent said they "probably" would be interested in serving on a panel which would study the issue of agriculture and water quality and 37 per cent said they might be interested. The project will start with five local panels of 12 persons each. These will be convened during the summer. Each will spend several days examining the nature of the problem and how important it is to do something about it. Representatives from these panels will meet in the fall to decide on the final recommendations.

Half of the participants on the citizens panels will be drawn from among those who were identified through the survey. The other half will be randomly selected from among those who attended seven informational meetings which were held around the state in January and February. The five local citizens panels to be held this summer will be in Fergus Falls, the metro area, Rochester, St. Cloud and Windom.

The theory behind this project, says Crosby, is that it is very hard to get citizen input to government which is both knowledgeable and representative. "Public opinion polls are representative, but people are asked to answer off the top of their heads. That's why polls have only a limited impact on public policy. Lobbying and letter writing can be knowledgeable, but rarely are they representative. Our aim is to help a representative group become knowledgeable so that policy makers can learn what the public as a whole might think if they had the opportunity to study an issue in depth."

The issue of agriculture and water quality was chosen because it is an area of growing concern. In 1979 the Minnesota pollution control agency identified agriculture as the major contributor to "non-point source" pollution of water. But the economic situation of farmers makes it difficult for them to take steps to correct this. Crosby notes that "when our major industry is causing water pollution in the land of ten thousand lakes, we've got a major problem. We think the citizens panels can come up with suggestions for dealing with this before the issue mushrooms into a major political conflict."

The above results were obtained from a survey of 623 Minnesotans which was done under the auspices of the center for new Democratic processes. The questions were designed and pretested by the center in consultation with Robert D. Coursen. The sample was drawn by using a set of randomly selected telephone numbers which were selected so as to accurately represent the population of each county in the state. This set of numbers was contributed to the center by the Minneapolis Star & Tribune. The survey itself was conducted using procedures designed to insure those interviewed were a good cross-section of the population of Minnesota.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Thief River Falls water utility announced today that the State maximum allowable limit for turbidity in drinking water is being exceeded.

Turbidity is caused by the presence of finely suspended particles such as clay, sand or organic matter in the water. Turbidity can be a problem if it interferes with chlorine disinfection. However, the high turbidity levels do not create any health hazard because the water utility is able to maintain effective levels of chlorine for disinfection.

The Thief River Falls water utility staff is working closely with State Health Department officials to reduce the turbidity to acceptable levels.

Any citizen seeking additional information should contact Allen Lanes at the Water Plant, phone number 681-3809.

Hazardous Waste Reduction And Reprocessing Being Considered

"Instead of disposing of hazardous wastes, we should cut back on the quantities of waste we generate. And, we could incinerate the reprocess most of the wastes currently going to landfills."

For years, citizens involved in the waste Management Board's hazardous waste planning and siting programs have expressed views such as those above, urging the board to devote its efforts to developing alternatives to the disposal of hazardous waste.

Now, following extensive public debate and completion of many detailed studies on Minnesota's hazardous waste problem, specific programs developed by the board to reduce the state's dependence on the disposal of hazardous wastes are being considered by the 1984 legislature.

Several programs recommended by the board in its draft hazardous waste management plan — which places top priority on reduction, recycling, treatment and incineration of hazardous wastes — are included in legislation proposed by Rep. Dee Long (DFL-Minneapolis) and Sen. Gene Merriam (DFL-Coon Rapids). Long and Merriam are, respectively, chairperson and vice chairperson of the legislative commission on waste management (LCWM), which is comprised of five members each from the state House of Representatives and Senate. The commission helped draft the legislation and gave it unanimous approval just prior to the start of the session in early March.

"Commission members hope to get programs recommended in the draft plan started soon," said Sue Robertson, LCWM director. "This would include the waste reduction programs and efforts to get treatment and recycling facilities up and running."

The programs proposed for enactment funding this session total $1.4 million and include:

+ A $300,000 technical and research assistance program fir forms that generate hazardous wastes. The program would provide information on hazardous waste reduction processes as well as methods to improve overall waste management by industry through in-plant consultations, training sessions, seminars and workshops. The program would also include a cataloguing service that would compile and disseminate information on waste reduction techniques, available hazardous waste facilities, hazardous waste consulting firms and regulations.

The program, which would be supervised by the board but administered by various public and private agencies, would concentrate on helping smaller businesses lacking the resources and expertise to achieve waste reduction and improved waste management.

+ A $300,000 grant program, to be administered by the board, in which individual firms could apply for funds to conduct feasibility studies on specific waste reduction processes. Grants would be awarded to those projects offering the greatest potential for hazardous waste reduction, or which would significantly contribute to protection of the environment and public health. Information obtained from the feasibility studies would be made available to other interested businesses through the technical and research assistance program.

+ A program in which the board would request detailed proposals from firms interested in developing and operating hazardous waste treatment facilities and incinerators. Companies proposing to construct such facilities would have to demonstrate their experience and qualifications and provide specific details about the planned facility, including: costs and revenues, types and quantities of wastes to be managed, means of disposing waste residues, facility site requirements and availability, and a schedule for facility construction.

In accepting proposals, the board would provide information to developers about the "preferred" industrial areas for processing facilities it designated in or near 20 Minnesota cities in September, 1983. The board would also encourage potential facility constructors to make use of new state grant and loan programs proposed in the bill.

+ In another grant program, the board would award up to $50,000 to companies proposing to study the feasibility of building and operating commercial hazardous waste processing facilities in Minnesota. Such facilities could include transfer and storage centers, treatment plants and incinerators. Grant money could be used by potential facility developers to conduct market surveys, carry out financial planning, perform environmental studies, or draft preliminary facility designs.

Companies or individuals receiving grants under this program would be required to provide at least 50 per cent of a study's cost, unless two or more Minnesota firms that generate hazardous wastes form an association to conduct a study. In that case, the association would need to contribute only 20 per cent toward the study. A total of $650,000 has been requested for this program.

+ A state loan program, to be administered by the department of energy and economic development using funds obtained through the sale of industrial revenue bonds, would help private sector developers finance construction of commercial hazardous waste processing facilities.

Loan proposals would first be reviewed by the board. In order to receive a loan, developers would have to demonstrate the "technical and economic feasibility" of proposed facilities and contribute at least 25 per cent of the construction costs themselves.

+ A program in which the board would award a $350,000 grant for construction of a statewide system of collection and transportation services designed to serve small businesses in shipping hazardous wastes to facilities for proper management. The grant recipient would be required to begin collection and transportation service by July 1, 1985.

+ A $25,000 public education program to be designed and conducted by the Minnesota environmental education board on solutions to the hazardous waste problem.

Several changes in the board's process to establish a hazardous waste disposal facility are also proposed in the same bill.

Foremost among the proposals is the removal of the legal mandate that the board "provide for the establishment of at least one disposal facility." While the board would still be required to select at least one site for a facility, it could under the bill decide to delay or forego the actual construction of a facility.

The bill would also give the board the option of carrying out an environmental impact statement (EIS) on less than the four "candidate" sites currently under consideration. The board would, however, still be required to evaluate at least two sites.

Following the selection of a final site, the board would decide whether to proceed with construction of the facility based on the results of the EIS as well as two reports that it would be required to complete under the proposed legislation:

+ An "Estimate of Need" that would further analyze the types and quantities of hazardous waste expected to be generated in Minnesota through the end of this century, with particular attention to the amounts of waste residuals resulting from treatment and incineration facilities that might be constructed in the state. The report would also assess prospects for continued reliance on disposal facilities in other states by investigating current and planned capacity at such facilities.

+ A study on the "economic feasibility" of a disposal facility in Minnesota, which would estimate the fees necessary to make a facility economically viable for operation by a private developer. This study would identify potential facility users and determine the market conditions and state subsidy — should one be needed — required to financially support a disposal facility in the state.

"Based on testimony received at the January 16 public hearing on the board's draft hazardous waste management plan, and testimony heard by the commission itself, commission members proposed to remove the requirement for a disposal facility and have the board perform the estimate of need and economic feasibility study," Robertson explained.

"There are many legitimate questions as to the economic feasibility of a disposal facility in Minnesota and whether a state subsidy might be needed. We've got much more information on the hazardous waste problem now, and commission members think it's time to consider some factors that were not dealt with in the draft plan and certificate of need. It's time to absorb and expand upon the information we have before a final determination on the need for a disposal facility is made," she added.

To Train a Child

Mommy, I love you.
I'm glad I'm alive.
It's fun to run and play and laugh and dance.
It's hard to stand still and listen.
Mommy, I love you.
Thank you for taking care of me. Thank you for cookies and milk and bread.
Please give me a dime for Sunday School. I like Sunday School. We sing and laugh and learn about God.
Mommy, I love you.

And so on and on she prattles in her own innocent and naive way. Soon, however, her questions will become more complex and her parents will need all the love and wisdom they can obtain.

Fortunately, we as parents are not alone in this endeavor. The Church stands ready and anxious to help us train our children. Through worship, study and meditation we can learn to know what God requires of us. Next week, attend the church or synagogue of your choice.

IT'S A FACT!

Most economists believe housing starts will be between 1.7 million and 1.85 million this year because of low inflation, a rise in productivity, lower energy prices and stronger consumer confidence.

America's household goods movers are therefore urging people who plan to move this year to schedule a moving date and contract with their professional mover as early as possible.

"We are expecting a banner year in 1984," said Charles C. Irions, president of the American Movers Conference, whose members handle more than 90 percent of the interstate moving business.

Services For Knutson

Many friends and relatives attended funeral services for Mrs. Ella Knutson at the Silver Creek Lutheran church Thursday afternoon, April 26. Ella passed away early Monday morning, April 23 at the age of 72 years, 3 months and 13 days. Ella suffered with arthritis since she was in grade school and it gradually became worse as she grew older. She was a hospital patient at different times and spent the past 14 years in the CNC unit of Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls. She was a joy to those who visited her, as well as those who cared for her, as she was always very pleasant and had a smile for everyone. Fifty years ago or so she lived with her parents on the farm now owned by Raymond Fuller and will be remembered by many in our community.

Fun-To-Make Snacks For Kids In The Kitchen

Boys and girls enjoy cooking almost as much as they enjoy eating. So you can count on smiles all around when you invite junior cooks to try their hand at the two do-it-yourself snacks featured here.

Both recipes were developed for microwave ovens in the Quaker Test Kitchens. And, fledgling chefs can easily make them at home. Health-conscious mothers will be pleased to note that the treats start with wholesome ingredients so they're nutritious as well as delicious.

Sure to satisfy after school appetites are Microwave Snack Bars. The honey-flavored oatmeal base is topped with two favorite kid flavors—chocolate and peanut butter. The base and topping are microwaved separately, then assembled in a baking dish and sprinkled with chopped peanuts.

For more tasty child's play, suggest to the youngsters that they make their own granola. Speedy Granola, made in just minutes in the microwave oven, gets its distinctive flavor from oats, unprocessed bran or oat bran cereal, peanuts, cinnamon and raisins. It's a treat sure to appeal to all ages as a cereal, snack or crunchy topping.

Youngsters will enjoy making and eating these delicious oatmeal chocolate-peanut butter snack bars.

MICROWAVE SNACK BARS

2 cups Quaker Oats (quick or old fashioned, uncooked)
⅓ cup firmly packed brown sugar
⅓ cup butter or margarine, softened
¼ cup honey
⅓ cup semi-sweet chocolate pieces
¼ cup peanut butter
¼ cup chopped peanuts

In large bowl, combine oats, sugar, butter and honey; mix well. Cook at HIGH 3½ to 4½ minutes or until bubbly and brown, stirring after each minute of cooking. Press mixture firmly onto bottom of 11x7-inch glass baking dish. In small glass bowl, combine chocolate and peanut butter. Cook at HIGH 1 minute; stirring after 30 seconds of cooking; mix well. Spread over oats mixture; sprinkle with nuts. Chill 15 minutes; cut into bars. Chill until firm. Store in tightly covered container in refrigerator. Makes 11x7-inch dish of bars.

SPEEDY GRANOLA

2½ cups Quaker Oats (quick or old fashioned, uncooked)
½ cup coarsely chopped peanuts
⅓ cup honey
¼ cup butter or margarine, melted
¼ cup Quaker Unprocessed Bran or Oat Bran Cereal
1¼ teaspoons cinnamon
½ cup raisins

In large bowl, combine all ingredients except raisins; mix well. Cook at HIGH 3 minutes; mix well. Continue cooking at HIGH 3 to 4 minutes or until light golden brown, stirring after each minute of cooking. Stir in raisins. Spread onto ungreased cookie sheet or aluminum foil; cool thoroughly. Store in tightly covered container in refrigerator. Serve as a cereal with milk, as a snack, or as a crunchy topping over fruit, yogurt or ice cream. Makes about 4 cups.

"Cancer Answers" is a weekly column sponsored by the Red River Valley Medical society, the Red River Valley unit of the American Cancer society and the Thief River Falls Times. Questions may be mailed to the editor, Thief River Falls Times. All questions will be answered, and those of a general interest will be published in "Cancer Answers."

Q: There's been a lot of news lately about how people should watch what they eat and quit smoking to prevent cancer. What about being exposed to dust and chemicals where you work? A person can't quit their job to prevent cancer.

A: The National Cancer Institute estimates only four per cent of cancers are caused by exposure to chemicals, dust or radiation in the workplace. Of the hundreds of chemicals, substances and processes used in industry, eighteen agents have been proven to cause cancer in humans.

Regulatory agencies, industries and organized labor have developed health and safety measures to help protect workers from exposure to harmful substances. Workers can help protect themselves by knowing and following health and safety rules. If protective clothing or equipment (masks, respirators, coveralls, gloves) are recommended or required for a job, workers should wear them.

Q: I've read something about some new cancer treatment called chemoprevention. Is this a new kind of chemotherapy?

A: No. Chermotherapy is using chemicals or drugs to treat cancer. Chemoprevention is a new concept medical scientists are working on using chemicals to try to prevent cancers from forming.

Scientists have been studying certain substances that seem to stop cancers from forming in laboratory cell cultures and animals. Some of these substances are found in foods we eat. Others have been produced synthetically in laboratories.

At this time very little is known about why some chemicals don't allow cancer cells to grow. The National Cancer Institute and the American Cancer Society are supporting research in chemoprevention.

It may be possible in the future to treat people who are at high risk for developing cancer to stop the disease before it starts. People who have been exposed to cancer-causing chemicals, smokers and people whose families are prone to certain types of cancer may be helped with some form of chemoprevention.

Q: I read in a magazine that eating too many fatty foods can increase a person's risk for getting cancer. Can you give some advice on how to eat less fat without going on a special diet?

A: Most people think of butter, margarine, cooking oils and meats as the main sources of fats in foods. But many other foods contain fats like milk, cheese, nuts and peanut butter. Fats account for about 40 per cent of all calories the average American eats. The NAS panel recommends cutting that amount by about one-fourth.

Since it's dificult to visualize what it means to cut the amount of fat we eat by one-fourth, here are some suggestions for simple substitutions. These suggestions are based on a fairly typical adult daily diet of about 2,000 calories.

—If you usually drink two glasses of whole milk each day, you could cut your fat consumption by one-fourth just be switching to skim milk.

—A four-ounce serving of hamburger contains one-fourth of an average day's fat. Four ounces of haddock or cod has only one-third as much fat.

—An average serving of french fries could contain as much as one-half of the fat you normally eat in a day. By substituting boiled or baked potatoes seasoned without butter or sour cream, you could eliminate the fat.

—Most vegetables seasoned without butter contain no fat.

—Be careful with salad dressings. Two tablespoons of blue cheese dressing, for instance, contain enough fat to account for one-fourth of an average day's amount.

—Cream soups contain a lot of fat, but broths and vegetable soups including tomato and pea are low in fat.

Use these suggestions to make some simple substitutions and modifications in the foods you eat, and you can easily cut one-fourth of the fat from your diet.

Q: At what age are people most likely to get cancer?

A: In general cancer is a disease of people over 50. However the age for greatest risk varies with different types of cancer.

Here are the general high risk ages for some of the most common types of cancer: Lung, 50-64; colon and rectum, over 40; breast, 40 or older; prostate, over 55; bladder, 50-70; uterus, 50-64.

Of course these and other types of cancer can occur at any age. Regular physical examination following a schedule your doctor advises is the best way to anticipate the risk of cancer.

Q: I've read that men should examine themselves for signs of cancer of the testicles. What are the signs? How do you do the exam? If a man is treated for testicular cancer, does he become impotent?

A: It is important that men examine themselves for changes in their testicles. It's especially important for young men from high school age to 45. Testicular cancer is one of the few types of cancer more common in young people than in older people.

Testicular self-examination is a simple procedure that should be done once a month. The best time is after a warm shower or bath when the scrotal skin is most relaxed. Each testicle should be examined gently with the fingers of both hands. Place the index and middle fingers on the under side of the testicle and the thumb on the top. Gently roll the testicle between thumb and fingers feeling for a small, firm lump.

Other changes or abnormalities to be alert for include: change in size or shape, unusual warmth and a heavy sensation.

If a man finds any of these changes, he should be examined by his family physician or a urologist. Although these symptoms frequently are caused by conditions others than cancer, early detection and treatment are very important for controlling testicular cancer.

Caught and treated right away, this type of cancer is curable in 95 per cent of cases.

If cancer is found in a testicle, it must be surgically removed. Some lymph nodes in the groin may also be removed to determine if the cancer has spread. In some cases radiation therapy and or chemotherapy are necessary to control the cancer.

The loss of one testicle does not make a man impotent.

The Cancer Information Service has free brochures that illustrate and explain testicular self-examination. You can call the CIS toll-free number, 1-800-4-CANCER.

Q: Our 18-year-old son chews tobacco. He says it's safe because it can't cause lung cancer. Is he right?

A: While it's true that chewing tobacco and snuff can't cause lung cancer, they're not safe. Like other forms of tobacco, chewing tobacco and snuff contain substances that are known to cause cancer in animals and are likely to cause it in humans. Smokeless tobaccos actually contain higher concentrations of some of these substances than smoking tobaccos.

Chemicals in chewing tobacco and snuff are absorbed through mucous membranes lining the mouth, throat and nose. People who use these forms of tobacco have an increased risk for developing cancers of the mouth, throat, larynx (voice box) and esophagus. Researchers believe these risks are greater for people who also drink alcoholic beverages regularly.

Q: My husband's brother has cancer of the colon. Is my husband likely to get it too? What precautions should he take?

A: A person whose parent, brother or sister has had colon cancer does have a greater risk of developing this disease than someone with no family history of colon cancer. That doesn't mean that your husband is "likely to get it," only that his risk is greater than average.

When colon cancer is found and treated early before it has spread, it can be surgically removed and cured in 85-90 per cent of cases. That's why regular colon examinations are important for your husband and for everyone over 40. Your husband should tell his doctor about his brother's cancer. The doctor will recommend a checkup schedule.

There are some warning signs or symptoms that can mean a person may have colon cancer. These symptoms can also be caused by other conditions or diseases, but they should never be ignored. These are the signs your husband should be aware of.

—Bleeding from the rectum or blood in the bowel movement.

—Loss of weight when there's been no change in eating habits or activity.

—Diarrhea or constipation that lasts for more than two weeks.

—Frequent abdominal discomfort, cramping or pain.

—Loss of appetite or nausea that lasts for more than two weeks.

Q: I'm confused about oncogenes. What are they? Do they cause cancer or prevent it?

A: It's not surprising that you find information about oncogenes confusing. The genetic research which led to the discovery of oncogenes is very complex and nearly impossible to describe in nonscientific terms.

Oncogenes are normal, essential genes which all mammals, including humans, have as part of their normal genetic material. They probably play important roles in regulating all growth and reproduction, either in the fetal stage or in mature cells.

Occasionally, however, these genes are transformed by some damaging exposure to a carcinogen (cancer causing agent) such as radiation or cigarette smoke. They begin to function either at the wrong time or in the wrong way. In the first case, the oncogene might be one which directs the rapid, but remarkably ordered growth that occurs during development of the fetus. Once that job is done, the gene is turned off. If something causes that gene to be reactivated later in life, it produces copies of itself in an unnecessary and uncontrolled manner. Or the oncogene might be one which regulates mature cell growth and begins to send out the wrong message.

In either case, the geme programs the cell to disregard all the rules and divide wildly. The result is cancer.

The answer to your last question is that oncogenes neither cause nor prevent cancer. But by understanding how oncogenes work, researchers hope to be able to learn how cancers are caused and, ultimately, how to prevent them.

A Colossal Waste

Young people who are having their minds turn to mush because of abuse of drugs represent a colossal waste of human resources. As long as young people yield to peer pressure exerted by drug-abusing friends, the problem will continue to proliferate. Statistics indicate that the problem is already of proportions that are a national disgrace.

For instance, according to a brochure entitled "The Kinds of Drugs Kids are Getting Into," almost half of all male high school seniors and nearly 20 per cent of all ninth grade boys can be called "problem drinkers." The term means that they are repeatedly drunk, have problems with school authorities and difficulties with friends and the police.

The brochure mentioned is a new one prepared by an organization called Pharmacists Against Drug Abuse. It is available free for the asking at Ekeren Drug, Bruce Pharmacy and Thomas Drug in Thief River Falls.

The brochure points out that marijuana contains over 400 known chemicals, 61 of which are cannabinoids which affect the central nervous system. Use of marijuana interferes with immediate memory and intellectual performance and can impair concentration and reading comprehension. It also adversely affects the heart and lungs.

Use of cocaine has tripled in young adults in the past few years, despite the fact that the drug produces halucinations and mental disturbance, even convulsions and death. The "high" it produces is short-lived — a matter of minutes — and the low which follows is equally intense as the high.

Angel dust (PCP) use distorts reality, creates self-destructive behavior, leads to violence or other bizarre behavior.

The brochure explains how to recognize when a person is getting into drug use and notes that the only way to stop abusing drugs is to stop using them. We feel the pharmacists are providing a service of worthwhile nature by making the brochures available. Pick one up the next time you stop at the drug store.

Extracurriculars Boosted

Following editorial is from the Grand Rapids Herald-Review:

The image of the "dumb jock" as a stereotype of America's school athletes is as strong today as ever.

That is unfortunate.

For years those associated with athletics, particularly in America's high schools, have preached the gospel that extracurricular activities are an important part of developing the student both physically and emotionally. A recent study by the Minnesota State High School League bears out that fact.

The study of 305 of the league's 500 member schools found that high school athletes get better grades and have less absenteeism than students in general. On an average, athletes in grades 10, 11 and 12 compiled a grade point average of 2.84 (B-) compared to 2.68 (C+) for all students. Days absent for athletes averaged 7.44 for the school year while all students had an average of 8.76 days of absence.

When High School League surveyors looked at students involved in other extracurricular activities such as speech, debate, drama and music, the results were even more gratifying. The average grade point average of these students was 2.98 (nearly a B) while days absent averaged 6.94, better than both athletes and non-participatory students. Similar results were shown in a survey done in March in the Minneapolis School System.

"It certainly proved what we surmised," said Larry Larson, information officer for the league, referring to the report. Athletes and others in extracurricular programs are often exceptional students.

In these days when cost cutting measures are viewed as virtual necessities by the state's school districts, it has been easy to say extracurricular activities are an extravagance which should be trimmed if not curtailed. The study, however, would seem to indicate that such measures would directly affect many of the best students produced by our schools.

The question remains, however, whether such activities, by their nature, draw better students or if they help develop students into academic achievers. The answer probably lies somewhere in between.

Still, school boards and parents should study the issue carefully before considering lessening the number or quality of extracurricular activities offered to students in the future.

Embattled Farmers

Following editorial is from the Detroit Lakes Tribune:

Two-hundred nine years ago, a ragtag group of Minuteman clashed with the British at Lexington and Concord.

Historical records indicate that most of these American rebels were "embattled farmers" — men of agrarian roots who laid down their plowshares and picked up arms in protest against duties and taxes which they thought unjust. In fact, much of the controversy that triggered the revolution revolved around pure, cold economic issues.

Two centuries later, America still has its "embattled farmers." Monday's tractorcade at the local Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) office, abbreviated though it was, served to illuminate that fact.

Farmers are growing more restless by the minute. With spring planting due to get underway, many are economically strapped, waiting for operating capital.

Given the present pricing structure for commodities, their chances of operating profitably remain slim. Without target price payments or direct income payments, farmers' income levels will probably remain substandard.

Family owner-operated farms are in desperate need of aid. These people, whose roots are keep in our communities, are of vital importance to us all. We are intimately linked with our rural neighbors. Their money helps support our local businesses and industries. Large corporate-owned farms, on the other hand, are less likely to spend capital here, opting instead for cheaper bulk purchases elsewhere.

The actual purchasing power of the American farmer has drifted downward as the consumer price index has risen. Since 1950, our country has lost over 50 per cent of its farm families. Stories of bankruptcies and foreclosures are becoming all too common.

As more farmers lose their private property, freedom and human dignity will erode as well. Their backs against the wall, farmers have adopted a survivalist position. They push their soil and stretch their resources to the limit to produce more commodities in hopes of making ends meet.

Listen to the farmers. Many have become politically active, hoping to forge a link with the rest of the economic and social community. They do not want separate status.

If we do not work with farmers to solve their problems, we will be all the poorer for it.

Borrowed Nonsense:

The doctor was being very explicit in his instructions to the patient. "Now remember," he said. "You take the green pill with a glass of water as soon as you get up. You take the blue pill with a glass of water at noon. You take the red pill with a glass of water at suppertime. And you take the white pill with a glass of water at bedtime."

"Four different pills?" the patient gasped. "What in the world is the problem?"

"You don't drink enough water," the doctor replied.

The ferry was 15 feet from the dock when Lars completed his race down the dock and with a tremendous leap spanned the open chasm and crashed onto the deck of the boat.

"What an athletic move!" marveled one of the passengers.

"Perhaps," another allowed, "but not too bright. In a couple more seconds we would have been up to the dock."

---

The IRS office received a letter from an irate taxpayer: "I realize that it is a great privilege for me to pay taxes in the grestest nation in the world," he wrote, "but if taxes keep getting higher I'm going to have to give up that privilege."

---

Shopping for a mother's day gift, the little boy inspected a large selection of cookie jars, both inside and out. After he had replaced the last lid he turned to the clerk in disappointment. "Don't you have any," he asked, "where the covers don't make any noise?"

---

When six-year-old Nell complained of a stomachache, her mother said: "That's because your stomach is empty. You would feel much better if you had something in it." The youngster took the advice to heart. That afternoon when the pastor came to visit, he complained of having a headache all day. "Mommy says that's because it's empty," she said. "You'd feel better if you had something in it."

IRS's: An Equal Opportunity For All?

Individual Retirement Accounts (IRS's) were created to provide an attractive incentive to get people to save for their retirement. The operative word there is all: not everyone in this country who could use one is given an equal opportunity to contribute to an IRA.

When Congress wrote the IRA legislation, it forgot about that major segment of working women — those that choose to make their career in the home. This inequity needs to be changed.

Women who coose to work in the home currently are prohibited from contributing to an IRA at the same rate as women who have a job in the work place. She may only contribute up to $250 annually to an IRA compared to the $2,000 that can be placed in an IRA by a working spouse.

There is absolutely no justification to penalize those who choose to work in the home. Homemakers play an extremely important role in our soceity. The fact that the spouse has chosen to work in the home, raising children and providing a home for their families, is no reason to prevent that individual from an equal opportunity to save for the future. These women work as hard as anyone, and don't receive any direct compensation. They are clearly overlooked in many respects.

A second strong argument can be made that those who choose to be homemakers need to save for their future more than their counterparts in the work force. Workers who retire from career jobs in the work force most often have pensions and retirement incomes to provide for their needs in their later years. Unfortunately, the spouse at home does not enjoy such protection. Therefore the need to provide an opportunity and incentive to those individuals who work in the home is obvious.

I've been working with the Administration to try and come up with a plan to change the inequities of IRA's in a bill I introduced here in the Senate. The maximum contribution to a spousal IRA would be increased from $250 to $2,000, and alimony would count as earned income in determining eligibility for an IRA. This would be equal to the amount a working spouse may contribute to an IRA. So, together a working spouse and a spouse who works in the home may jointly contribute up to $4,000 annually.

This bill seems to be gaining momentum, which greatly improves the chances of it passing into law. Here in the Senate the Finance Committee has adopted a phase-in over 6 years for spousal IRA's as part of the Deficit Reduction Package. For the first two years the maximum annual contribution for a working individual and a non-working spouse who does not receive compensation would increase from the current $2,250 to $2,750. In the next two years it would increase to $3,250 and $3,750, and finally in 1991 it would go up to $4,000.

So, we are slowly working toward improvement of equity for women in this country. It's not easy to remove such long standing inequities, however, I think we are on the road to changing all that. I hope to see the spousal IRA legislation pass very soon so we can end the discrimination against women who work in the home.

Hints For Homeowners

HERE'S HOW: FROM START TO FINISH

Here are some hints that may help you get started as a do-it-yourself household painter.

The success of a painting job depends principally on the condition of the surface to be finished. Although you probably can't wait to start applying that new paint, you'll thank yourself for years to come, if you take the time to prepare the surface carefully first.

If the walls have heavy deposits of grease and grime or there's mildew or chalked paint, wash them down with a heavy duty cleaner like trisodium phosphate.

High gloss enamel and varnish finishes on woodwork, doors, kitchen and bathroom cabinets as well as walls and ceilings will benefit from a treatment with a prepaint bonder and cleaner that removes grease, oil and wax. Such pre-cleaning will ensure a secure bonding of the new finish.

Clean up after painting is easier than ever these days, thanks to water-rinsing brush cleaners that restore brushes to their natural softness.

Do-it-yourselfers, both experienced and newcomers, are finding all these jobs easier, thanks to the latest home upkeep products, such as those from Savogran, makers of Strypeeze*. They like their paint and varnish removers for jobs where stripping is indicated before refinishing, their cleaning and patching products for surface preparation jobs, and their products like Kwikeeze™, which ease brush cleaning chores. There are products that strip paints and varnishes, clean walls and woodwork, patch plaster and wood, remove wallpaper and grout ceramic tile. They even have a new product which will remove rust stains from concrete and porcelain.

They're all made to order for the do-it-yourselfer who wants to finish up the job with a "well done" feeling.

FACT: The fat in beef is only 47-49% saturated fatty acid; the balance is unsaturated, including significant amounts of polyunsaturated fatty acids.
MYTH: Beef contains more cholesterol than most other animal-source proteins.
FACT: A three-ounce cooked serving of beef contains just 73 milligrams of cholesterol. Other red and white meats and many common foods in our daily diet fall into the same range (70 to 100 mg.)
MYTH: Heart disease risk can be reduced by reducing intake of saturated fat and cholesterol.
FACT: The current scientific trend is away from thinking that reducing heart disease risk is a matter of cutting down on foods high in saturated fatty acids and cholesterol.
MYTH: Dietary cholesterol has a direct effect on blood cholesterol level.
FACT: In most persons, dietary cholesterol and blood cholesterol are not closely related. Heredity and weight are more important than diet (including dietary cholesterol) in determining cholesterol levels. ## Submarine Sandwiches With A Down East Twist

A hearty hero sandwich, made extra nutritious with Maine fish steaks.

Submarine sandwiches have long been a favorite for snacks or informal suppers with folks of all ages.

Here's a new twist that turns this hearty treat into an especially tasty and nutritious meal-in-a-dish. Economical Maine fish steaks, packed under the Port Clyde or Holmes labels, combine with a zesty Italian sauce for a marriage of memorable flavors.

Smart cooks know that they're giving their families an extra helping of vitamins, minerals and other good things when they include sardines and fish steaks on the menu.

HOT ITALIAN SUBS

1 green pepper
1 medium-sized onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1-1/3 cups Italian or homestyle tomato sauce
1/4 teaspoon oregano
dash of ground cloves
4 submarine or hero rolls
butter
3 cans Port Clyde or Holmes fish steaks

Halve pepper lengthwise, remove seeds and cut into strips. Heat oil in skillet, add green pepper, onion and one clove of garlic, finely chopped. Cook, stirring frequently, over low heat, for six to eight minutes. Stir in tomato sauce, oregano, cloves and salt and pepper to taste. Cover and simmer over low heat for 15 minutes.

Split rolls and spread lightly with butter. Toast under broiler. Cut remaining garlic clove in half and rub cut surface over toasted rolls. Place drained fish steaks on bottom halves of rolls. Spoon hot sauce over each, dividing evenly. Sprinkle with grated Parmesan or mozzarella cheese, if desired. Makes four sandwiches.

SBA Issues New And Simplified Size Standards

The U.S. small business administration issued new and simplified size standards that determine small business eligibility for the agency's assistance programs.

The revised standards describe a firm's maximum size and vary by industrial classifications. The new standards took effect March 12, but represent interim decisions for a handful of industries which rely heavily on federal procurement work.

The standards will boost eligibility by about 46,000 firms. The size determinations were described in a final rule order printed in the Federal Register.

"Our revised standards," SBA administrator James Sanders said, "have been the subject of lengthy consideration. Our final decisions, reached in consultation with many, many industry representatives, are fair. And they are simpler than before."

Under the new standards, one set of standards for each industry will apply to all SBA procurement and financial assistance programs. Previously, one size standard was used for procurement and different standards were used for financial programs. For manufacturing and wholesale industries, the standard will revolve around number of employees. For most other industries, the basic standard will be annual receipts.

Of significant benefit to those industries included in the annual receipts standard was SBA's decision to raise the level of that standard by about 81 per cent to adjust for inflation that was occurred since the last previous size standard adjustment was made in 1975.

The new standards that apply to "procurement sensitive industries" such as wholesalers, dredging, construction, architects, accounting, bookkeeping and engineering services may be revised following additional study.

"For such industries," Sanders said, "the revised standards represent interim instead of final rules. Discussions with these industries and with federal procurement officials will continue until the soundest and most equitable standards can be attained."

Major size standard rulings include:

— The 61 separate industries in wholesale trade all will have a size standard of 500 employees for both procurement and loans; the same standard that currently exists for procurement only.

— For construction, a lower increase than the full 81 per cent inflationary adjustment was adopted because of the competitive nature of this industry. For general construction, $17 million annual sales is the new limit. For special trade construction (such as painting or plumbing contractors), $7 million is the maximum.

— For engineering services, except for military and aerospace equipment or weapons, the current $7.5 million annual receipts standard is retained for the present. For marine engineering and naval architecture, the current standard of $9 million in annual receipts is retained.

— Accounting, auditing, and bookkeeping services will have a size standard of $4 million in annual receipts, for all activities.

— Because of very high inflation in petroleum prices, gasoline service stations and retail fuel oil dealers receive more than the overall inflation adjustment. The new standards are $4.5 million annual receipts for gasoline service stations and $6 million for fuel oil retailers.

— Base maintenance keeps its $13.5 million annual receipts standard. But facilities management (another component of Personnel Supply Services) must adhere to $3.5 million in annual receipts. This standard applies to most service industries.

— Similarly, agricultural services and forestry (but not logging or sawmills) are considered to be services and also fall under the basic services' standard of $3.5 million in annual receipts.

— Fishing, hunting, and trapping will have a size standard of $2 million in annual receipts instead of 25 employees.

— Two agricultural industries — nursery products and chicken eggs) will have special standards of $500,000 and $1,000,000 respectively in annual receipts.

— Dredging will have an interim standard of $9.5 million in annual receipts.

For small business procurement set-asides, the new size standards will apply to invitations to bids and requests for proposal issued on or after March 12, 1984. For financial assistance other than disaster assistance, the new size standards apply to loan applications dated March 12, 1984 or after. For disaster financial assistance, the new standards apply to disasters declared on or after March 12, 1984.

Additional information on specific standards by standard industrial classification is available by calling SBA's Size Standard Staff Office, 202-653-6373.

Do You Know This Man?

He is the legendary Rod Dedeaux—winningest coach in college baseball history with 1259 victories and 11 national championships at the University of Southern California.

He has coached the USC baseball team for the last 43 years and has sent more players to the major leagues than any other coach.

Dedeaux is a six-time American Baseball Coaches Association Coach of the Year, a two-time Sporting News Coach of the Year and an inductee into the College Baseball Coaches Hall of Fame.

Adding to his honors, this year Dedeaux was named the head coach for the USA Baseball Team by the United States Baseball Federation. Baseball will be an official demonstration sport at the 1984 Summer Olympic Games in Los Angeles.

"The competition is stiff," says Dedeaux. "But thanks to sponsorship by the Major Appliance Business Group of General Electric Company, it is financially possible for the USA team to have the kind of training necessary to 'bring home the gold' in '84."

Volume 73 (USPS 627-360) Thief River Falls, Pennington County, Minnesota Monday, May 7, 1984 Number 37

LONGEST PERIOD OF SERVICE recorded at the Thief River Falls post office was noted by Kenneth Muzzy when he retired last week as a rural mail carrier. With credit for four years of military service, he logged 42 years with the postal service here. A brief recognition ceremony was held Thursday morning at the post office before Kenny began his last rural run. A service award certificate and letter of appreciation from the postmaster general was presented by Richard McCloskey, postmaster. Muzzy served under postmasters McCloskey, Art Buringrud, Jim Dryden and Andy Anderson as well as several acting or temporary postmasters during his period of service.

Muzzy Retires As TRF Rural Carrier

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

Thursday afternoon Kenneth Muzzy completed his final run as a rural letter carrier on route five out of Thief River Falls, ending 42 years with the postal service which he refers to as "a love affair with my patrons." He is believed to have the most years of service of any retiree from the Thief River Falls post office.

"It's not quite as personal as it used to be," he notes about rural mail delivery. "I used to deliver a couple cans of snuff or a box of Jell-O or pick up 'a bottle of those pills' from the drug store. It probably wasn't in the regulations, but a person should be a little neighborly."

While rural mail carrying has been his favorite work, it hasn't been his total postal service life. He started as a substitute carrier for Ole Ose on route two in October of 1946, about a year after being discharged from the army where he served during World War II. He received credit on his record for four years of military service.

He moved into full-time work at the post office and for 15 years was either an employee in the office or a carrier on city routes. In 1966 he began as a regular carrier on route three, then moved to route two, and since 1972 has been the carrier on route five.

He had 250 boxholders on a 125-mile route at the time of his retirement, which was "a lot better than it was for awhile," he said. Before the routes were reorganized, he had 332 boxes on a 135-mile route, carrying six days a week. His present day at retirement ran from about 7:15 a.m. to 3 p.m.

In the time he has been carrying mail he has worn out a dozen or more vehicles. The last car registered 166,795 miles before a front wheel broke off its hanger from the frame. "I was able to drive it into town," Muzzy said, "but that told me it was about time to make another change."

In all the years and all the miles he has driven for the postal service, he has never had a chargeable traffic accident. "I've had a few close calls," he admits, but adds that he has become especially safety conscious on the road. "On those rural roads the traffic isn't all that controlled, and a lot of the drivers are more interested in their crops — or the neighbor's crops — or what they have to do than they are in other vehicles. It pays to be careful."

One time, however, a tie rod broke while he was traveling about 40 miles per hour and his car went off the road, through a ditch and up the opposite embankment. The mishap took place northeast of Thief River Falls, just a couple hundred yards before he turned east on the road along County Ditch 18 which was swollen with spring runoff water. "If that tie rod had

Stumpf Views '84 Legislature

Minnesota's 1984 legislature adjourned Tuesday, after it had "successfully approved major tax relief, passed a prudent spending bill which closely followed the earlier recommendation of the governor, and provided an additional budget reserve cushion to guard against potential economic problems in the future," according to Sen. LeRoy Stumpf of Plummer.

"This session will likely be remembered as the year the state provided substantial tax relief to all taxpayers, included further incentives to the state's economic recovery and financed education at improved levels to maintain education quality, while also helping relieve local property tax burdens," Stumpf added.

"We have achieved a number of key goals during the 73rd session of the Minnesota legislature," Stumpf said. "We have turned a $1 billion deficit barely two years ago into a $900 million predicted surplus by the end of this biennium; we have sent back over $500 million to taxpayers and set aside a reasonable budget reserve in order to preserve the fiscal integrity of the state's budget."

Late Thursday evening, the Senate approved a conference committee report containing over $359 million in direct tax relief to Minnesota taxpayers this year, to be followed by another $117 million in tax relief to be built into the next biennial budget (1985-87), he added. This bill included the Jan. 1, 1984 retroactive repeal of the 10 per cent income tax, along with $21.5 million in property tax relief to farmers, homeowners and small business for the rest of this biennium, and another $51.8 million to be earmarked for them in the next biennial budget.

The legislature also added $125 million into the state's reserve account; passed a $189 million capital bonding bill and approved a $198

Essay Contest Won By Solem And Borchert

Pennington soil and water conservation district representatives have announced the winners of a recently conducted conservation essay contest on the topic "Save Our Farmland."

Senior division winners were Cindi Solem, first; Doretta Mosloff, second; and Kristy Schantzen, third. All are from Thief River Falls.

Junior division winners were Gayle Borchert, Thief River Falls, first; Debbi Courneya, Thief River Falls, second; and Tracy Aandal, Goodridge, third.

Cash awards of $25, $15 and $10 were presented to the respective winners in each division, with the top two advancing to area competition. Contest was open to all Pennington county students in grades seven through 12.

Sponsors were the St. Hilaire Elevator, Farmers Co-op Grain and Seed, and Thief River Grain, Inc.

Craig Goodrich

Craig Goodrich Appointed To USAF Academy

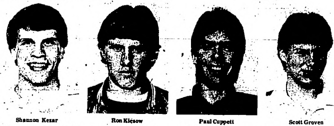
Congressman Arlan Stangeland has announced that Craig Goodrich of Thief River Falls, the son of Dr. and Mrs. Donald Goodrich, has been offered an appointment to the United States air force academy at Colorado Springs.

"I am very proud that Craig has been offered this appointment to the U.S. air force academy. The competition was strong and to be selected is a tremendous honor, not only for Craig and his parents, but also for the people of Thief River Falls and the entire Seventh District," Rep Stangeland said.

Goodrich, an 18-year-old senior at Lincoln high school, is ranked in the top five per cent of his class and has been very active on the yearbook staff, school choir and the swimming team. He has also participated in his church youth group and church choir.

Young people who are interested in attending one of the academies begin by contacting their Congressman. In the Seventh District, Congressman Stangeland then forwards their application to the academy screening committee, which he established to screen prospective applicants. Upon receiving approval from the committee, they are nominated by the Congressman and he forwards these nominations to the service academy in which the applicant has expressed an interest in attending. The academy then begins its own screening process and offers appointments.

Craig Goodrich will graduate from Lincoln high school in May and will enter the U.S. air force academy in July.



Shannon Kezar Ron Kiesow Paul Cuppett Scott Groven

DELEGATES AND ALTERNATES for Boys State under sponsorship of Ecklund-Holmstrom Post 117 of the American Legion have been announced by Fred Dallmann, post commander, and Terry Solne, Boys State chairman for the post. Delegates are Ron Kiesow of Goodridge and Shannon Kezar of Thief River Falls. Alternates are Scott Groven of Goodridge and Paul Cuppett of Thief River Falls. All are juniors at their respective schools. The 36th annual learning experience in local and state government will be conducted June 10-16 at Gustavus Adolphus college in St. Peter. Participants in Boys State will receive instruction from competent individuals from selected governmental areas in organizing and operating their own city, county and state governments. There were 169 boys attending the first Boys State event in 1949 at the St. Paul campus of the University of Minnesota. Last year there were 452 participants on the Gustavus Adolphus college campus.

North Country Auto Show To Have Over 100 Entries

Somewhat to the surprise of even the sponsors themselves, the fifth annual edition of the North Country auto showtime is shaping up to be the best ever. The car show will be conducted Saturday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Pennington county fairgrounds.

"It's absolutely amazing," said Ed Walseth, president of the sponsoring Prairie Schooners street rod club. "We have 85 entries so far, including 65 from out of town, and only six or seven of those from out of town are repeats from previous shows here. That means there will be well over half of the 100 cars we expect that will be new to our show."

Visitors' cars will be arranged in the sports arena and the curling club buildings with most local cars to be displayed outside, Walseth said. This is not only a courtesy to visitors but a practicality as well, since the local cars can be driven home for overnight storage Saturday.

Club members working with the show also noted that there will be a greater flair for pageantry this year. Several of the clubs coming from out of town will be displaying their club entries in a group with a general theme.

The Fargo, ND, club will erect a display including items around an old-time service station theme. Clubs from Crookston, Hibbing and Canada are also planning club theme displays. There are a number of Canadian entries this year as well as from southern Minnesota and well into North Dakota.

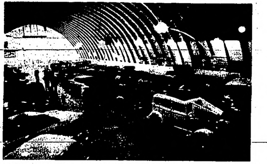
In addition to the club displays from out of town, the local Corvette club plans a display of 15 to 20 cars for noncompetitive exhibition only and the Prairie Schooners will have a "construction zone" exhibit. The latter will include three cars of the same model, one in the original condition it was found recently, one in partial restoration and one completely restored and modified. Object of the display is to encourage car club membership as a family fun activity.

A large number of classes are being offered in competition this year with more than 100 trophies to be awarded. Major awards among these will include people's choice, with those attending the show voting for their favorite entries (three top vote-getters will receive trophies); mayor's award, a single entry selected by Mayor Bob Carlson; Miss Thief River Falls award, a single entry preferred by Miss Thief River Falls, Bev Rustad; and a club participation award, for the club having the best club entry display. Miss Thief River Falls will be on hand at 4 p.m. Sunday to assist with distribution of the trophies, and Phil Scott will serve as master of ceremonies.

Agassiz antique car club will conduct a swap meet at the fairgrounds during both days of the show. On Sunday from 6:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. the local sports boosters club will serve a pancake breakfast at the American Legion club rooms.

"Once again the business community support of the show has been just great," president Walseth said. "Purchase of display signs and sponsorship of trophies has permitted us to expand to 25 classes of competition and make our show better each year. As a result of community support, including those who attend the show, we have been able to give approximately $1,250 to local charities in the past year."

Admission to the show has been set at $3 for adults and $1 for children from six to 12 with a family admission total of $7. Children under six years of age and senior citizens 65 years of age and older will be admitted free of charge. Since Sunday is Mother's day, carnations will be given to the first 200 women attending the show.



NORTH COUNTRY auto showtime in Thief River Falls will be presented for the fifth year on Saturday and Sunday with more than 100 entries again expected for the show. Once again the curling club building (shown in the above photo from the 1983 show) will be used in addition to the sports arena to house some of the entries. Show officials note that there are already 85 entries in the competition, with about 60 of the out-of-town entries never having been shown in Thief River Falls before. # Local Legislators Vote On Programs

SPRING WEATHER provided several beautiful days last week before another cold and rainy spell moved into the area. Last week's sunshine has been replaced by rain on Sunday and overcast skies with a cold northwest wind today. Victor Walsberg of rural Thief River Falls took advantage of the warm weather last week to get out his bicycle, pump up the tires and go for a ride around his farm yard. He still enjoys an occasional ride, although he doesn't get out on the bicycle as often as he did a couple of years ago. Victor observed his 94th birthday last winter and has been too busy with other jobs around the farm to do much bicycle riding.

The last few years haven't been easy ones for state legislators who had to make difficult budget cutbacks while increasing state taxes because of the lagging economy.

The situation changed this year and the legislature had to take a look at the crisis programs they had put together to help state businesses and individuals get over the hard times. Those programs included a mortgage moratorium, emergency jobs program and a special preference for state firms seeking government contracts.

The three programs had various fates this year, one was extended, another was partially funded and the third was axed.

Mortgage Noratorium

Farm and homeowners facing economic distress will continue to be helped by state legislation that delays the foreclosure process. The legislature decided to extend the moratorium for another year.

The bill was less controversial this year as the banking industry backed off in its opposition. Critics argue that the bill forces bankers to be more cautious, hurting potential new home and farm owners.

Sen. LeRoy Stumpf of Plummer and Rep. Wallace Sparby of Thief River Falls voted yes.

Emergency Jobs

State unemployment was a major concern last year when an emergency jobs program, funded at $70 million, was passed. The MEED program provided funds for new jobs in both the private and public sectors.

That mix will continue under the new bill, but the funding has been scaled back to $30 million. Critics say the jobs could be created without state spending because the economy is well on the way to recovery.

The bill was never voted on but became law as part of the massive supplemental spending bill which included $166 million for other programs.

Minnesota Preference

State firms that had been outbid by as much as 10 per cent when seeking state contracts could stave off the competition from firms in other states under a state law passed a year ago.

Critics claimed that the bill was an unnecessary expense that would prompt retaliation from Minnesota's neighbors — which it did. They gladly supported its repeal.

Supporters said the bill had accomplished its purpose by protecting state businesses at a time when they were in financial distress.

The bill repealing Minnesota preference passed without dissent.

Labor Studies Show Rise In Non-Farm Jobs

Non-farm employment rose two per cent in the North-Central administrative region in 1983, according to the U.S. department of labor's bureau of labor statistics. This compares to a rise of three per cent in Minnesota and 3.3 per cent nationally.

Regional Commissioner William E. Rice, Chicago, noted that the two per cent rise represented the first calendar year employment gain in the region since 1979, when employment edged up .1 of a per cent. North-Central region includes states of Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio and Wisconsin.

Payroll employment in the region grew by 344,000 jobs in 1983, reaching a 17,860,000 job level in December. All six states in the region recorded employment gains, ranging from .4 of a per cent in Illinois, to 3.5 per cent in Michigan. Minnesota's employment advanced by 51,000 jobs over the year.

Rising employment in manufacturing industries led the recovery, accounting for five of six jobs gained over the year.

Manufacturing employment advanced seven per cent to 4,455,000. Most of the gain occurred in auto-related industries (transportation equipment, up 94,000 or 17.3 per cent; fabricated metal products, up 49,000 or 10.8 per cent; primary metal, up 32,000 or 10.4 per cent; and rubber and plastic products, up 25,000 or 12.3 per cent). Significant employment gains were also recorded in non-electrical machinery, up 36,000 or 5.5 per cent; electrical and electronic products, up 22,000 or 5.6 per cent; and lumber and wood products, up 9,000 or 11.5 per cent.

Employment in service industries grew 1.7 per cent to 3,678,000, representing a gain of 60,000 positions in 1983. Health services accounted for 13,000 of these new positions. Employment in finance, insurance and real estate was up 1.1 per cent to 989,000, a gain of 11,000 jobs. Employment in retail trade rose by 18,000 to 3,092,000, representing a .6 per cent rise. Wholesale trade employment edged up 3,000 positions or .3 per cent to 1,203,000.

Four major industry divisions registered employment declines in 1983. Employment in government was down by 23,000 to 2,911,000, an .8 per cent cut. Most of the drop was in local government where employment fell by 18,000.

Employment in construction, and in transportation and public utilities both fell by 7,000 from December 1982 to December 1983. Construction industry employment declined to 542,000, a drop of 1.3 per cent.

Employment by special trades contractors fell by 14,000 over the year. Cuts in communications, railroad transportation and electric, gas and sanitary services were responsible for a .8 per cent decline in transportation and public utilities employment, which fell to 886,000. Mining industries lipped .2 per cent to 83,000.

Nation's Archives Become 50 Years Old This June

by David M. Maxfield
Smithsonian News Service

Old documents, like old soldiers, have a tendency to just fade away. So it has become the duty of "the nation's memory," the National Archives — a half century old in June — to preserve and make available for research the historically valuable records of the federal government.

Most days, the Archives is a quietly busy place, headquartered in imposing neo-classical style on Constitution avenue in Washington, D.C. Coming and going — and each time passing a command chiseled in stone to "Study the Past" — are scholars working on long-term projects, researchers on deadlines ferreting out long-forgotten facts and genealogists tracing the roots of forests of family trees.

But on Dec. 13, 1952, the Archives was abuzz. Out on the avenue a brass band blared out a welcome to two national treasures — the Declaration of Independence and the U.S. Constitution — as they arrived at their newest, and at last permanent, home.

According to one account, a cordon of 88 servicewomen lined the steps as members of the Armed Forces special police carried the six pages, each in a helium-filled glass case enclosed in a wooden crate. Transported from the Library of Congress, the crates had been laid on mattresses in a Marine Corps armored personnel carrier and escorted by motorcycle police, a color guard, ceremonial troops, the Army band, two tanks and a cadre of servicemen carrying machine guns!

That it took the Declaration 176 years to reach the Archives, the Constitution's five pages 165 years, is regretfully consistent with our once careless approach toward the nation's most important documents.

"We're still paying for the late establishment of the Archives," one official says, because "the condition of the earliest records often is not good." Yellowed and faded, the Declaration is now barely legible. Rolled up after July 4, 1776, the document was stored in a gristmill outside Washington during the War of 1812, and later, in 1823, it was put through a damaging "wet sheet transfer process" to make copies. For a number of years, the priceless original was proudly displayed — in a sun-filled hallway.

Today, however, the document holds the place of honor in the Archives' ceremonial Rotunda, protected in a specially designed glass case that is lowered each night into a vault of steel and reinforced concrete.

Other historical documents fared far worse. Before 1934, the Archives' founding year, "official records were controlled haphazardly, all too often inaccessible to the government and the public," says former Archives staff member Herman Viola, now a Smithsonian department director and author of a new book, "The National Archives of the United States" (to be published by Harry N. Abrams this spring). Between 1774 and 1800, the federal records moved with Congress 11 times. Some papers were lost, but nothing compared to what occurred later, Viola reports.

In 1911, one government official found thousands of volumes of papers stored in "places so damp that the water, oozing from walls and ceilings, had so covered them with mold that the titles could not be read." The signatures of such political notables as John C. Calhoun and Henry Clay had been cut from other papers. Stamp collectors and autograph seekers had helped themselves to valuable records on a regular basis.

Concern for preserving important records was expressed early on, but for decades the project remained on the nation's backburner, perhaps, one archivist speculates, "because an impatient people were so concerned with growth that they did not have time for" orderly preservation.

In 1921, however, a fire in the Commerce department burned census records dating back to 1790 — and virtually wiped out the entire 1890 census, that kindled serious interest in an archives project, and the American Legion and the Hearst newspapers lined up behind the project. At last, in 1933, President Herbert Hoover laid the cornerstone of the bombproof building, solemnly declaring that "this temple of our history . . . will be one of the most durable, an expression of the American character."

National Archives now estimates that its holdings include some three billion paper documents, beginning with the papers of the Continental Congress of 1774 and running right up to the latest decisions of Congress, the White House and the federal courts.

Literally wedged in between, either at Archives headquarters or in the 11 regional branches, are manifests from slave ships, captured German records from World War II (these now in great demand among historians), journals from polar expeditions, Indian treaties — another high demand group because of their relationship to natural resources and contemporary social concerns — and papers relating to the Kennedy assassination, Watergate and landmark civil rights legislation. (Even individual tax returns are stored at huge Archives records centers before being trashed after seven years.)

In general terms, the raw stuff of the nation's military, political, scientific and social history is kept at the Archives. "The dominant factor in shaping our country and our character has been the land," Viola observes, and "most of what we have done to the land is documented in the Archives." Here, for example, one can find the original Northwest Ordinance of 1787, outlining how territories could attain statehood.

Military records, a major part of the Archives collections, attract great numbers of researchers each year. A couple of years ago, writer John C. Dann gleaned 79 eyewitness accounts of the American Revolution from a batch of papers filed because an 1832 law required a pension applicant to show a connection to the Revolutionary War.

Supplementing the paper records (though, like the Archives itself, they were late in arriving) are motion picture footage, still photographs, video and sound recordings, everything from Tokyo Rose's radio propaganda to oral arguments before the Supreme Court.

For genealogists, both novice and skilled, the Archives is a treasure, a fact learned by many viewers of the "Roots" saga. After the series, "genealogy became a hot indoor sport," an Archives official says, and now accounts for 65 pen cent of the research at the agency.

Census schedules, passenger arrival lists, pension applications — all are among the Archives resources that genealogists find useful, but for those (Alex Haley notwithstanding) looking for information about black or Indian ancestors, the research undoubtedly will be more difficult because of the lack of official records.

Still, American humorist Will Rogers ("My ancestors didn't come on the Mayflower, they met the boat," he once boasted) found the Archives rewarding in tracking down his Cherokee relations. Rogers discovered that his family was recorded on the so-called Guion Miller Roll of 1906 identifying Cherokees eligible to receive an award from the U.S. Court of Claims. From that, Rogers was able to trace his people back to 1817.

Nowadays, the federal government generates some 20 million pages of records annually — during World War II it amounted to about four million — but, perhaps mercifully, less than one per cent of the paper mountain is deposited at the Archives permanently.

Deciding what to keep falls to 19 senior Archives staff members, who are skilled at separating the grains of history from the chaff. Tossing routine requisition records and memos, they hold on to seemingly unimportant telephone logs and appointment calendars. "Who would have thought those would be so important?" asks one Archives official, referring to Watergate and recent Environmental Protection Agency investigations.

National Archives tries to retain important paper records as long as possible through preservation and conservation steps, but high-demand documents such as census and military records are put on microfilm to protect them. And many World War II records printed in blue-violet duplicating ink rub off when touched, so copies are needed.

Sometimes, though, only the real thing will do. Such is the case with Revolutionary War records written in iron ink and containing notes jotted in the margins which don't show up on microfilm. Moreover, it takes skilled Archives technicians to understand the significance of various substances. The late F.B.I. Director, J. Edgar Hoover, for one, wrote only in blue ink, and assigned his aides other colors.

Some documents, among them national security items, are sealed for varying periods of time, and even decennial census records are kept from public examination for 72 years to protect the privacy of those surveyed. Former presidents can restrict access to certain papers for as long as 12 years after leaving office.

At least those papers are safe. Some of George Washington's letters, the Smithsonian's Viola reports, "we cut into pieces to spread them further" following his death. Now, in addition to its other responsibilities, the Archives oversees seven presidential libraries, from Hoover's to Ford's, so that such abuses will not recur. After all, the Archives informal motto is, "Here today and here tomorrow!"

MN Inventors Congress Set June 8 To 10

You can't go anywhere today without seeing some product that was once exhibited at the Minnesota inventors congress (MIC).

Among those now-common household items? The plastic milk carton holder, four legged cane, and the pocket fisherman. And for the more mechanical minded, the skid steer loader, fishline lawn trimmer and three-point quick hitch for tractors.

Why did their inventors come to the MIC? Because it's the longest-running inventors congress in the country, and because it is one place where inventors can get good, honest answers to their questions.

Minnesota inventors congress was founded in 1958 as an effort to bring together inventors and the people who could help them do something with their inventions. The MIC has grown from a statewide event to one of national significance; indeed, each year there are entries from all over the country.

For a nominal fee, inventors can attend seminars conducted by members of the Minnesota patent and trademark law association, including: Richard E. Brink, Marv Jacobson, Warren Sturm and William Braddock.

They can receive advice from Ron Kramer, field director of the U.S. department of commerce Minneapolis office, and Andy Amoroso of the Small Business administration.

This year, they can talk with Donald Quigg, deputy commissioner of the U.S. department of patents and trademarks, Washington, D.C.

In addition, inventors display their 'brainchildren' for the public and gain insights from public reaction and comments. They also may compete for prizes in one of the categories for inventions: agricultural implements, electronics and chemistry, health-medical, sports and recreation, tools, automotive, household, industrial and personal.

This year's congress will be held Friday through Sunday, June 8 to 10, at the Redwood county fairgrounds in Redwood Falls. For more information, write for a detailed brochure from the Minnesota Inventors Congress, Box 71, Redwood Falls, 56283, or call 507-637-2828.

200 Volunteers In County 4-H, Home Program

In Pennington county's agricultural extension service programs, which include extension home study groups and 4-H members and leaders, an estimated 200 persons are currently volunteering, according to Deborah Matero, Pennington county extension agent. May 6-12 is national volunteer recognition week.

"Working in some way to help others for no monetary pay" is the way a Gallup survey defines volunteering. This includes the person who regularly helps an elderly neighbor as well as the person who volunteers at a nursing home. In even broader terms, it includes persons volunteering time to research the need for a traffic light at a dangerous intersection; the room mother at a school; the lawyer and accountant who offer free help to their neighbors or their church; and persons who collect money for a charity or canvass for a political candidate.

According to the survey, 55 per cent of American adults do some volunteering. The number of men who volunteer has increased from 47 per cent in 1981 to 53 per cent in 1983. Women volunteers remained constant at 56 per cent. Americans in the Western states lead the nation in terms of volunteer participantion at 62 per cent. That figure is 55 per cent in the East, 54 per cent in the South and 51 per cent in the Midwest.

There are a variety of reasons for volunteering, possibly as many as there are people participating, Matero noted. In a 1981 Gallup survey, reasons for volunteering included wanting to be useful, helping others do good deeds, having an interest in the activity or the work; thinking they would enjoy the work; feeling needed; having a child, relative or friends in the program; religious concerns; wanting to learn and get experience; helping get a job; having a lot of free time; and thinking it would help keep taxes down.

"It is surprising how much of the survey information parallels Pennington county's verbal responses from its valued volunteers in recent years," Matero says.

Kenny Muzzy Retires As Mail Carrier

held for another couple of miles, I would have been in big trouble!" he said.

Blizzards provided the main hazards for mail carrying, however, and since the route goes about 15 miles west of St. Hilaire in traverses some open country. "I can remember one time when it took me an hour and a half to go four miles," Muzzy said. "I had to wait for a lull in the wind when I could see a few feet, then stop and wait for another bit of clearing."

Muzzy said he always believed in "giving 110 per cent" in making the effort to serve his patrons. "There were times when I really shouldn't have gone out," he admitted, "but you always go as far as you can. . . and hope you can get back again! You get to know the roads and where there will be trouble and you travel accordingly."

Rural letter carriers are more than letter carriers. They are post offices on wheels, delivering parcel post packages, selling stamps and money orders, picking up parcels for shipping. There have been times, when the route had its 332 boxholders, when he couldn't get all of a day's mail in his car. That usually meant a second stop out of St. Hilaire.

Muzzy said he most enjoyed the wildlife to be seen on his route, including birds, moose and deer. He would take his coffee break in an area where he was likely to see wildlife.

Over the years he has carried mail to four generations in some families. He calls to mind the family of Elmer Melhouse, including Elmer's daughter, Mrs. Herb Swenson; the Swenson's son Mike; and finally Mike's child. Sons of two of his former patrons — Eddie Furuseth and Jarvis Torgerson — are now local postal employees.

The years have taken their toll, however. Kenny now has to get out of the car every once in awhile to walk out the kinks and aches. "When it's no fun any more it's time to get out," he said. His substitute carrier, Dick Kruse, will drive the route until a regular replacement is determined through the posting and selection system.

Kenny and his wife, the former Delores Aamodt, plan to spent more time at the cottage they own on Maple lake. They have a daughter, Dawn Muzzy of Thief River Falls, and a son Mike was killed in an accident at work several years ago. He is a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Legion, Elks and Eagles lodges and Zion Lutheran church.

After farming for 35 years he retired from farming three years ago and rented his land north of Thief River Falls to his brother. He thanks the Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire patrons on his route for their many kindnesses over the years.

For relaxation Kenny and is wife enjoy dining out. "We're sort of set aside Friday night to go out to eat," he said. "I think it has given us some time to get to know each other better."

FINAL RUN US MAIL

KENNY MUZZY dusted off the signs which fellow postal workers placed on his car to permit this Times photo after he made his final run as a rural letter carrier on Thursday. Muzzy said he will miss the people and the travel in the countryside but not the snow drifted roads or digging coins out of ice in mailboxes. In several cases he has delivered mail to four generations of patrons.

Legislastors' Voting Record Is Reviewed

Bonding

Every year the state passes a bill providing for new buildings and maintenance on existing structures. Most of the cost is paid for using low-interest state bonds.

The $189 million bill is $9.2 million higher than the one proposed by Gov. Rudy Perpich. Bonding will be used to fund $155 million of the cost.

The bill provides money for projects in most areas of the state, making it difficult for legislators to vote against its provisions. It passed in the Senate 59-2 and in the House 112-17. Sen. Stumpf and Rep. Sparby voted yes.

Pay Commission

There was a strong effort in the House to get rid of the pay commission concept passed a year ago. The pay commission helps relieve legislators of the pressure of deciding their own pay, as well as the pay of top state officials and judges.

Legislators will be paid an average of 10 per cent more in 1985 and again in 1986 based on the commission's recommendation which was included in the multi-program supplemental spending bill. They've received a per diem hike most recently, but no salary boost since 1980.

In a 61-61 tie, the House defeated a motion to delete the pay commission recommendations. Rep. Sparby voted no.

Pay Equity

Jobs dominated by women employees that are equal in difficulty to those dominated by men aren't paid at the same rate. Minnesota was the first state in the country to recognize this and set up a comparable worth study and a law to bring women workers up to a level even with male counterparts.

The effort to bring the women-dominated jobs in line at the state level is now underway. It is estimated to cost about four per cent more to accomplish the pay equity goal.

The same goal for local governments is set up in a bill passed this year. The local units must comply by 1987. This bill passed without dissent in the Senate, while the House supported it by a 104-20 margin. Rep. Sparby voted yes.

Restaurant Tip Credit

Until now, the state minimum wage law included a special exemption allowing restaurant waiters and waitresses to be paid 20 per cent below the minimum wage of $3.35 an hour.

A bill passed this year would phase out the 'tip credit' and raise their pay to the minimum wage level between now and 1988. Supporters of the change say the tip credit was discriminatory and pointed out that most restaurant food servers are women.

Opponents said the bill will lead to higher restaurant prices, causing a business slowdown and loss of jobs. The bill passed 40-25 in the Senate and 68-61 in the House. Sen. Stumpf and Rep. Sparby voted yes.

Sober Up Time

An effort to give bar patrons an hour to sober up after the 1 a.m. closing time got Senate support. Bars could stay open an extra hour and serve non-alcoholic beverages under the plan.

Supporters said the bill would even out the bar rush, reducing auto fatalities. Opponents argued it would be hard to prevent the serving of liquor during the grace period.

The Senate passed the bill 34-18, but it didn't get a House vote. Sen. Stumpf voted no.

Hazardous and Solid Waste Changes

Opponents of the state's hazardous waste siting efforts won a major victory by getting a two-year delay put in the law this year. They argued that the waste menagement board had been too busy trying to find a disposal site when it should have been looking more closely at whether the state really needed a site and developing a plan.

Others argued that it is a shame to delay a four-year process that had narrowed the field of candidates to four sites.

The bill also includes a controversial garbage tax designed to reduce use of solid waste landfills and encourage recycling while helping pay for landfill-related costs such as wear and tear on roads.

The tax is mandatory in the metropolitan area, and optional for counties and cities in the rest of Minnesota.

The moratorium was opposed by several urban lawmakers, while many conservatives cast no votes because of the tax provisions. The bill still passed, 92-34 in the House and 59-5 in the Senate. Sen. Stumpf and Rep. Sparby voted yes.

Metro Transit Reorganization

The Metropolitan Transit commission has been a sore spot for legislators over the years. It has done a good job at the mechanics, keeping the bus system working and serving the urban area.

However, there has been mounting critisism of the way the MTC plans and serves growing suburban communities. Lawmakers passed a proposal that gives a new regional board planning authority to coordinate a transit system that may allow private systems to serve suburban areas, while the MTC continues to operate and maintain the existing bus system.

The bill was never voted on in the House or Senate, but became part of the bit supplemental spending bill.

Stumpf Gives View Of 1984 Legislature

million supplemental appropriations bill.

"I was glad to see this legislature renew its traditional commitment to our educational system," Stumpf said, noting that the legislature had approved a $34 million education aids bill aimed at increasing per-pupil state aid from $1,475 to $1,585 by 1985, and reducing the local mill levy authority from 24 to 23.5 mills.

"We also approved an additional $30 million to the state's highly successful jobs program, which has found jobs for over 10,000 jobless Minnesotans," Stumpf said, adding that, "this additional money will be targeted toward finding jobs for some of the 112,000 people in our state still looking for jobs."

In the local government area, a measure passed to refund $3.4 million in lost local government aids to counties and townships, and a 'hold harmless' bill guaranteeing that all local municipalities will receive at least as much local aid in 1985 as they received in 1984, Stumpf said.

The Senate provided $84.8 million in total transportation funding, as well as funding a study to renew passenger train service across the state, and a bill funding $12 million for railroad rehabilitation for some of our local communities.

"This has been a 'short, hectic but highly productive session in terms of legislation considered and approved," Stumpf continued. "I was very pleased to see us take the responsible road to improving our short-term economy, while also laying the foundation for the maintenance of a strong and healthy economy in the future.

"I trust that, as the story is told in this session, it will go down as the year the legislature worked to keep Minnesota working, and provided additional business, property and income tax relief to assure that this commitment is met in future sessions," Stumpf said.

Did you ever meet someone who at first glance seemed singularly unattractive, only to discover on becoming better acquainted that the same person became quite beautiful in your eyes . . . simply because that person became a close friend. . . . Many a perfect gem has been found in rough terrain and the same principle can be applied to people. Beauty does indeed lie in the eye of the beholder.

Modern Gardens Lack Right Food For Butterflies

by Lilas Wiltshire
Smithsonian News Service

Grass has been mowed, the weeds pulled and the flowers planted. Everything is trimmed, pruned and manicured. Even a respectable number of birds are taking up residence and the lawn chairs are in place. Now, just as James McNeill Whistler put his butterfly signature on his works of art, you wait for nature to do the same. . . and wait. . . and wait.

Although they are found in all parts of the United States — even in areas of extreme altitude and temperature — butterflies often shun our modern manicured lawns. Seemingly inhospitable environments may provide what our groomed gardens lack — specialized plants for the butterflies' caterpillars and nectar-rich flowers for adults.

Butterflies, it seems, are not free, and what we have pulled out of our gardens we may very well have to put back in if we want the pleasure of their company.

"Many butterflies are able to do well in suburbs and cities, except in areas totally covered by asphalt and concrete," says Dr. John M. Burns, a Smithsonian evolutionary biologist who began collecting butterflies when he was five years old. "Obviously, the secret of successfully attracting plant-eating butterflies if having a lot of the right plants."

That may sound simple enough, but Jo Brewer, after seven years of practicing the art of attracting butterflies in the Bostom area, is still experimenting. Her success cannot be disputed — she has counted 47 species in her own yard during a single year, and she is preparing a book on her findings — but her methods still include trial and error. In the case of butterflies, an understanding of their life cycles offers clues about which environments will be most attractive.

Butterflies (almost always day-flyers) and moths (mostly night-flyers) — both classified scientifically as Lepidoptera — go through four distinct stages in their complete metamorphosis: egg, larva (caterpillar), pupa (chrysalis) and adult.

Highly selective females lay eggs only on suitable host plants that will supply food for the caterpillar, whose body will be mostly a massive digestive tract. The more plant material the caterpillar eats, the more it grows, periodically shedding its skin until, sooner or later, it becomes a pupa. An additional covering (cocoon) is spun only by some moths. In this outwardly inactive stage, the entire system of the caterpillar, now enclosed in a hardened case, changes in content and purpose until the adult butterfly emerges.

Wings must expand and dry, and body temperatures must rise before the adult can fly. This heat requirement continues throughout its relatively short life — typically a few days to a month depending on the species and environmental conditions. To warm itself quickly, a butterfly, with its wings folded over its back, will tilt to place itself at right angles to the sun and absorb the maximum amount of heat.

Adult's search for food is now limited almost exclusively to gathering nectar and other liquids through a sucking, tubelike proboscis. Some do not visit flowers at all, preferring tree sap, rotting fruit or animal carcasses — even dung. Only one highly developed tropical genus of butterflies has the ability to gather and digest pollen.

In the far southern United States, adults may be in flight all year. In most areas, however, as the winter approaches, hibernation or overwintering occurs in one of the four states of the life cycle, varying with individual species.

If you want a backyard of butterflies, the next step along the gardening path, Brewer suggests, is to "find out what you already have in your garden. Walk through your neighborhood at peak flight hours, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., on warm, sunny days and keep track of the butterflies you see and the plants they are attracted to."

"Then you plant, watch, discard and replant," she advises, but warns, "You can never bring in butterflies that are not already in your area.

"Ideally," Brewer says, "you will have one patch of garden that can be reserved as a 'meadow'." Scatter wildflower seeds in with meadow grasses, or leave a corner of your yard unmowed," allowing hibernating insects to complete their life cycles. The trend toward more informal gardens and the interest in wildflowers and landscaping with grasses are all beneficial since the flowers most similar to those in the insect's natural habitat are its best source of nectar. And, of course, spraying with either insecticides or herbicides should be avoided or aliminated if possible.

Learn the habits of the butterflies — a field guide is a good investment — when the adults emerge and what the larval foods are. Then plant those along with a good combination of perennials, biennials and annuals that will yield continuous blooms from spring to winter and accommodate adults emerging in all seasons. Wildflowers that may spread too eagerly can be planted in clay tiles buried in the ground to restrict the roots.

Shrubs provide a welcome windbreak and, more. The lilac, for example, is both a nectar source and a good host plant for caterpillars. A few rocks in a moist, sunny area of your yard will help satisfy the butterfly's love of basking.

Each area of the country has, of course, its own species of butterflies as well as more widely distributed ones. The Northwest shares the white parnassians, characterized by their red-and-black eyespots, with Canada and Alaska. In Alaska and high mountain areas, the arctic Satyrid butterflies take two years to complete their development because of the cold, and some may be seen flying only in alternate years.

Many tropical species find their way into the southern parts of Texas and Arizona. Hawaii, with its lush vegetation, would seem to be a treasure house of these "flying jewels." But the islands are young in geological terms and isolated from other land sources. Only two butterflies are native there — the Kamehameha and the Hawaiian blue. Several others have been introduced, including the monarch, fiery skipper and painted lady. The painted lady is the most widely distributed butterfly in the world and is found nearly everywhere its main host plant, the thistle, grows.

Silver-spotted skipper has one of the most extensive ranges of any North American butterly and easily adapts to suburban gardens and parks from British Columbia to Quebec to Baja California to Florida. Locust and wisteria are favored larval plants. Skippers and butterflies, incidentally, are classified in separate "superfamilies" but are usually considered one another's nearest relative. The silver-spotted skipper, unlike a "true" butterfly, makes a loose shelter around its pupa by pulling a few leaves together with strands of silk.

You can begin your garden even before your research is done by planting some all-time nectar favorites — the butterfly bush and both orange and common milkweed. Other delectables include Joe-Pye weed, boneset, wild bergamot, black-eyed Susans, crepe myrtle, asters, lantana, lupine, wild sweet peas, red clover, veronica and coreopsis.

Host plants which you can provide for the common caterpillars include fennel and parsley (also food for cooking) for the anise swallowtail in the West and in the East the spicebush and various bay plants for the spicebush swallowtail. Common lawn grasses, including burmuda and St. Augustine, attract the yellow-orange and black fiery skipper.

Black-edged common sulphurs, seen nearly everywhere, look for clover and other legumes, while variegated fritillaries lay eggs under violets and the Gulf fritillary, on passion flowers. The Gulf fritillary — familiar to city gardeners from San Francisco south to Baja California and over the Southeast — prefers the nectar of orange zinnias, marigolds and, according to one observer, "just about any orange color it can find."

Changes will take place in your yard — and maybe even in your life. The efforts of Jo Brewer and her husband now extend to rearing caterpillars, some found in unlikely places. One little lepidopteran claims a niche in their collection, very properly labeled: "(species) Heliothis virescens; (location) salad, New Jersey."

Most important, your garden will look a little more natural, a little more lived-in — like a state of "controlled disorder," Brewer says. And you will have your reward when, with a silent sign of approval, that first butterfly alights..

IT was his first "real" job... his first small taste of responsibility.

You cared then, and you still care today. And providing the protection for those you care for is what we do best.

Tax Freedom Day May 8

According to the Minnesota Taxpayers association, Minnesotans can observe "Tax Freedom Day" on Tuesday, May 8. This is the day when, if they used every dollar of their earned income from January 1 to pay federal, state and local taxes, they would be free to use the remainder of the year's income for themselves.

Nationally, the tax freedom day observance is May 1. Minnesota is a week later due to a higher than average state and local tax burden.

"For most Minnesotans," according to Don Paterick, executive director of the Minnesota Taxpayers association, "the savings at the federal level was merely paid out at the local and state levels. Taxes here were increased to cover Minnesota's recessionary fiscal problems, and many of those increases have remained a part of the current tax structure in 1984.

"The removal of the 10 per cent individual income surtax has eased the tax burden calculations this year, but the six per cent sales tax, high property tax and a number of conformity changes on the individual tax form have increased the tax burden in an already high taxed state.

"Without the tax package passed by the 1984 session," Paterick states, "the calculations would have been higher. Yet taxpayers remain subject to a state and local burden which is still an estimated 16 per cent higher than the national average. They must labor on the job for another week to finish paying their state and local taxes."

Another way to view the tax freedom day concept is the average worker's eight-hour day. According to MTA calculations, Minnesota taxpayers are working for the federal government one hour and 43 minutes, and for state and local governments for another hour and six minutes. Average workers don't start working for themselves until lunch time. About the same amount of time is spent working to pay taxes as is spent to pay for the three basic necessities of food, clothing and shelter. Only 20 minutes are spent earning the money spent for recreation.

The eight-hour day average breaks down as follows: Federal taxes, one hour and 43 minutes; state and local taxes, one hour and six minutes; housing, one hour and 34 minutes; food and beverage, one hour and four minutes; transportation, 42 minutes; medical, 36 minutes; clothing, 21 minutes; recreation, 20 minutes; and all other, 34 minutes.

So if you have spent the first three of your year fasting, sleeping in the open, using last year's clothes and not spending anything for anything except taxes, enjoy the other two-thirds of your year. If you haven't committed 100 per cent of your earned income so far, however, you're not done paying yet.

By the way, tax freedom day in Minnesota comes just one week ahead of the May 15 deadline for paying the first half of your 1984 property taxes. That deadline has been moved up from March 31.

Points Worth Considering

Minnesota state treasurer Robert Mattson, who was a primary election winner over and endorsed DFL candidate and then beat an endorsed I-R candidate in the general election, is a bit of a maverick as a politician. In fact, his own party leaders and others have considered him incompetent and an embarrassment to state government.

Despite the fact that he spent the first few weeks of his term of office attending to private matters in Florida, and there still continues to be some question if he really was a Minnesota resident while a candidate for election, he evidences just enough irreverence for the state governmental system to provide a refreshing change of pace.

He said some time ago that there wasn't enough work in the state treasurer's office to keep him busy and that the office should be combined with the state auditor and secretary of state offices. That didn't sit too well with the state auditor and secretary of state, both of whom felt they had plenty to do in their jobs already.

Now that the 1984 legislative session has been completed, Mattson is still dissatisfied with what was done and left undone. He doesn't like removal of the state treasurer's discretionary authority over the appropriateness of using corporate donations to finance the tax study commission. He doesn't like having the state treasurer's approval exempted from private donations to the world trade center board. He doesn't like removal of the state treasurer's authority over certain funds of the University of Minnesota.

About the only thing he purports to agree with is the legislature's refusal to give him a pay raise — "the only elected official in Minnesota to be so honored", he states.

Apparently feeling put upon by what he describes as "the punitive system employed by the organized political machine of the DFL party", he knocks the legislature for raising its pay, raising the value of gifts its members may receive without disclosure from $20 to $50, failing to seriously consider reducing size of the legislature, failing to cancel the $19,500,000 remodeling of state offices, retention of the compensation council which approves pay raised for elected officials without requiring the legislature to vote on the raises, failing to pass legislation providing for independent review and audit of spending by the legislature on itself and its members and failing to subject the legislature to requirements of the open meeting law.

The disgruntled Mattson criticizes the DFL for appropriating $53,000 in salary for a job for the defeated DFL endorsed candidate for state auditor to oversee distribution of $145,000 in grants. He also notes that half of the total additional spending for state agencies provided 49 new positions and $17.2 million in additional funds to the department of energy and economic development. That department is headed by Mark Dayton, defeated in a U.S. senate bid as the endorsed DFL candidate.

Perhaps most importantly, he notes that the legislature has been increasingly abusive of Article IV, Section 17, of the Minnesota constitution which provides, "No law shall embrace more than one subject, which shall be expressed in its title." The so-called "garbage bill" of 1984, passed at the end of the session, was a 320-page document with dozens of subjects included, Mattson notes.

There may well be a healthy helping of vindictive attitude in Mattson's remarks, but he does address some questions which would appear to require legitimate resolution. Being a maverick may not be all bad.

Luddites Still Around

Columnist Richard Viguerie tells of English craftsmen known as Luddites during the industrial revolution. They believed that new technology would destroy their jobs and they set out to smash textile machinery and put the torch to textile factories.

The idea espoused by the Luddites was not new and continues today. As far back as the 1700's the fear of technology for the pin-making industry in England was evident. When the industry was updated so that the average worker could make 4,800 pins a day instead of only a few by hand, there were those who feared thousands of pin makers being thrown out of work.

Instead, the price of pins plummeted, the market demand expanded, demand for workers increased. At the same time, businesses that used pins were able to cut costs and increase demand for their products, increasing demand for still more workers.

When the dial telephone was introduced, the Communication Workers of America tried to stop the new technology which it believed would cut out jobs. "Fortunately, we were unsuccessful," CWA president Glenn Watts admitted recently, "because the resulting boom in demand for telephone service created thousands more jobs."

A group in California has sued the University of California to stop it from creating labor-saving devices for use on farms. The group wants agricultural scientists to determine the "social consequences" of their work before developing new farm technology.

Viguerie points out that the Luddites of today may delay but can't stop the march into the future. Robots, lasers and fiber optics, cable and satellite to home television and hundreds of other new industries will be remaking our economy.

"The future will not belong to Walter Mondale, who fought against the space shuttle," Viguerie writes. "It will not belong to Gary Hart, whose opposition to new technology is the cornerstone of his defense strategy. The future will belong to men and women whose ideas lift the human race out of drudgery — and point it toward the stars."

Borrowed Nonsense:

The movie theatre was featuring two blockbuster movies, "Earthquake" and "The Towering Inferno" but had only limited space on its marquee, so it billed the double feature as "Shake and Bake."

$100 DONATION from the Prairie Schooners street rod club was presented to the Northwest regional library recently. Assistant librarian Heidi Hoks accepted the check from Orren Bendickson of the club. The donation is from profits made by the club at its North Country auto showtime car show held last year. The 1984 car show will be held this Saturday and Sunday at the sports arena with over 100 entries expected.

Att'y. General Has Kits For GM Arbitration

Minnesota Attorney General Hubert H. Humphrey III reports that his office is making available a series of information kits to assist thousands of Minnesotans in an arbitration process developed by a 1983 consent agreement between the federal trade commission and General Motors.

"Minnesota consumers have spent millions of dollars to replace defective GM parts covered by this consent agreement," Humphrey said. "These kits are designed to help those customers recover the largest possible refunds through the arbitration process."

The consent agreement, which took effect in November of 1983, settled a 1980 federal lawsuit in which the federal trade commission charged GM with selling millions of cars, many of which had the following problems:

— Defective THM 200 automatic transmissions used in many GM rear-wheel drive cars from 1975-1983;

— Defective fuel pumps and fuel injection systems in 350 cubic inch diesel engines from 1977 to 1983; and

— Defective camshafts and lifters in 305 cubic inch and 350 cubic inch gasoline engines from 1974 to 1983.

As a result of the settlement, consumers who own or have owned cars with these defects can present their claims for mediation and an informal arbitration hearing through the Better Business Bureau. The arbitrations are binding on GM, but consumers who are unhappy with the results may still pursue their cases in court.

"We want Minnesotans to be aware of the millions of dollars in possible benefits available to them under this program," Humphrey said. "My office works closely with the BBB, and we urge Minnesota consumers to take advantage of this opportunity."

"Unfortunately, the settlement does not require GM to notify GM owners about the program, so we are doing everything possible to inform the public. Some 9,000 consumers have already contacted the Minnesota BBB, and they may be just the tip of the iceberg," the attorney general aid.

"Our information kits are intended to put the consumer and GM on equal footing in the mediation and arbitration process. These kits will explain how the process works, and will help consumers present their arguments effectively. Most importantly, they will show the arbitrator that a consumer's problem is not a single, isolated incident, but part of a systematic defect experienced by thousands of other car owners.

"In other states which have prepared similar kits, consumer response has been fantastic. Many consumers have found that the information kits enabled them to negotiate a fair settlement without even having to go to arbitration."

Humphrey said consumers should be aware of the following facts about the program:

(1) Consumers can arbitrate their cases no matter how old the car is or how many miles are on it. They are not limited to GM's written warranty.

(2) If a claim involves one of the defective components, the consumer can arbitrate even if he or she no longer owns the car.

(3) Arbitration is available whether or not repairs were done at an authorized GM dealer.

Consumers who wish to receive the Attorney General's GM information kits should write to: Attorney General's Consumer Division, 117 University Avenue, St. Paul, MN 55155.

Consumers should be sure to identify the type of defect(s) they experienced, so they will be sent the proper information kits.

To begin the mediation and arbitration process, consumers should write to: Minnesota Better Business Bureau, 1745 University Avenue, St. Paul, MN 55104.

Consumers with questions may call the BBB's auto hotline at 1-800-832-6428, or the attorney general's consumer complaint line (612) 296-3353 in St. Paul or (218) 723-4891 in Duluth.

Outstanding Sr. Citizens Being Sought

Pennington county residents are invited to submit nominations for two outstanding senior citizens to be honored at the county fair at Thief River Falls.

Morris Howick has been named chairman of the county selection committee which will choose both a man and woman over 70 whose community achievements earn them the title of "Pennington county's outstanding senior citizens for 1984". The man and woman selected will receive special certificates of commendation from the governor of Minnesota and their names will be placed in nomination for honors as the state's outstanding senior citizens at the state fair on August 30.

Selection of Minnesota's outstanding senior citizens is a joint effort of the Minnesota board on aging, the state fair board, and the Minnesota federation of county fair officers.

Persons wishing to make nominations for the county awards can obtain official nomination blanks by writing to Morris Howick, at 1102 Greenhill Drive, Thief River Falls or by picking up the entry forms at the Senior citizen craft shop in the Thief River Falls city auditorium.

Nominees must be residents of Minnesota and over 70 years of age by county fair time. Previous winners are not eligible, but persons previously nominated may be re-nominated.

Judging will be based largely on the number and variety of contributions nominees have made to their communities after age 65. Deadline for the acceptance of nominations is June 22.

Buoyed by a big 4-2 victory over perennial power Moorhead earlier in the week, Thief River Falls had hopes of jumping out to an early lead in the 1984 North Sub-Region 8AA high school baseball race by adding a Friday win over a Bemidji team that had lost to Moorhead 16-6 the day before the Prowlers beat the Spuds.

Thief River Falls was hoping to be 4-0 at this stage, including a 2-0 mark against North Sub-Region 8AA teams.

Instead, the Prowlers failed to duplicate the effort that beat Moorhead and lost a disappointing 5-4 game to Bemidji in eight innings. It was particularly frustrating to lose it in the manner they did — four errors in the eighth inning on four very routine plays.

Beating Moorhead, which has always been difficult, has now become easier than beating Bemidji for the Prowlers. They've beaten the Spuds three times in the past five years, but they've lost 15 of their last 17 games against the Lumberjacks since 1977, including 14 straight regular season losses.

In 1977, Thief River Falls beat Bemidji 5-3 in the first of the annual two-game series, but the Prowlers haven't accomplished that feat since. They lost a one-sided 10-0 game in the regular season finale that year to start that losing streak.

Thief River Falls then lost both games in the series in 1978 (9-1, 7-6); in 1979 (6-5, 5-4); in 1980 (4-1, 4-2); in 1981 (17-0, 7-5); in 1982 (4-2, 5-0); and 1983 (8-6, 7-4).

There was also a 6-1 sub-region tournament loss to Bemidji in 1978, but the only two Thief River Falls wins in the series over the past seven years also came in post-season play. Thief River Falls rebounded from that 10-0 regular season loss in 1977 to beat Bemidji 3-1 for a sub-region title before losing to St. Cloud Apollo 9-6 in the Region 8AA semifinals for a 13-5 record — the Prowlers' best finish in recent history. And in 1980 Thief River Falls edged Bemidji 3-2 in opening round North Sub-Region 8AA play before losing to Moorhead 5-1.

Despite the loss Friday, the Prowlers have still shown themselves to be a North Sub-Region 8AA contender in 1984. Their regular season schedule includes just four meetings with North Sub-Region 8AA opponents — two each with Bemidji and Moorhead — since the others — Fergus Falls, Detroit Lakes and Park Rapids — will not schedule Thief River Falls because of the travel distance.

Thief River Falls has a regularly scheduled game in Bemidji Thursday, May 17, and the Prowlers will draw host Moorhead in the first round of the four-team Moorhead Invitational Saturday that includes Grand Rapids and Minot, N.D. in the other semifinal.

North Sub-Region 8AA tournament will be played Tuesday and Thursday, May 29 and 31, at Moorhead. Top two seeded teams, by virtue of voting by the coaches, will receive first round tournament byes while the No. 3-4-5-6 teams are matched up in the quarterfinals. Those top two seeded teams will join the opening round winners in the semifinals.

It apparently isn't an overwhelmingly strong North Sub-Region 8AA field. In addition to those Thief River Falls-Moorhead-Bemidji results to date, Detroit Lakes has beaten Park Rapids 9-3 thanks in part to 12 walks, Bemidji has beaten Park Rapids 13-4 and Moorhead has beaten Fergus Falls 6-5 with two unearned runs in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Loss to Bemidji spoiled the Prowlers' hopes of matching their best start since 1973 when they opened the season 6-0 with wins over Red Lake Falls 13-0, Roseau 7-1, Warroad 14-0, Marshall County Central 11-0, Warroad 12-0 and Climax 6-2 before losing — to Bemidji 8-2. They finished 14-4 that year.

+ Crookston, Tuesday's Thief River Falls baseball opponent in a 4 p.m. doubleheader here, beat Bemidji 12-9 last Tuesday. Bemidji had five errors while three pitchers issued nine walks and seven hits as Crookston jumped out to a 7-0 lead through four innings. Crookston is 3-0 for the year.

Thief River Falls could be a contender for the title, but the Prowlers haven't won a post-season game since 1980, bowing out in first round play the past three years.

TEAMMATES LINED up to greet Rick Spong after the Thief River Falls centerfielder had hit a fifth inning game-tying three-run home run off of Bemidji pitcher Nathan Ohman during Friday's North Sub-Region 8AA high school baseball game played here. The Prowlers, though, wound up losing a 5-4 game to the Lumberjacks in eight innings.

Lumberjacks Edge Prowlers 5-4 In Eight-Inning Baseball Game

Thief River Falls committed four errors in the top of the eighth inning Friday, surrendering two runs in the process, to hand Bemidji a 5-4 North Sub-Region 8AA high school baseball victory.

It was a frustrating extra-inning loss for the Prowlers, who watched their season-opening three-game winning streak come to an end. They will try to rebound Tuesday with a 4 p.m. doubleheader against Crookston on the fairgrounds diamond. It was the second consecutive eight-inning victory for the Lumberjacks, who edged Greenway-Coleraine 8-7 the day before.

While Bemidji clearly had the upper hand through the early portions of the game, building a 3-0 lead, Thief River Falls rallied to tie it in dramatic fashion on senior Rick Spong's three-run home run in the bottom of the fifth.

It remained deadlocked until the eighth when Thief River Falls' defensive breakdown decided the issue. A dropped throw at first base, a ground ball error at shortstop and a botched pick-off play loaded the bases for the visitors. A force out at the plate and a fly ball to left-center field should have enabled tough-luck pitcher Ryan Drees to get out of the inning un-scored on, but the outfielders bumped into each other in trying to make the inning-ending catch and the ball fell to the ground as two Lumberjacks scored.

Yet Thief River Falls didn't give up. In the bottom of the inning, Brian Johnston drew a one-out walk, Todd Ortloff doubled to deep centerfield and Ryan Bakke loaded the bases on a two-out walk. Third walk of the inning, this one issued to Gary Cornell, forced in a run to make it 5-4 and the game went down to the final pitch when Spong went down swinging on a 3-2 pitch.

In building their early lead the Lumberjacks hit the ball hard off Johnston, Thief River Falls' starting pitcher who was impressive in a 4-2 victory earlier in the week over Moorhead, a team that beat Bemidji 16-6.

RBI doubles by Scott Knutson and George Pelawa supplied Bemidji with a 2-0 second inning lead, and another run-scoring double by Jeff Nevitt made it 3-0 in the fourth as Johnston gave way to Drees.

Meanwhile, Bemidji sophomore lefthander Nathan Ohman limited Thief River Falls to just two hits through five innings — a broken (aluminum, yet) bat single by Ortloff in the second and Spong's 320-foot homer over the left field fence in the fifth. He was replaced on the mound by righthander Bob Smith in the seventh.

Playing on the Northland Community College diamond at the same time, Thief River Falls outlasted Bemidji 11-10 in a ten-inning junior varsity game, giving the winners a 3-1 season record.

Falls Clinic Races Attract A Large Group Of Participants

An estimated 130 participants took part Saturday in the Falls Clinic-sponsored Thief River Falls foot races that featured both a 10-kilometer (6.1 miles) course and a two-mile "Fun Run."

Those who participated in the event ranged in age from 3-year-old Dustin Melby, who covered the two-mile course in 40-minutes, 24-seconds, to 71-year-old Mary Sabo, who was timed in 33-minutes, 42-seconds for the same race.

Race T-shirts were presented to all participants who completed either course, and a trophy went to the top finisher in each of four age categories for both men and women.

An awards program was delayed by a considerable amount of time as race officials patiently waited for Clark (Big Red) Hendrickson of KTRF radio to complete the 10-K race. He finally put an end to the speculation that he had expired somewhere in the Oakland Park area by crossing the finishing line in 1-hour, 20-minutes. Top time for that race was 34-minutes, 20-seconds, turned in by Mark Nelson, who raced in the 20-to-29 age bracket.

Top time in the two-mile race was 10:56 by Russell Sorenson, another 20-to-29 winner.

Trophy winners included:

Men's two-mile — 19-under, Jim Parnahm, 13:04; 20-29, Russell Sorenson, 10:56; 30-39, Barry Lisamtainen, 14:09; 40-over, John Schmitz, 16:34.

Women's two-mile — 19-under, Kirsten Freeman, 17:55; 20-29, Caralyn Maul, 18:30; 30-39, Rita Conners, 18:56; 40-over, Kathy Winjum, 27:13.

Men's 10-K — 19-under, Kevin Kezar, 36:30; 20-29, Mark Nelson, 34:20; 30-39, Bryon Sugden, 34:49; 40-over, Michael Schenkey, 36:11.

Women's 10-K — 19-under, no entries received; 20-29, Donna Garske, 53:48; 30-39, Lois Wang, 44:15; 40-over, Eunice Waterworth, 59:49.

A large number of racers also received special awards for finishing ahead of the "Falls Clinic Rabbit," Dr. Richard Heinrichs, who had received pre-race billing from race director Dr. Jim Langland as the favorite in the 10-K race. Langland said the races, titled "Health In The Long Run," to stress the benefits of regular exercise, were extremely successful, and the participants, whether they walked or ran the races, enjoyed the event.

The Times sports editor has to limit his chiding of Hendrickson, who good-naturedly bills himself as "The Morning Mayor", since his efforts in photographing the race were just as fruitless as Hendrickson, an acknowledged non-runner, competing in the 10-K portion of the race. A morning spent shooting pictures of the event was spoiled by a light leak on the negatives.

Northmen Pick Up First Win In Split With UMC

A strong pitching performance by sophomore lefthander Kevin Sanders lifted Northland past the University of Minnesota-Crookston 2-1 Saturday in the first half of a Minnesota Community College Conference baseball doubleheader that snapped a season-opening six-game Northwest Division losing streak for the host Northmen.

But after that fast-paced first game pitcher's duel between Sanders and Mark Majeres of UMC, the nightcap turned into a long drawn-out affair the Trojans finally won 19-10.

Earlier in the week Northland lost a Northwest Division doubleheader at Fergus Falls by 9-4 and 14-3 margins.

Those results left Northland at 1-7 for the year. The Northmen will take a break from Northwest Division play this weekend with a four-game series at Hibbing. Doubleheaders are planned Saturday at 1 p.m. and Sunday at 12-noon.

Sanders' victory Saturday in the 1984 home opener for the Northmen was his first win, but not his first strong outing of the season. He pitched a four-hitter vs. UMC, striking out eight and walking five and did not give up an earned run. On Wednesday, he also pitched a four-hitter in that 9-4 loss at Fergus Falls, striking out four and walking four. He held the potent Spartans to just two hits through five innings and gave up just two earned runs that afternoon. But a weak supporting cast accumulated seven errors.

"Kevin did a super job," confirmed Northland coach Chet Engelman after the Saturday victory. "He has done a good job for us all year."

Northland beat rival UMC by scoring twice in the first inning on RBI singles by Sanders and Darris Dahl. Lone UMC run scored in the fourth on two errors and a passed ball.

In a high-scoring nightcap it was still a respectable 6-4 ball game, UMC's favor, through five innings before the Trojans combined five hits with five Northland errors in an 11-run sixth inning that featured two home runs by Todd Peterson — A two-run blast and a three-run shot. Northland made it an extra-long inning by scoring six times in the bottom of the

TRF Invitational Is Scheduled Tuesday

Eight teams are expected to be on hand Tuesday for the annual Thief River Falls Invitational high school track meet for boys and girls. The event will start at 4 p.m. at the Prowlers Field track.

Roseau, Warroad, Marshall County Central, Red Lake Falls, Stephen, Hallock and Tri-County will be the area Class A schools joining the Class AA Prowlers for the event.

It'll be the second and final home meet of the 1984 season for the Prowlers, who just last Tuesday hosted their annual Quentin Jones Invitational. Thief River Falls was a winner among the girls in that one with 143 points, followed closely by Roseau with 133, East Grand Forks 101, Warren 50, Warroad 43 and Marshall County Central 19. For the boys, Crookston dominated the field with 152 points, followed by Thief River Falls with 94, East Grand Forks 74, Warren 73, Marshall County Central 57, Warroad 38 and Roseau 33.

Another Thief River Falls-Roseau duel is expected to highlight the competition for the girls Tuesday, with the absence of Crookston and East Grand Forks teams maybe opening the doors for the Thief River Falls boys.

Thief River Falls boys participated in the Elks Track-O-Rama at Grand Forks Red River Friday, where Red River won it with 254 points, followed by Grand Forks Central with 81, Grafton 54, Crookston 54, Thief River Falls 53, Devils Lake 41, East Grand Forks 30 and East Grand Forks Sacred Heart 12.

Randy Swenson and Jeff Langan, the Prowlers' hurdlers, continued to run well with a 1-2 finish in the 110-meter hurdles where Swenson ran a 16.08 and Langan 16.50. And it would have been a 1-3 finish for them in the 300-meter hurdles, but Swenson, leading the race, hit a hurdle near the end, stumbled and finished fifth while Langan was second in 42.20.

"They're really doing well for us," said Thief River Falls coach Tim Olson in praise of his hurdlers. "Jeff has really come on strong, and Randy is starting to round into form."

Swenson was expected to be one of the top hurdlers in the area after a strong junior season a year ago with the Prowlers, and Langan has been a big addition as a transfer student from Goodridge. Olson says, "If things work out," the Prowlers could be looking for their first win of the 1984 season Tuesday.

Prowlers Second At Fosston Golf Meet

Roseau finished with a 16-stroke victory over runner-up Thief River Falls Thursday in the 10-team Fosston Invitational high school golf tournament for girls.

A four-player 415 team stroke total gave the Rams an easy win as they finished well ahead of Thief River Falls with a 431, Fosston 438, Crookston 441, Mahnomen 457, East Grand Forks 464, Walker 505, Bagley 519, Norman County West 573 and Clearbrook with an incomplete team.

Meet medalist was Jeannie Gibson of Cass Lake with an 83. Runner-up was Kristi Aabye of Norman County West with a 95 and third place went to Sue Wahlberg of Roseau with a 96.

Michelle Olson had a 98 to lead the Prowlers, while Kathy Reuter turned in a 105, Karin Wennberg 112, Kristen Pollick 116, Missy Bondy 129 and Jenny Spencer 142.

It was just the second outing of the 1984 season for the Prowlers, who were fifth in an eight-team field at their own invitational earlier in the week to start the schedule.

Coach Ruth Onkka's Prowlers were scheduled to compete today (Monday) in an invitational at Roseau beginning at 9 a.m. before hosting Crookston Tuesday in a 2:30 p.m. dual at the Thief River Country Club course.

Northwomen Are Beaten By Trojans

Match-up of two winless Minnesota Community College Conference Northwest Division women's fast pitch softball teams Thursday produced a doubleheader sweep for the University of Minnesota-Crookston over host Northland.

Northland saw its record slip to 0-8 in the weather-delayed 1984 home opener for the Northwomen as UMC snapped a season-opening nine-game losing streak by winning 12-1 and 17-6.

In the 12-1 opener, Northland out-hit UMC 9-3, but losing pitcher Lynette Huot surrendered 14 walks and the Northwomen committed five errors. UMC pitcher Lenore Sauter, meanwhile, didn't walk a batter and the Trojans committed only two errors.

Second game saw Northland pitcher Kari Koglund cut the walk figure down to just one, but UMC collected 23 hits off her in a 17-6 contest. The Northwomen had seven hits off Sue Schwalbeck, who gave up 11 walks. But Northland couldn't capitalize on those free passes and the Northwomen hurt themselves defensively by picking up five of the game's eight errors.

Offensively, Huot led the Northwomen with a 5-for-6 day at the plate.

Northwomen Lose Twice To Brainerd

Brainerd's offense pounded out 34 hits and scored 40 runs Saturday in a Minnesota Community College Conference women's fast pitch softball doubleheader sweep over Northland.

Visiting Brainerd won the opener 20-1 with a 16-2 base hit advantage and completed the Northwest Division sweep with a 20-5 victory in the nightcap by out-hitting the Northwomen 18-4.

Those losses dropped Northland to 0-10 for the year.

TRF Track Invitational Scheduled Tuesday . . .

TRF Girls Compete At Bemidji

Girls from the Iron Range area dominated the scoring Saturday at the Bemidji Invitational high school track meet.

Hibbing won the nine-team event with 111 points, followed by Grand Rapids with 103, Greenway-Coleraine 93, Bemidji 55, Roseau 46, Thief River Falls 42½, Deer River 23½, International Falls 12 and Blackduck 10.

Despite finishing well behind the leaders, Thief River Falls coach Tom Schafer felt it was a good outing for the Prowlers.

"We were very happy with the way we ran," he reported. "we figured points would be hard to come by, so we just wanted to concentrate on improving our times. I think we did that."

Top performances for the Prowlers, said Schafer, were second place finishes by Stacie Kruta in the 200-meter hurdles, Michelle Puetz in the 400-meter dash and the 800-meter relay team of Tricia Armstrong, Vikki Weigand, Bobbi Thompson and Puetz.

International Falls won the freshman portion of the meet with 146½ points, followed by Bemidji with 78, Deer River 69½, Grand Rapids 55, Thief River Falls 33, Roseau 29, Blackduck 19 and Greenway-Coleraine 15.

Second and final home meet of the 1984 season for the Prowlers is scheduled Tuesday when the annual Thief River Falls Invitational is planned for the track at Prowler Field. The eight-team field, which will include competition for both boys and girls, will include Roseau, Warroad, Marshall County Central, Red Lake Falls, Stephen, Thief River Falls, Hallock and Tri-County. The event starts at 4 p.m.

A week ago Thief River Falls girls won the Quentin Jones Invitational, while the Thief River Falls boys finished second behind Crookston in a seven-team field.

Over Middle River-MCC . . .

Prowlers Post 10-0 Shutout

Thief River Falls collected only five base hits, but the Prowlers' offense benefited from six errors, nine walks, four wild pitches and a passed ball Wednesday in a 10-0 high school baseball win over Middle River-Marshall County Central.

It was the fifth straight Thief River Falls win in the five-year-old series between the Class AA Prowlers and Class A visitors, but most of them have been considerably closer. A year ago Thief River Falls won by just a 6-5 score, but this time the youthful Middle River-Marshall County Central squad was no match for the veteran Prowlers, who were coming off an impressive 4-2 victory over Moorhead the day before.

A two-out, bad-hop single over third baseman Darin Rokke by Joe Blankenfeld keyed a three-run Thief River Falls first inning.

Winning pitcher Bob Huot got an RBI on an infield ground-out, while Tim Bottem drove in a run with a single to left field and scored himself on a wild pitch as the winners duplicated that first-inning three-run effort in the second when three errors kept things going.

Ryan Bakke drilled a two-run double into the left-center field gap, then scored himself on a sacrifice fly by Rick Spong as the Prowlers enjoyed their third three-run inning in the fourth.

They completed the shortened 10-run-rule victory in the fifth when Tim Nyland walked, moved to second on a wild pitch and scored when pinch-hitter Al Ness singled to right to end the game.

Huot and Ryan Drees combined to pitch a two-hitter. Huot, a righthander, went the first three innings and gave up only an infield single to Brian Cwikla, who beat out a roller to third to lead off the second inning. Drees, a lefthander, struck out five batters over the final two innings after giving up a ground ball single through the middle to Tom Neumann — the first batter he faced in the fourth inning.

Rustad To Play In Division II Event

Three University of North Dakota tennis players have been chosen for the second consecutive year to participate in the NCAA Division II national tournament, reports the UND Sports Information Department.

Kathy Hill, a sophomore from Bismarck; Dean Rudrud, a junior from Grand Forks; and Mitch Rustad, a senior from Thief River Falls, will make repeat appearances at the nationals, slated to start today (Monday). The women's tournament will be held in Chattanooga, Tenn. May 7-12 and the men's tournament is slated to run May 7-13 in San Marcos, Texas.

Hill, the No. 1 singles player for the Sioux, won her first round of 32 at the nationals last season before falling 6-3, 6-2 to Lisa Erghott of Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo. She finished her freshman season with a 19-4 record and second place finish in the North Central Conference. She was ranked 14th in the final NCAA Division II post-season singles poll.

This season Hill ended the regular season with an 11-3 record and captured the No. 1 singles NCC championship. Along with Erin Herman, a senior from Sherburn, Hill also captured the championship at the No. 1 doubles position.

UND women's team captured the North Central Conference title this season, the first time in the history of women's tennis at the school.

Chosen for the second consecutive year to the nationals from the men's team, Rudrud and Rustad will compete in singles and doubles competition. Last season they competed in both events but were defeated in the first round.

Rudrud, the No. 1 singles player for the Sioux this season, captured the North Central Conference championship in singles and combined with Rustad to repeat as the No. 1 doubles champions in the NCC.

As a freshman Rudrud played No. 4 singles for the Sioux, ending the season with a 16-4 record and runnerup in the NCC in singles and at No. 1 doubles. His sophomore year he recorded a 23-2 record and won the No. 2 singles and No. 1 doubles championships in the NCC. This season Rudrud posted a 20-4 record and again won championships at the No. 1 singles and No. 1 doubles positions.

Rudrud's career record at UND is 59-10 prior to entering the national tournament.

Rustad, the No. 2 singles player for the Sioux this season, finished the regular season with a 25-2 record and the No. 2 singles championship in the NCC. Rustad had played No. 1 singles the past three years before Rudrud moved up to the number one position this season.

As a freshman for the Sioux, Rustad finished the year with an 11-6 record and second place finishes at No. 1 singles and No. 1 doubles competition in the NCC. His sophomore year he posted a 13-6 record and finished second again at No. 1 singles and No. 2 doubles. As a junior he ended the season with a 22-3 record and was runnerup in the No. 1 singles competition of the NCC but teamed up with Rudrud to win the No. 1 doubles championship.

His best and last season for the Sioux has Rustad taking a 25-2 record to the national tournament. He captured both championships this season in the NCC at No. 2 singles and No. 1 doubles.

To date Rustad has a 71-17 career record for the Sioux.

In the latest NCAA Division II Midwest rankings, Rudrud is ranked seventh in singles and Rustad 13th. The doubles combination of Rudrud and Rustad is ranked fifth.

Sioux won the North Central Conference championship this season, the first time since 1979.

Campground At Chippewa Area Ready For '84

Most of the Chippewa National Forest's 27 campgrounds are ready for the opening of fishing season May 12, and won't close until sometime after Labor Day weekend. Nine campgrounds will remain open for free winter camping (with fewer amenities furnished) after their fall closing dates, according to park officials.

A new fee schedule for 1983 sets daily fees at most of the campgrounds at $5 to $8. Fees are based on the amount and quality of services at each camping area. At many campgrounds, an additional $3 will be charged for lakeshore and other premium units this year. These sites receive heavy use, requiring more maintenance. The additional fee helps to distribute use more evenly, and those who do not want to pay a higher price can choose sites not on the lakeshore. At some areas a lower differential fee will be charged to encourage more use of currently underused sites.

Two congressionally authorized passes provide a 50 per cent discount on fees at national forest campgrounds. Golden Age Passports are available at no cost to persons over 62 years of age, as are Golden Access Passports for blind and permanently disabled persons. These passports cannot be obtained by mail because applicants must show proof of their age or physical condition; but they are available at the Forest Supervisor's and Ranger District Offices.

Listed below are the Chippewa National Forest offices where more detailed information on campgrounds can be obtained. The campgrounds on each Ranger District are listed, with the dates that they will be open. The figures in parentheses show the number of family sites in each campground and the daily campsite fee. Where two or three fees are listed, the higher ($8 or $9) fee is for lakeshore units; lower fees ($2 or $3) listed are for low use sites.

LEAPING IN the air for a high throw from pitcher Bob Huot, Thief River Falls first baseman Gary Cornell was able to come down with the ball in his glove, but the umpire ruled that Middle River-Marshall County Central runner Jon Kragness crossed the bag before Cornell was able to apply the tag in the second inning of Wednesday's high school baseball game. Kragness was credited with a sacrifice bunt on the play as he moved teammate Brian Cwikla from second to third, with Huot also charged with an error. The Prowlers won it 10-0.

1. Please explain the Minnesota shoreland management program.

Minnesota shoreland management act encourages the wise use and development of shoreland areas to preserve their economic and natural resource values and to enhance the quality of our surface waters.

Shoreland management act is actually two separate pieces of legislation. The original act, Laws of Minnesota 1969, Chapter 777, was passed during the 1969 session of the legislature to provide guidance for the wise use and development of shorelands in unincorporated areas, the shoreland management act was amended to include municipalities, Laws of Minnesota 1973, Chapter 379. Basically, the shoreland management act requires the Department of Natural Resources to promulgate regulations which are to be implemented through county and municipal land use controls. These regulations provide local units of government with minimum dimensional and performance standards for development of shoreland areas. The act authorizes the commissioner of natural resources to adopt an ordinance for any local unit of government that fails to adopt a shoreland management ordinance which meets DNR standards. The act also states that DNR standards are considered to be minimum development standards and that local units of government have the option of adopting more restrictive regulations. Contact the city or county for specific regulations.

2. What is the steel shot decision?

It is estimated that about 2 million ducks die in the United States each year from lead poisoning that results when the birds swallow spent shotgun pellets while feeding in fields and on marsh bottoms. Thus, the steel shot decision. To stop the accumulation of lead in areas where it is poisoning ducks, Secretary of the Interior, Thomas S. Kleppe decided that steel shot ammunition would be phased in for waterfowl hunting on selected areas in the Atlantic Flyway in 1976, extended to selected areas in the Mississippi Flyways in 1977, and then to portions of the Central and Pacific Flyways in 1978. The progressive implementation of the program westward was designed to allow time for ammunition manufacturers to develop production capabilities. Steel shot zones are those areas in which hunting activity and the resulting lead deposits are most concentrated. The use of steel shot will apply to the hunting of ducks, geese, swans and coots because the hunting of these species is believed to be the source of most of the lead shot deposited in wetland areas.

sixth for a 17-10 game.

UMC finished with 10 hits to go along with eight Northland errors. Northland matched its first game hit total of seven, and UMC committed five errors in the poorly-played game. Dahl, the Northland starter, lasted just one inning but still was charged with the loss. Bruce Nephew finished up. Paul Kalbrenner was the winner for UMC, with relief help from Peterson.

At Fergus Falls Wednesday, Northland out-hit the Spartans 9-4 in the opener, and had an early lead before the errors took their toll. Keith Huerd had two hits, a sacrifice and three RBI's for the Northmen.

Fergus Falls was an easier 14-3 winner in the nightcap with a 14-7 base hit edge in the five-inning affair off two Northland pitchers — Kent Kainz and Dahl. Northland managed to cut its error total down to just one, but Fergus Falls completed an error-free doubleheader.

Wednesday's games completed the first round of the 1984 Northwest Division schedule, with Brainerd enjoying a 6-0 record, Fergus Falls 4-2, UMC 2-4 and Northland 0-6.

Northland has home doubleheaders remaining with Brainerd on Wednesday, May 16, and with Fergus Falls on Saturday, May 19.

MR-MCC Wins 4-2 Ball Game On Thursday

Dean Hjelle, in his first appearance of the 1984 season, pitched a three-hitter Thursday, striking out 10, as Middle River-Marshall County Central defeated Kennedy-Hallock 4-2 in a District 32 high school baseball game at Kennedy.

Hjelle, the lone senior on the Middle River-Marshall County Central team, also ignited a two-run seventh inning effort that snapped a 2-2 tie when he singled with two out. Brian Cwikla then walked and Hjelle crossed the plate with the winning run on an error on a ball hit by Tom Neumann. Darrin Peterson's RBI single produced an insurance run.

It was the second win in five starts for Middle River-Marshall County Central, scheduled to host Warroad Tuesday at 4:30 p.m. at Newfolden.

It was a brief one-game winning streak for Middle River-Marshall County Central, a 13-0 loser at Roseau Friday.

Roseau had a 9-4 base hit edge and had just one error while the visitors were charged with four.

Many Americans Must Cope With Disabilities

by David M. Maxfield
Smithsonian News Service

Here's a simple experiment: put your hands in a pair of heavy socks and try to turn these pages. Suddenly, an insignificant, everyday act becomes next to impossible.

There are countless challenges routinely faced by some 35 million Americans with physical and mental disabilities. For blind, visually impaired, deaf, hard-of-hearing or emotionally disturbed individuals and for people with developmental or mobility disabilities, life's little tasks can easily become demoralizing hurdles that lead to feelings of exclusion and isolation.

But steps now are quickening across the nation to eliminate bothersome barriers from the man-made environment — still generally designed to accommodate only the able-bodied — and many of the changes have ramifications for all Americans. These are some actions of recent years:

- By an act of Congress, 1983-1992 has been declared the decade of disabled persons, targeted for improving education, housing, transportation, medical research and other programs for these citizens.
- Major laws have been passed since the late 1960s, including a statute requiring that all public buildings constructed or renovated with federal funds be accessible to handicapped persons.
- Specifications that show and describe the best-known plans for everything from elevator controls to the kitchen sink to accommodate disabled users have been published by the American national standards institute inc., on the basis of agreements reached among manufacturers, sellers and consumers.
- Symposia, such as one on Scandinavian design at the Cooper-Hewitt museum, the Smithsonian's national museum of design in New York City, have called attention to the design needs of disabled persons, a field, one authority says, where "real inroads" have been made in recent years.

Related to this awareness are new products — including tableware and sports equipment, clothing and walking aids — coming out of design studios; the Scandinavian nations are especially innovative, and greater concern is being paid now to public facilities.

The new Law Courts building in Vancouver, British Columbia, for example, is approached from the street by a monumental stairway traversed by ramps. Disabled visitors are "integrated" into the main approach to the building, not sent to a side or back entrance, John Salmen, an architect and technical director for the national center for a barrier free environment, explains. "Plus, there is this wonderful, sculptural effect of the steps and ramps," he adds.

At the Smithsonian, the world's largest museum complex, sign language and oral interpreters are offered upon request for all programs, according to Janice Majewski, a special education coordinator. "We're one of the few museums to offer this," she notes, "but we still need to give more attention to eliminating other program and physical barriers."

Not the least of the recent advances concerns attitudes about — and on the part of — disabled people, a change often reflected in small but significant ways. "The stigma of taking advantage of handicapped parking spaces by using a wheelchair sticker on a car is coming down quickly," Salmen observes. "Older people, in fact, are seeing its value and starting to take advantage of it."

In New York City, designer Katherine Stephens recently squared off at some old attitudes when she was invited to participate in planning a "show house" to benefit the March of Dimes birth defects foundation.

"This project was so intriguing, but from a designer's viewpoint it was very high risk," she says of the room she designed in the house where polio-stricken Franklin Roosevelt lived from 1908 to 1928. "The problem is not the handicapped but the public's reaction to the handicapped. I included a wheelchair, one of those made for people who play tennis. Usually, when people see a wheelchair, they turn away, but not here. The room was red and done in a very glamorous way. It was a room for a very vital man."

Clearly, interest in upgrading environments and products has emerged from what one California museum officer recalls were the "dark ages" before 1973. That was the year when Congress enacted a law declaring that a disabled persons could not be barred "solely on the basis of his handicap" from participating in any program receiving federal aid.

Law was viewed as a "major civil rights statement," according to its author, John Wodach, a justice department attorney. "It was designed to take 1950s and '60s concepts and apply them to disabled persons." Coupled with this action was growing interest in design standards by, among others, disabled veterans of World War II, Korea and Vietnam as well as by victims of the 1950s polio epidemic. But then came the so-called period of the "warring factions," when builders, architects, government agencies and disabled persons themselves disagreed over design approaches.

With the adoption of the American national standards institute specifications, an era of greater harmony has arrived. Still, controversy continues over how to tailor transportation systems for disabled users. And, Salmen points out, the "consensus based standards," applying to both home and public environments, are voluntary until they are adopted by industry and government agencies. Furthermore, some of the states that have adopted these standards have failed to mandate effective enforcement procedures.

Housing and access to buildings and transportation systems — along with attitudes and job opportunities — are major concerns for many disabled persons. Europeans lead in product design, but "we're the real testing ground, though more in the architectural area," Salmen says. "The Europeans have a problem: How do you create access to a sacred old cathedral? So they've gone for products and services, we for the environmental."

He adds: "There are few buildings that are totally barrier-free to all disabled persons. Almost all have some problems because it is difficult to integrate these specialized design concepts for maximum use by everyone." On the other hand, he continues, "nearly every project now takes these individuals into consideration." Town Square Park in St. Paul, is cited by critics as a good building for disabled visitors because, as at the Vancouver courts, they are integrated into the central circulation flow of the building, in this case, elevators and escalators built around a dramatic waterfall.

Horizon House, a unit of The New York university medical center, was renovated recently so that patients and their families could become accustomed during overnight stays together to living with a handicap. The house's four rooms — kitchen, living room, bath and bedroom — were equipped with a variety of devices, from simple items like stove-top mirrors to a state-of-the-art, bedside environmental-control system that allows a nonambulatory patient to control lights, television, even the front door by puffing into a tube hooked to a computer.

A booklet about the project, published by Whirlpool, the principal sponsor, notes that "modifying an existing kitchen can be as simple as removing cabinet doors and adding a hinged counter at a comfortable height for seated work." And the installation of cabinets with pullout bins and shelves — rather than units with stationary shelves — has application for both the disabled person and everyone else who has ever tried to find a pot or pan at the back of a bottom cupboard.

As for the Europeans, they've come up with a long line of products, including a sailboat for mobility-impaired persons; it has high freeboards as well as ample space for storing wheelchairs. A plate with a high edge on one side, shallow on the opposite, was devised by a Swedish firm to help those with rheumatism and others through meals, often a fatiguing task. Also for these people, a special pen was designed by another Swedish firm. Functional in its thickness, it is also attractive. "These products," a designer says, "should not draw attention to the fact that they are handicap aids."

Creativity, commitment and common sense are watchwords in planning programs and facilities for those with disabilities, the professionals say. Moreover, they point out that where progress has been made, the products, facilities and programs devised for disabled users often are likely to benefit everyone. "Designers had designed for the 'mythical' person," Salmen says, "but especially now, with an aging population, barrier free designs are good for all." The Smithsonian's Majewski adds, "Anything we have done has improved communication in general. Simplified exhibit labels, for example, are helpful for everyone."

SMALL BUSINESS WEEK is being observed nationally from May 6 to 13, and Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce President Roger Tunberg and Executive Director Jane Mackenroth spent some time last week making plans for local activities. Tours of several small businesses have been arranged for area junior and senior high school students, and elementary students are being asked to construct posters depicting their favorite small business. In his official proclamation of small business week, President Ronald Reagan commented, "America's strength lies in the ingenuity and perseverence of its people. No other group of Americans better exemplifies these qualities than the nation's small business owners, who contribute daily to our economic well-being." Other groups which would be interested in making tours of local businesses may make arrangements through the Chamber of Commerce office.

National Pet Week Held May 6 To 12

"Caring People Care for Animals" is the theme of national pet week, May 6 to 12, sponsored locally by the Minnesota veterinary medical association.

"One purpose of pet week is to increase awareness of the many phychological and physiological benefits of pet ownership," says the association's president, Dr. James A. Libby. "Everyone knows that pets provide companionship. They also help ease the 'empty nest syndrome' for senior citizens, and teach youngsters about responsibility."

"Recent evidence suggests that pets have a therapeutic effect on the physically and mentally handicapped. Pets make some people feel safe and secure in their homes, and they may stimulate some people to exercise because pets need exercise too," he said.

Another thrust of the local campaign is to promote responsible pet ownership. According to Dr. Libby, this means providing food, shelter, love, and proper health care, as well as making the pet a good citizen.

"Obeying our local leash and licensing laws, vaccinating dogs and cats against rabies, making sure pets don't make excessive noise, and cleaning up after our pets are all ways to ensure better pet-community relations," notes Dr. Libby

Local Students Join European Study Program

Tom Bjorkman and Steven Saetre, both of Thief River Falls are two of 202 students at Concordia college in Moorhead who will participate in five-week educational seminars beginning May 7 as part of the college's 16th annual May seminars abroad program.

Bjorkman, a senior majoring in business administration, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bjorkman. Saetre, a senior majoring in international relations, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Saetre. They will both participate in the seminar titled "The Renaissance."

"The Renaissance" is the seminar offered by the English department at Concordia. Led by Dr. Gordon Lell, professor of English, 24 students will experience the art and literature of the Renaissance by attending productions of plays by Shakespeare and other Renaissance dramatists along with touring art galleries and visiting historical sites of Europe. The trip begins in London and continues through the Netherlands, Italy, West Germany, Switerland and France before returning to the United States June 8.

This seminar is one of 12 sponsored by Concordia college in the May seminar abroad program this year. Each summer focuses on a different academic area.

Countries to be included in the seminar itineraries are Austria, England, South Africa, East and West Germany, Czechoslovakia, Israel, Greece, Italy, Crete, Sweden, Norway and Netherlands. Students will experience the cultures of various countries through museum visits, discussions, homestays, attendance at cultural events and exploration of ancient ruins.

Required for participation in a seminar is enrollment in a pre-seminar course during the second semester of the academic year, which provides the background to help students make the most of their experiences in these foreign countries.

Zutz Testifies On Legislation In Washington

Requesting "special consideration for very special circumstances", Marvin Zutz, secretary-treasurer of the Minnesota association of wheat growers, from Red Lake Falls, testified in Washington last week in support of House resolution 4610 which would provide aid to farmers in those counties that have been hit with repeated disasters.

This legislation, which was introduced by Congressman Arlan Stangeland, was heard by the House agriculture subcommittee on conservation, credit and rural development. It would allow those producers in counties which had three consecutive years of disasters, to consolidate their loans into one long-term, low-interest loan to improve their cash flow and regain control of their operation.

"Producers always gamble with weather," said Zutz, "but with prolonged problems, through no fault of their own, they must borrow to continue operating, and watch their equity being eaten away, with little or no means to repay."

Zutz noted that after several years of problems, even the best producer is put into a financial bind. Secretary Block has said that up to four per cent of the nation's farmers would be forced out of business this year. In two counties in Northwestern Minnesota, it is estimated that up to 40 per cent of the farmers had difficulty qualifying for FmHA loans because of lack of equity or poor cash flow. "These hardships are not only felt on the farm," said Zutz, "but also by our businessmen on main street in the rural communities in the area."

Zutz also reported that if this large percentage of producers was forced out of business, placing a glut of land and equipment on the market and driving collateral values even lower, it would also drive other farmers to the brink, and have effects far beyond the area to which it is currently confined.

To protect farmers outside of declared disaster areas, Zutz also urged that provisions be included in the proposed legislation to require the interest rate to be increased, or the repayment schedule moved ahead, when producers in disaster areas return to a sound financial basis. This would assure that those producers who received this special consideration would not have an unfair advantage in the future over those farmers who do not qualify.

Hearings Set For Minnesota Barley Raisers

Two public hearings are scheduled for Monday, June 4, on a marketing order proposed by the new Minnesota barley research and promotion council for crop and livestock reporting Districts 1 and 4 according to Rollin M. Dennistoun, deputy commissioner, Minnesota department of agriculture.

Hearings to be conducted by the Minnesota department of agriculture will both be held on June 4.

First one will be held in Breckenridge at city hall in the city council chambers at 9 a.m. and continue until all interested persons have had the opportunity to comment.

Second public hearing will be held in Crookston at the Northwest Experiment station, Agricultural Research center auditorium. It will open at 7 p.m. and will continue until all persons have had opportunity to comment.

Proposed marketing order provisions to be discussed include the amount of the checkoff, possible exemptions or additions and the checkoff implementation date if the referendum approves the final marketing order.

Following the hearings, the Minnesota barley research and promotion council must meet to review the hearing comments and consider public revisions and the final form of the marketing order to be submitted to referendum.

If changes or additions or substance are made, an additional hearing on the amended or supplemented promotional order must be held.

Barley growers are the eleventh Minnesota farm commodity producer group to organize under the state enabling law to self-finance and manage a research and promotion campaign for the purpose of strengthening the economic welfare of the barley industry.

City Council Approves Ammonia Tank Location

Over objections to potential safety hazards, Thief River Falls city council voted last night to permit installation of 40,000 gallon anhydrous ammonia tank within 200 feet of a residential area, on grounds that denial of the permit would present a financial hardship to Farmers Co-op Grain and Seed.

Farmers Co-op was represented at the meeting by Gary Clow, who noted that the company already has an 18,000 gallon tank at the site, located west of Dewey Avenue and south of the Soo Line roundhouse. That tank was installed 11 years ago, when regulations only required a 50 foot distance from residential areas. He noted that only one minor accident had occurred at the site in that period of time, resulting in chemical burns to one person.

John Campbell from the state department of agriculture was questioned regarding regulations for commercial ammonia storage. He noted that although the department encourages new plants to build away from residential areas, and requires a 400 foot distance to the nearest residence, they would not interfere with expansion of an existing business site.

The danger with ammonia is that it must combine with water to become chemically stable, and reacts with moisture in the body as well as in the soil, where it is used as a fertilizer to add nitrogen. Campbell noted that since the gas is lighter than air, is usually dissipates within a short distance when a spill occurs.

Alderman Bill Penning attempted to minimize the hazard, noting that nitrogen (which is a component of ammonia much as carbon is a component of gasoline) makes up a major portion of the atmosphere. He commented that accidents were rare, with the majority occurring in the field, where farmers merely moved upwind until the spill had dissipated.

Alderman Ken Murphy questioned what happened if people were unable to get out of the way, or weather conditions kept the gas from dissipating. Noting that he had had personal experience with anhydrous ammonia, "and I've got the scarred lungs to prove it," Murphy commented that he would like to see all of the tanks moved out of the city. Indicating that he did not want to take a position that was harmful to business, Murphy said that he felt that safety should be the primary concern.

Responding to questioning, Clow indicated that the increased storage capacity was necessary for the company to be competitive with other fertilizer dealers in the area and within the city, who have storage capacities in excess of 30,000 gallons. He added that relocating their plant would be a "severe financial hardship" for the company.

A motion to deny the permit failed, with only Milan Borsheim, Don Goodrich and Murphy voting for denial. When a motion to grant the permit was made by Penning, those same three votes were cast against, and the issue passed 5-3.

Another issue which caused considerable discussion was a petition from the Eagles Club, requesting vacation of Fourth Street between Davis Avenue and Red Lake Boulevard. Al

Essay Winner Tells About Soil Saving

(Editor's NOTE: Pennington county soil and water conservation district recently awarded prizes for the best essays submitted in its essay contest. Winner of the senior division was Cindi Solem, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Solem and a senior at Lincoln high school in Thief River Falls. Her first place essay on "Save Our Farmland" is published below. First place essay by Gayle Borchert in the junior division of the contest will be published in Monday's edition of the Times.)

by Cindi Solem

A large part of the true wealth of the United States is its soil and water. If their value is not yet fully appreciated, it is because we have had enough soil, and usually enough water, to grow all the food and fiber we needed, and then some. Most years, we have supplied ourselves in abundance, fed the people of many foreign nations, and still had enough left over to create a surplus.

But our soil and water resources are not without limit. They are finite, as we have been reminded on occasion by gullies, exhausted land, dust storms, and drought. Despite these periodic lessons, however, we continue to waste these resources, diminish them, abuse them.

Something must be done about this land destruction. Fortunately, for our standard of living and foreign trade balance, there is more high quality land available for agriculture in the United States than in any other country in the world. If we want to continue our high status, something must be done to save our farmland.

As population and export demand increases, it is likely that at some point in the future the United States will begin planting more cropland each year, not less. When that happens, how much cropland reserve will remain?

According to the SCS National Resource Inventories, in 1977 there were about 127 million acres with a high or medium potential for conversion to cropland. This is in addition to our current cropland base of 413 million acres.

This potential cropland is

He was fined $300 and 30 days with $200 and jail stayed on condition that he be placed on probation for one year, be a law abiding citizen and refrain from use of alcohol.

Ricky Skaggs To Headline County Fair

Ricky Skaggs, considered one of the fastest rising stars in country music, will be the headline entertainer for the Pennington county fair in Thief River Falls. He will present two performances on Thursday, July 19, at 7 and 9:30 p.m.

Pennington county fair association officers were able to secure a contract with Skaggs after the previously scheduled Don Williams withdrew due to health reasons.

Tickets will go on sale next week at Thune-Upham Insurance agency in Thief River Falls with reserved seating priced at $11 and $9. All seats sold for the two performances will be reserved.

At 28 years of age, Skaggs has performed with a number of top country groups and artists including Flatt & Scruggs, the Stanley Brothers, the Country Gentlemen, J.D. Crow and the New South and Emmylou Harris. His first album, "Waitin' For the Sun To Shine" stayed on national country LP charts for almost a full year. His second, "Highways and Heartaches", includes such songs as "Heartbroke", "Nothing Can Hurt You", "You've Got a Lover" and "I Wouldn't Change You If I Could".

In 1982 he received five separate nominations in the country music association awards balloting, tieing Willie Nelson and Alabama for most nominations, including male vocalist of the year and entertainer of the year categories. He had previously won the top new male vocalist trophy from the Academy of Country Music.

North Country Auto Showtime This Weekend

Entries during the past several days have increased entries for the fifth annual North Country auto showtime beyond the 100 mark, assuring the public of another quality exhibition of cars, vans, pickups and motorcycles, according to the sponsoring Prairie Schooners street rod club.

The show will be conducted Saturday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., at the Pennington county fairgrounds. ## Loan Progress By FmHA Called "Significant"

Significant progress has been made by the Thief River Falls FmHA office in handling farm program loan requests, according to Russ Bjorhus, state FmHA director, who notes that by working overtime, with assistance from additional staff people, they have processed 401 farm loans for a total of $15,881,200.

Loan processing is really a two-step process, according to Bjorhus, who notes that the first step, receiving and processing the loans to the point of approval, has been accomplished for nearly all except the most recent applications.

The second step, closing the loan or disbursing funds, is mainly a clerical process, but requires extra effort due to the complexity of most of the loan requests and loan security requirements. He notes, however, that there are 11 clerical personnel, all working overtime, to speed up the closing of loans.

Bjorhus pledged that FmHA personnel will continue to schedule loan closings as quickly as possible to get much needed dollars out to the farmers.

NCC Musicians To End Concert Tour Here Sun.

Other stops on the tour will be made on Friday morning at Crookston Central high school, Friday afternoon at Norman County West high school, Saturday noon at West Acres Mall in Fargo, ND, and Saturday afternoon at Columbia Mall in Grand Forks, ND.

Selections by the community band will include music by Sousa, Gershwin, and Bach; chamber choir will perform works ranging from renaissance literature to choral jazz; and the jazz ensemble will perform a tribute to the late Count Basie, as well as such current hits as "memory" and "Flashdance".

Highlighting the program will be solo performances by NCC music majors Khris Radke, Patti Nelson and Shawn Langlie.

BIDDERS TURNED OUT Sunday afternoon for the second day of the auction sale conducted by the Thief River Falls kidney foundation. Although Saturday evening's auction crowd was sparse and the sale was stopped an hour early at 8 p.m., the Sunday attendance resulted in a good sale. Activities conducted by the foundation at the city sports arena, which included a white elephant sale in addition to the auction, resulted in more than $7,000 being added to the kidney foundation's assistance fund. Incorporated locally as a non-profit charitable organization, the foundation provides funds to assist area families with travel and lodging expense connected with kidney problems including dialysis and transplants.

Horticulture Awareness Week To Be Observed

Moccasin garden club will be observing Horticulture Awareness week, May 13-19, according to a decision made at the April meeting of the club held at the home of Eva Lendobeja.

According to a communication received from Glenn H. Ray, executive secretary of the Minnesota State Horticultural society, garden clubs throughout the state have been asked to observe the week by participation in project "1000 Blooms."

Ray stated "In order for more Minnesotans to become acquainted with the importance of plants in our lives, especially those flowers that uplift our spirits, we are asking that each socelty garden club present fresh flower bouquets or arrangements to radio, television and newspaper offices during the week." To impress upon the media that all Minnesotans can have flowers, "if they garden for it," Ray said bouquets or arrangements should feature fresh flowers from the gardens, and not wild flowers.

In discussing the project, it was noted that to participate, the club would be needing flowers for two stations and one newspaper. The drawback was the shortage of blooming plants in the gardens as this time of the year. To compensate, a suggestion was given that house plants be used if necessary.

Selected to serve on the project were Beatrice Wilson, Joan Nelson and Inga Geving.

President Olga Nelson presided at the meeting which began with reading the gardener's creed and prayer. The secretary's report was given by Eva Lendobeja.

Information on insecticides and fungicides was given by Connie Manke. She stated that healthy plants, which receive good fertilizers and have proper growing conditions, are not apt to need insecticides or fungicides.

Mrs. Nelson requested that anyone, when thinning gardens, should contact Inga Geving, as her gardens were destroyed due to water problems.

Lunch was served by the hostess.

Members attending were Olga Nelson, Agnes Tieman, Beatrice Wilson, Alice Lendobeja, Christina Anenson, Connie Manke, Inga Geving and Eva Lendobeja.

Guests were Valerie Torstveit, Ellen Peterson, Helen Olson, Kathy Alberg and her daughter, Desiree.

Local Legion Auxiliary To Sell Poppies

American Legion auxiliary will conduct its annual poppy days May 17 and 18 in Thief River Falls, according to Lyla Quam, chairman of the committee for Ecklund-Holmstrom unit 117.

"Wear a poppy with pride, remembering the sacrifices of many — maybe a member of your own family or a friend," Mrs. Quam said. "As you meet our auxiliary members on the street selling the bright red poppies, be happy that you can share in the lives of the disabled American veterans who made the colorful flowers."

Mrs. Quam pointed out that material for the poppies is furnished by the American Legion auxiliary and the poppies are hand made by disabled veterans in hospitals and workshops in 40 states. They are paid for each poppy they make, helping them contribute to the support of their families.

The local committee chairman quoted the slogan on a fifth grade student's poppy poster which reminded: "They Gave! Will You?"

Essay Winner Tells About Soil Saving

not standing idle, waiting for the plow. It is already in other uses: three-fourths are grazing land and one-fourth is in forest. Conversion to cropland would mean a significant loss in forage and wood-producing areas and, in some places, wildlife habitat.

About 75 per cent of the potential cropland has one or more soil limitations that would have to be dealt with before conversion to crops.

Even in this country, most soils can't be, or shouldn't be, used for growing crops. That includes the soils making up about two-thirds of the non-federal land of the United States. This is reason enough to preserve the land we have.

Erosion of the soil is a major problem in the loss of our soil. Some soil erosion is inevitable. It becomes a threat to productivity only when the annual rate of erosion exceeds the rate at which new soil can be created. On most cropland, pasture and forest, an erosion rate of four or five tons per acre is "acceptable" because the eroded soil is replaced through natural processes. Fortunately for the future of America's farmlands, many practical systems are available for controlling soil erosion. Two million land users now work through local conservation districts to apply such systems on their farms and ranches.

Among the newest and most successful techniques for erosion control are various forms of conservation tillage, in which residue from a previous crop is left in the field. In one form — no-till — the land is not even plowed. Conservation tillage also uses less fuel than conventional tillage, but requires much more careful crop management.

Pastureland is used chiefly to produce domesticated forage plants for livestock. In 1977 there were 116 million acres of pastureland in the United States, a 13.7 per cent increase from 1967. Nearly five million acres were irrigated.

Well-managed pastureland does not suffer much from sheet or rill erosion. It is only when it is seriously depleted by drought, or grazing, close mowing or insect damage that the soil becomes susceptible to erosion.

Soil erosion by wind can be a severe problem, especially on sandy soils. The costs of wind erosion are shared by all. The taxpayer pays for removing eroded soil from roadside ditches. Farmers may have to clean out drainage and shallow field ditches. In some cases, blowing soil damaged young crops.

There are several major principles of wind erosion control.

(1) Establish and maintain vegetation and vegetative residues to protect the soil.

(2) Reduce field widths across the prevailing wind direction by establishing wind barriers, such as field windbreaks or trap strips at designated intervals to reduce wind velocity and soil avalanching.

(3) Produce, or bring to the soil surface, clods large enough to resist the wind force by using a chisel or other tillage implement.

While these principles of control apply everywhere, the usefulness of each varies with local cropping systems, climate, soil and land-use conditions.

Shelterbelts are used today to reduce wind velocity, wind erosion and mechanical damage to plants. Shelterbelts, often called windbreaks, are barriers of trees and shrubs planted to reduce wind velocity, evaporation and wind erosion; protect crops; control snowdrifting; furnish cover and food for wildlife; or protect homes, farm buildings and livestock. They are planted across and on the margins of agricultural fields or near farm buildings.

Minnesota's farmland is also an endangered resource. Minnesota is literally losing ground. Over 100 million tons of topsoil erode yearly from the state's cropland.

Minnesota is losing ground in another way. Annually, 49,000 acres of farmland are lost to urban development. Daily, an average of 134 acres of cropland is bulldozed for highways, housing development, and other non-agricultural uses. One-third of this converted land is prime farmland, the state's richest and most productive land.

What impact does this soil loss and conversion of farmland have on you? Plenty. Farmers have to plant on less productive land, which requires more fertilizer and other additional costs. As the farmer's costs go up, so do the consumer's.

The tide is turning, however, in Minnesota. Instead of losing ground, we're gaining ground by various conservation methods and prudent land use policies. Farmers are installing grassed waterways, terraces and windbreaks, and are using conservation tillage to prevent the vast gullies and dust storms. Also, landowners and state and local officials are working together to preserve and save our farmlands.

Council OKs Location Of Ammonia Tank

Bacon, representing the club, noted that with the closing of Red Lake Boulevard when the Third Street improvement project is done by the Minnesota department of transportation, increased traffic on Fourth Street and Davis Avenue would create a safety hazard. He referred to two recent close calls, in which children crossing Davis had been endangered. Noting that truck parking outside the recycling center created a visibility problem, he said, "It can only get worse with the closing of Red Lake Boulevard.

Richard Erickson, who lives on Red Lake Boulevard, also spoke in favor of the closing, expressing concern for the safety of his children.

Dr. Thomas Dimich, who has an office building on Red Lake Boulevard, just off Third Street, testified that the closure would be a hardship for him and the businesses which he rents space to, noting that when the Third Street access if closed, Fourth Street would be his only "accessible access."

Consulting engineer David Kildahl testified that closing of Fourth Street would not be advisable since traffic forced down to Fifth Street would be facing another hazardous situation, with a forked intersection of Dewey and Red Lake Boulevard there.

Noting that the bid letting for the Third Street project had been moved back to February of 1985, council voted to deny the request for closure, noting that they could study the issue further, and the petition could be resubmitted at a later date.

In other business, the council heard a report from the Nordhagen family, noting that they were interested in locating their proposed solid waste processing plant on property presently owned by the city near the former Toroq building. They noted that they were still pursuing funding for the project and would keep the city informed regarding further developments.

Area Cities And Township Given Grants

State Senator LeRoy Stumpf of Plummer has announced approval by the state of three separate small city development grants for three areas in northwestern Minnesota totaling over $1 million.

"The state department of energy and economic development (EED) has announced that an award of $87,892.36 has been made to St. Vincent township in Kittson county for land acquisition flood control project," Stumpf said this week. "I also was told that second year grants have been approved for the city of Red Lake Falls ($454,801) and for the city of Alvarado ($470,000) for their own community development programs."

According to EED commissioner Mark Dayton, another $466,000 has been reserved from next year's grant program for the final year of the Alvarado project.

"These grants were approved for only 25 cities around the state out of a total of 185 competing for this rehabilitation assistance," Stumpf said. "The people and officials from our area who applied for and secured these grants and should be congratulated for their efforts in gaining this funding, which will be so important to the future development of their areas."

Waste Disposal Site Suspension Is Explained

Legislation recently enacted by the Minnesota legislature suspending the waste management board's search for a hazardous waste disposal site and requiring the board to oversee new programs and undertake new studies "will enable the board to make a realistic, precise and definitive recommendation on the need for a disposal facility in Minnesota's overall hazardous waste management program," says a board spokesman.

Tom Johnson, assistant to the waste management board chairman, explained that the measure enacted by the legislature April 24 suspends the board's activities in evaluating candidate hazardous waste disposal sites, and requires the board to report on the hazardous waste treatment facilities that will serve Minnesota industries and the amount of treatment "residuals" that will require disposal.

"The legislation does not halt or freeze our process, but suspends it," Johnson said. "Prior to the enactment of the legislation, decision makers at the board and the legislature were beginning to recognize that it would be advantageous to step back from the disposal siting process, take stronger action in other areas of hazardous waste management, and realistically determine whether the state needs a disposal facility."

VOLUNTEERS working with the Thief River Falls kidney foundation conducted the organization's annual auction sale Saturday and Sunday at the Thief River Falls sports arena. While Pam Kolden of Auction 2 Sell in Thief River Falls does the auctioneering, Merle Lindberg holds up the item being sold and Sam Honebrink waits at right to bring the item to the successful bidder. Seated at left is Web Maves who assisted the clerking as well as soliciting many of the items donated for the auction.

The new legislation, Johnson said, funds "strong new programs" recommended by the board, allocating $1.1 million for programs to promote hazardous waste reduction and treatment facilities, to request specific proposals from treatment facility developers, and to develop a statewide hazardous waste collection system. The measure also authorized the sale of $10 million in revenue bonds to finance loans to developers of new hazardous waste processing facilities.

"As the board implements these programs to help develop alternatives to land disposal, it will also develop a report on the residual wastes that would remain after processing and waste reduction," Johnson added. "Those wastes could eventually require secure, long-term disposal.

"In addition, the board will develop an overall estimate of need dor hazardous waste disposal, and undertake a study of the economic feasibility of a hazardous waste disposal facility in Minnesota," he noted. "The results of these studies, and the board's recommendations on the future of the disposal siting process, will be issued in late 1985."

Johnson said that, based on the information and studies provided by the board, the 1986 Minnesota legislature will decide whether to re-start the suspended disposal siting process. If the process if reinitiated by the legislature, the final site selection would be expected by 1988.

"The first emphasis, however, will be on waste reduction and treatment, and the board's new programs to promote alternatives to disposal," Johnson said. "With information from developers who would propose new treatment facilities, and with the results of our other studies, the board will be able to determine the waste residues that would result from treatment, how much would remain for final disposal, and the wastes that would be exported from or imported to Minnesota.

"Armed with those facts, the board will be able to make sound, realistic recommendations in 1985," Johnson said. "With those recommendations, lawmakers and decisionmakers — removed from the emotions of the siting process — will be able to agree on Minnesota's hazardous waste disposal policy."

Belmont At Seminar In Minneapolis

Larry Belmont, owner-operator of Belmont Funeral Home in Thief River Falls, recently attended a comprehensive seminar on death education in Minneapolis.

The seminar was designed to help funeral directors examine perceptions about their own deaths and to become more sensitive to the feelings of the families they serve.

Curriculum of the four-day workshop contained information on how funeral directors can develop alternatives to the traditional funeral where individual needs may not be met. A new concept in funerals called "life appreciation services" focuses on the lifestyle, accomplishments and personal convictions of the deceased. Funerals are individually planned to help the family and friends remember the life of the deceased in the most positive way. The funeral may be held in church, funeral chapel, garden or any other place that provides memories of the deceased for the family.

"The traditional funeral is a beneficial experience for the majority of survivors and it should be emphasized that the "life appreciation service" is not necessarily a replacement of the traditional service, but rather an enhancement of it. It is designed specifically to help the funeral have more meaning and be of greater value to the family and friends.

SBA's Answer Desk Continues To Be Popular

Prospective and present small business owners in Minnesota continue to use the U.S. Small Business administration's toll free "answer desk" telephone service to get help on problems connected with their business and with the federal government.

From October 1983 through February 1984, for example, 196 Minnesota residents called the toll-free number, 800-368-5855. Of the total calls, 94 callers requested information on financial assistance according to Celso C. Moreno, district director of SBA's Minneapolis office.

"SBA's 'answer desk' provides a valuable and popular resource to more and more small business persons in and around the country," said Moreno. "In addition to financial assistance," Moreno added, "SBA provides management assistance, procurement assistance and advocacy services to the small business community."

"Some 'answer desk' inquiries involve issues that do not involve SBA," Moreno said. "Such calls are quickly referred to the proper government agency."

"Answer desk" is operated by the SBA's office of advocacy, and is open Monday through Friday (except for federal holidays) from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. EST. The toll-free number, 800-368-5855, also has equipment for the hearing-impaired.

Sparby Says Rules Of 85 Is Welcome Bill

State and local government employees will benefit from early retirement from early retirement at full pension following signing of a bill by Gov. Rudy Perpich, according to State Rep. Wally Sparby of Thief River Falls.

Sparby said the House and Senate passed a bill granting the early retirement between mid-1984 and mid-1985. To qualify for the Rule of 85, an employee's age plus the number of years employed would have to total at least 85. The rule of 85 is effective through Dec. 31, 1986. Presently, many government employees are under a Rule of 90.

"This is welcome legislation, especially for the state's teachers who have long pushed for a Rule of 85," Sparby said.

"Teachers are in an occupation recognized for early professional "burn-out" and this provision will allow those who have been teaching for 30 to 35 years to retire with a pension that can support them and their families," he said.

Other provisions in the major pension bill include a Rule of 75 for law enforcement officers, prison guards and state patrol officers who now have earlier mandatory retirement provisions than other state employees.

Contributions by both the state and employees into three other state pension funds would be reduced, because the funds have a surplus.

"This legislation moves to balance the pension system in Minnesota to make sure long-term employees receive due benefits," Sparby said. "It is a good bill and its provisions are fair and just for government employees."

Jobless Rate Declines To 7.1 Per Cent

Minnesota's unemployment rate dropped to 7.1 per cent in March from 7.4 per cent in February, Commissioner Barbara Beerhalter of the Minnesota department of economic security reported.

Decline was mainly seasonal but the March rate was a big improvement from March a year ago when the jobless rate stood at 10.4 per cent, Beerhalter said.

Drop was the tenth decrease in the state unemployment rate in the past 13 months, Beerhalter added. Nationally, the unemployment rate for the month was 8.1 per cent.

Department analyst Wayne Graner reported that total employment in the state rose .9 per cent from February, or about .1 per cent more than the average February-to-March change since 1970. He said that compared to a year ago, total employment rose by 97,600 jobs.

Nonagricultural wage and salary employment increased by 12,400 jobs over the month, led by gains of 4,900 in trade jobs, 2,000 in construction and 2,100 in the services sector, Graner said. Manufacturing jobs were up 2,600, the largest February-to-March increase since 1977 when the gain was 3,600, he said. Since March 1983, payroll employment is up 79,800, or 4.8 per cent.

Number of unemployed persons in Minnesota in March was 153,000, down 4,900 from February and down 68,700 from March a year ago.

Minnesota's labor force in March was 2,161,600 workers, up 12,700 from February and up 28,900 from March last year.

Compared to March a year ago, the size of the Minnesota civilian labor force increased by 1.4 per cent; and the number of unemployed workers decreased by 30.9 per cent.

Average March weekly earnings of production workers in the manufacturing sector slipped from $391.64 to $390.98 over the month. Decline was caused by a drop in average hourly earnings from $9.67 to $9.63 as average weekly hours rose from 40.5 in February to 40.6 hours in March, Graner said.

A year ago, average weekly and hourly earnings and average weekly hours were $376.44, $9.53 and 39.5 hours, respectively.

Unemployment rate pertains to the entire labor force and is not used to determine whether unemployment insurance benefits will be extended beyond the 26-week maximum. The unemployment rate among persons covered by unemployment insurance is used to determine whether the benefit payments will be extended.

Energy Dep't. Has Awards For Energy Ideas

Under secretary of energy Pat Collins recently announced the launching of a state and federal initiative to recognize innovators of unique conservation and renewable energy projects.

Collins said, "the effort is part of the Technology Transfer '80s program which will spotlight unique conservation and renewable energy projects and then share these ideas with others. The technology transfer program is an initiative to encourage the sharing of energy-saving accomplishments and technologies."

Application information for the awards program can be obtained from state energy offices in participating states. There will be three levels of awards in the recognition process.

At the first level, the state will judge the submissions and the governors will make awards for innovative energy-saving projects within their states. Following that, secretary of energy Don Hodel will present certificates to state award winners who have been nominated for national awards. Some projects will be selected for special recognition.

Under secretary Collins said "projects will be judged on a number of factors including transferability, energy savings, economic impact, job creation, education and innovation. In short, we are looking for innovative projects that can be used by others to save energy or make more efficient use of the energy available."

"We know there are many good ideas in the area of energy efficiency that are being generated by individuals and organizations around the country," Collins said. "We want to collect those ideas so we can share them with others and reward the innovators for their efforts."

To Observe Municipal Clerk's Week

President Reagan has declared the week of May 13 as municipal clerk's week nationwide, noting that the municipal clerk is the oldest of public servants and a critical part of efficient and responsive government.

"Clerks are part of an ancient and honorable tradition. Without the municipal clerk, there probably wouldn't be any recorded history, because the clerk has always been the keeper of the public record," the President said.

Today, the city clerk is responsible for administering all the detail involved with local government. Clerk's organizations around the country have observed the week for many years, but this is the first time the President has so declared it.

The clerk is the one person in city government who can answer almost any question about the workings of the city. During a stop at the clerk's office a person can often register to vote, pick up literature on municipal services, find a local ordinance, obtain a copy of the council's agenda, register a complaint, and very often pay a bill, pick up a license or research a bit of community history.

Many citizens equate the term "clerk" with a clerical position, but seldom is that accurate. The city clerk is actually the chief administrator of the city and has a large amount of responsibility. The clerk, whose office is sometimes combined with that of the administrator or treasurer, organizes and ensures the safekeeping of the vast amount of paper a local government generates. Try solving a question of property rights or tracking the transfer of a license or other entitlement. You won't get very far without the clerk's help.

Lyall Schwarzkopf, Minneapolis city clerk, is president of the International Institute of Municipal Clerks. "Because clerks so routinely and efficiently carry out their duties, the public often forgets how essential they are," he said. "But, where would you be if you find that you were not able to register to vote, or that the administration of the election was done incorrectly?

"Where does one go to find out about an ordinance that affects how one does business or improves one's property? In most municipalities, the citizen goes to the municipal clerk in his or her county, city, town or village — that unit of government which is closest to the citizen. It is important that the public is aware of this office and what it does."

Changes Being Made In Corps Permit System

Minnesota residents have until May 16 to comment on changes to the U.S. army corps of engineers permit *program regulating con*struction and fill activities in Minnesota waters and wetlands.

A public notice describing the changes was distributed to local, state and federal agencies, interested individuals, organizations and news media on April 16.

The changes reduce duplication between federal and state agencies and simplify the process for Minnesota residents to obtain necessary department of the army permits before working in rivers, lakes, potholes and wetlands in Minnesota. The new rules will also significantly reduce the scope of the nationwide permits. This may increase permit requirements for some water or wetland projects. Under current law, the corps is responsible for regulating the placement of structures in navigable waters and the placement of fill in almost all waters and wetlands.

According to Dennis Cin, chief of the corps regulatory functions branch in St. Paul, "Minnesota residents most likely to be affected by the changes are those planning to do any construction or fill in wetlands, lakes or streams. These types of projects often involve the placement of fill materials to provide access to cabin sites or to water bodies, the construction of boat ramps, cabin construction, placing sand in lakes and rivers to improve swimming beaches or draining of wetlands for agricultural purposes." These, and any other activities which might cause significant damage to water or wetland environments, require a department of the army permit from the corps of engineers.

The changes, which were coordinated with the Minnesota department of natural resources and the Minnesota pollution control agency, create a general permit program and also establish regional conditions for current nationwide permits.

The new general permit was designed to reduce paperwork and to simplify procedures for obtaining a permit for low-impact projects. Under the general permit, projects authorized by the Minnesota department of natural resources are automatically reviewed by the corps. The general permit would authorize certain activities which in the past have proven to have little impact on the environment. If the review indicates that the project is beyond the scope of the general permit, the corps would notify the applicant that department of the army permits would be required, Cin explained.

The regional conditions are modifications to the corps' "nationwide" permit designed to better meet local conditions. "Nationwide permits cover certain activities throughout the United States," Cin explained. "The regional conditions modify the nationwide permits to meet the needs of Minnesota's unique enviroment."

The regional conditions apply to certain projects including burying utility lines in wetlands, bank stabilization, minor road crossings and culverts, and the discharge of less than 10 cubic yards of dredged material in Minnesota waters.

Comments on these changes or additional information can be obtained by contacting the St. Paul District, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Regulatory Functions Branch, 180 E. Kellogg Blvd., St. Paul, MN 55101, or by calling (612) 725-5819.

Poet Program Planned Friday At NW Library

Selections from the works of Shakespeare, Wordsworth, Whitman and other famous poets will be presented by Normandale community college professor and actor John D. Donahue in the Minnesota Chautauqua program, "Saints and Poets, Maybe" to be presented at 7 p.m. Friday, May 11 at Northwest regional library.

Featured in Donahue's performance will be both familiar and new poetic statements about love, nature and death such as "The Night When Joy Began", "The World Is Too Much With Us" and "Tomorrow, and Tomorrow, and Tomorrow". Also included will be enactments of humorous selections, sharing of limericks and vivid portrayals of some of poetry's famous characters such as Masters' "Fiddler Jones" and Edward Arlington Robinson's "Richard Cory".

Donahue has taught, acted and directed on three continents in addition to teaching English, speech and theatre for 15 years in the Minnesota community college system. He is a professional choreographer, artistic director and set designer.

Friday evening's performance will be sponsored by Northwest regional library in cooperation with the Minnesota association of library friends and the Minnesota humanities commission. Program is free and open to the public. Audience discussion will be led by Donahue following the presentation. Refreshments will be served.

Tues. Property Tax Deadline Has Exceptions

Although this Tuesday is the deadline for payment of the first half of property taxes in Minnesota, owners of certain businesses may have an additional two weeks to pay without penalty, according to Arthur C. Roemer, state revenue commissioner.

Traditional property tax payment deadlines of May 31 and October 31 — in effect for more than a century — have been moved to May 15 and October 15 as a result of a state law change in 1983.

But if you operate a summer resort or a business which brings in more than half of your yearly income in the summer, you may have an extra two weeks to pay your tax before you'll be charged a penalty, Roemer says.

Provided that they meet certain requirements, the law excuses these two groups of property owners from the May 15 deadline because such seasonal businesses often don't bring in enough income by then to be able to pay their tax, he says.

Resort owners can pay their tax as late as May 31, without penalty, but only if they operate their resort less than 200 days a year.

Regardless of how many days they operate, owners of other businesses which bring in at least 60 per cent of their yearly income from May through August can also pay up to May 31, without penalty.

But these property owners must send a statement with their payment explaining that they meet the May-August income requirement.

Likely to meet these requirements are businesses such as drive-in restaurants, drive-in movies, plant nurseries, bait shops, vegetable stands, and golf courses, Roemer says.

Berlin Airlift Was Remarkable Feat Of Service

by Rita Cipalla
Smithsonian News Service

Undertaking was so massive that few thought it would succeed — a remarkable demonstration of ingenuity and resourcefulness, of timing and teamwork, of determination and sheer guts. One plane, every three minutes, 24 hours a day, for more than a year, bringing life-giving supplies to a city devastated by war.

It was the Berlin airlift. Nicknamed "Operation Vittles," the American-British-French operation supplied a city of 2½ million people with the basic necessities entirely by air. The bold maneuver not only saved Berliners from starvation, it also thwarted a Soviet plan to take control of a political and strategic prize.

V-E day saw Germany prostrate and occupied. The Soviets, backed by the power of the Red Army, held the east; the United States, Britain and France each held a zone of occupation in the west. Ironically, there was a brief moment of euphoria among the powers after the long, brutal war. No one thought that the division of Germany would be permanent.

Berlin was deep inside the Soviet zone, but because of its political importance, each of the four powers had a stake there. The three Western allies controlled 12 of the city's districts while the Red Army patrolled the other eight, including the city's central district. A joint Allied Control council was set up to govern the once-great capital.

Berlin had suffered catastrophic damage during the war. Air bombings had destroyed 20 per cent of its buildings, and an additional 50 per cent were badly damaged. In and around the central administrative and business area lay 10 square miles of ruins, forming a "dead heart" of the city. More than one-third of Berlin's people had fled or had been killed.

Living conditions in 1946 were abominable. The infant mortality rate had skirocketed, and scores of Berliners were found frozen to death in the Grunewald District. On a wall of a government building, one Berliner had chalked: "Blessed are the dead, for their hands do not freeze," a grim testament to the plight of thousands.

From the start, the Soviet Union and the Western allies clashed over governing policies for Berlin. On Oct. 26, 1946, Berlin held its first and only free postwar elections; but the Soviets promptly labeled the elected mayor anti-Soviet and vetoed his election. A deputy mayor agreeable to both sides was appointed to conduct the city's affairs.

Then, in March 1948, the three Western powers, seeking both to thwart Soviet ambitions to swallow up Berlin as the capital of a new East German state and to breathe new life into a shattered city, united their zones into a single economic unit. In protest, the Soviets withdrew their representative from the Allied Control Council.

Three months later, to fight rampant inflation, the allies introduced a currency reform. That triggered an unexpected Soviet response. On June 24, 1948, the Soviets blockaded the western sectors of the city. All road, rail and waterway transportation was halted, leaving the allies with just three air corridors to Berlin.

United States, under the leadership of the feisty Harry S. Truman, reacted swiftly. Within two days, the dramatic Berlin airlift was launched.

"Immediately after the Soviets blockaded the surface routes into the city, the U.S. air force mobilized all available C-47 transports," says Robert van der Linden, an assistant curator in the aeronautics department at the Smithsonian's National Air and Space museum in Washington, D.C. Van der Linden is curator of a Berlin airlift exhibit opening at the Air and Space museum on May 8, the 100th anniversary of Truman's birth.

"Assembling aircraft (for the airlift) was not an easy task, since quite a few planes had been retired," van der Linden says. "Remember, the war had been over for nearly three years."

While the twin-engined C-47s, nicknamed "Gooney Birds," were not well suited to the airlift because of their small size and relatively low cruising speed, they were used until larger aircraft could be obtained. Within two weeks, 54 C-54s were flown into Germany from air and naval bases around the globe. By mid-August, more than 150 aircraft were flying a daily total of 4,500 tons of supplies, "barely enough to keep the city from starving," van der Linden says.

Coal constituted about two-thirds of all tonnage airlifted. Other supplies flown into Berlin each day included 646 tons of flour and wheat, 190 tons of meat and fish, 180 tons of dehydrated potatoes, 144 tons of dehydrated vegetables and 50 tons of sugar.

Food was rationed. Heavy-laborers received larger portions than office workers and the unemployed. Rations for children depended on age; babies, for example, received more dry skimmed milk than young teenagers, who received more meat.

"During the airlift," van der Linden says, "Berliners went from defeated enemy to gallant ally, pitching in to help under incredible circumstances." As winter progressed, the need for coal grew more critical. To stay warm, some Berliners tore up once-cherished parquet floors to feed their stoves; others burned their scanty stock of furniture piece by piece. School attendance was optional since the buildings could not be heated.

Life in the city went on, though. Throughout the airlift, five newspapers went to press nightly by candlelight, and 42 cinemas and theaters played to packed houses.

Pilots and the ground crews stationed in Berlin were often struck by the sight of the city's shabbily dressed children playing among the rubble. One young pilot, Lt. Gail S. Halvorsen of the 17th Air Transport squadron, began dropping gum and candy bars from his C-54 to the children waiting below, and "Little Vittles" was unofficially born. Using handkerchiefs at first and, later, scraps of cloth as mini-parachutes, Halvorsen and his fellow crew members continued the candy drop for months.

At the time, the airlift was a tremendous gamble. Many experts doubted that the city could be kept alive from the air alone. The three flight corridors were constricted and dangerous. The aircraft were limited in number and designed primarily for carrying passengers, not coal and flour. Ground facilities were inadequate and badly laid out.

But Harry Truman never lost hope. In a diary entry dated July 19, 1948, less than a month after the airlift began, Truman wrote: "We'll stay in Berlin — come what may."

In 1948, Wesley W. Posvar was a young Air Force pilot stationed in Oxford, England. He volunteered his services to the airlift, and in several dozen trips he delivered coal and potatoes to West Berlin. Posvar, now chancellor of the University of Pittsburgh, recalls, "We would fly unlimited hours until we dropped from exhaustion, but the operation kept on. The inside of my plane was literally powdered with coal dust."

Day in and day out, throughout the severe winter of 1948-1949, the planes delivered their supplies. The Americans operated from Frankfurt's Rhein-Main Air Base and neighboring Wiesbaden Air Base and, later, from Fassberg in the British zone. From these points, the planes flew into one of three West Berlin airfields, more than 110 miles away.

Airlift saw the Western allies united by crisis and against a common foe. "We tend to forget the support of the British and the French forces in the airlift," van der Linden sayd. "In fact, there were almost as many British planes and crews as there were Americans. An though the French did not supply transport aircraft, they did provide ground support and other aid."

In all, in more than 277,000 flights, 2.3 million tons of critical supplies were airlifted into the war-torn city, more than the total tonnage carried by all commercially scheduled airlines in the United States in 1949. Sixty-five men, including 31 Americans and eight German workers, died in the operation, primarily in aircraft collisions. The total cost of the operation: about $200 million — an enormous sum by that day's standards.

"The airlift was a magnificent performance of operational efficiency, well-organized and well-led," Posvar maintains. "Obviously, the airlift was of great practical importance since the supplies literally saved thousands of lives. And it was of great symbolic importance, too, for the West maintained control of the area and blocked any further Soviet westward expansion."

Soviets, recognizing defeat, lifted the blockade in May 1949. But the airlift continued until September, for the allies were determined to ensure a sufficient stockpile.

Berlin airlift represented a triumph — both physical and psychological — for the West against incredible odds and a formidable adversary. It also provided the United States with an unparalleled opportunity to test the outer limits of its aircraft and ground support services. Communications, navigation and landing aids, maintenance, weather forecasting — all were honed to the highest level of precision and efficiency. Today the Berlin airlift remains a technical marvel, proving, as then-Chief of Staff Hoyt S. Vandenberg put it, that the U.S. Air Force "could fly anything, anywhere, anytime."

National High Blood Pressure Month Noted

May is national high blood pressure month. Uncontrolled high blood pressure can lead to heart or kidney disease and stroke. One way to get blood pressure "numbers" to come down and to keep them down is to follow the advice of health professionals.

A doctor is the only one who can diagnose high blood pressure, But other health professionals can help in a variety of ways. Along with taking medication, a patient may be asked to lose weight or cut back on salt or smoking. Doing these things will help the medication work better and shorten the time for patients to reach their blood pressure goal.

Health professionals trained to assist in prevention of high blood pressure include nurses, pharmacists, nutritionists and health educators.

It is illegal to drive a vehicle that is loaded in such a manner as to obstruct the view of the driver to the front or sides or interfere with the control of the vehicle.

Rights Listed For Employees Who Lose Jobs

If you have lost your job, be sure you don't lose your rights: file a claim for unemployment compensation benefits immediately. If you are unemployed through no fault of your own, and have worked the required number of weeks, you should qualify for benefits. Your rights under the law include the following:

(1) If you quit your job voluntarily, in most instances you won't qualify for benefits. But if you quit your job with good cause, benefits are available. For example, quitting because of sexual harrassment, racial discrimination, or because your wages or hours were drastically cut, are usually determined to be the employer's fault. You should clearly state these facts as your reason for quitting when you are interviewed by the unemployment compensation claims representative.

(2) File your claim as soon as you become unemployed, and apply for benefits even if you are not sure you qualify. Benefits cannot be paid for any weeks between the week you lost your job and the week you file your claim. Also, there is usually a one-week waiting period on payment of benefits.

(3) When filing your claim, bring your social security card and any separation notices you received. Explain to the claims representative any facts you believe show you are without fault in losing your job. After filing, all the employers you listed for the past year will be contacted to get the amount of wages paid you, and to learn the reason you left your job. This, and your application information, will form the basis of their decision as to whether you qualify for benefits, and if so, how much they will be.

(4) If you were fired, your employer must prove misconduct on your part to disqualify you from benefits. This can be difficult: he or she must show you willfully neglected your duties. For example, acts of continued violation of company policy, theft of company property, or continuing tardiness or absenteeism may lead to a determination of misconduct. If you were fired for continued tardiness or absenteeism due to medical reasons, you might still qualify. (However, if you were suffering from chemical dependency, you must make reasonable efforts to keep your job by seeking treatment and following advice given to control the addiction.) Some employers will ask you to quit — rather than be fired — to avoid the burden of proof required for showing misconduct; but in that case, benefits may be paid because the quit was not voluntary.

(5) If you qualify for benefits, you can get them for up to 26 weeks of unemployment, but they don't come automatically. You must report to the unemployment office as instructed, and meet weekly eligibility requirements by being able to work, available for work, and by actively seeking work each week you claim benefits. Any earnings, and certain benefits, must be listed on your regular reporting form. If the unemployment office decides you don't meet eligibility requirements, you will be ineligible for benefits that reporting period, or may have certain amounts deducted from your benefits. Be sure to call the unemployment office for reporting instructions if an emergency arises, or if you'll be out of town.

After your regular benefits have run out, you might be paid extended benefits for an additional period, depending on the unemployment rate in the state. Watch the papers to keep informed about this.

(6) If you are told by the unemployment office you don't qualify for benefits because you quit or were fired — or if your benefits were stopped or reduced — and you believe the decision was unfair, you have 15 days to appeal the decision, and should do so right away. By not appealing, you lose automatically. Your disqualification or denial notice will tell you how to begin an appeal. Throughout the appeal — and the application process as well — don't hesitate to ask any questions of the person handling your unemployment claim or appeal.

The American Cowboy: The Making Of A Myth

by Mary Combs
Smithsonian News Service

He sits tall in the saddle, is shy with ladies, stern with villains and scornful of dudes. He can hold his liquor and his own in a flight with fists or six-shooters. His best friend is his horse. He can bust a bronco, throw a steer, rope anything that moves. Nothing fences him in or ties him down, except for the rare, pretty schoolmarm.

He's the legendary American cowboy, and today he is as much a part of Americans' image of themselves — and the world's image of America — as he has ever been in the century since the mythmakers went to work on him. The real cowboys would be amazed.

The "golden" age of the original cowboys was actually very brief, lasting from the end of the Civil War to the late 1880s, when the collapse of the open-range system of cattle ranching forever changed the face of the American West and the lives of the men who worked there. The reality of their lives was hard, bone-wearying, backbreaking work. But reality seldom makes a very good story.

Lonn Taylor, deputy director of the Museum of New Mexico in Santa Fe, guest curator of the Library of Congress' traveling exhibition, "The American Cowboy," and co-author of the exhibition catalog by the same name, recently explored the creation of the cowboy myth — and the truth behind it — at a lecture sponsored by the Smithsonian institution resident associate program in Washington, D.C.

For most of the years the real cowboy was at work, the illustrated press either ignored his existence or presented him as a drunken, rowdy desperado. The first crack in this image, and hint of the glory to come, appeared when Easterners got their first look at Buffalo Bill Cody's Wild West.

This former army scout first assembled this spectacle of real cowboys in 1882, and, Taylor says, "coupled their name forever with reckless, hell-for-leather horseback riding and feats of skill and daring." Cody not only invented the cowboy superhero, he also introduced an important part of his wardrobe, the [illegible] Stetson hat.

[illegible] of the cowboy as [illegible] mid-1880s, possibly, Taylor says, because the booming cattle industry wanted a more positive image for the public — and potential investors. (By 1885, 44 per cent of U.S. territory was devoted to raising cattle.) The cowboy now became a sort of rugged, overgrown boy scout.

Next step was apotheosis. The collapse of the cattle industry after the brutal winter of 1886 translated the cowboy into the realm of the noble Indian — a vanishing American, a romatic ideal of independence and harmony with nature. To a nation disillusioned by civil war, horrified by the grim realities of factories and city slums and fearful of socialism and the tide of alien immigration, "the cowboy," Taylor explains, "embodied all the old American values, emergent . . . at a time of national despair."

By the 1890s, he had been endowed by his Eastern admirers with all the virtues of the Progressive movement: manly, self-reliant, virtuous, competitive (but always fair), a free agent in the labor market, dependent only on his own skills for employment. Above all, Taylor says, the cowboy was seen as "100 per cent Anglo-Saxon, embodying all of the alleged virtuous characteristics of that ethnic group." Ironically, the key makers of the myth were a trio of Easterners — an artist, a novelist and a politician.

Frederic Remington's illustrations, paintings and sculptures of the idealized cowboy (always white) paved the way for all the other artists, including former cowboy Charles Russell, who followed him. Their work ornamented dime novels, magazine stories, cowboy memoirs and poetry (often by writers who had never seen a cowboy) churned out by the popular presses of America.

Among the authors painting the cowboy in a romantic light was Owen Wister, who wrote his first Western story for Harper's in 1891. Eleven years later, he captured what was to be the essence of the myth in a tale of a noble young cowboy, a crack shot and superb horseman, and his love for an Eastern schoolteacher. "The Virginian" was soon produced as a play, and a stampede of imitators followed. among the immortals of the genre was Zane Grey's "Riders of the Purple Sage" (1912), the first in a string of tales set in a West that never existed. Grey's formula for success was simple: "virgins, villains and varmints."

Wister dedicated "The Virginian" to a New York-born politician and fellow harvard graduate who had chosen the cowboy as his hero and had himself come to personify [illegible] alike — [illegible] President Theodore Roosevelt, sometime cattle rancher, leader of the Rough Riders — a Spanish-American war cavalry regiment composed of four companies of cowboys and one of elite New Yorkers — and author in 1888 of "Ranch Life and the Hunting-Trail" (illustrated by Remington).

Roosevelt wrote of the moral strength of the cowboy: "He has few of the emasculated milk-and-water moralities admired by pseudo-philanthropists, but does possess, to a very high degree, the stern, manly qualities that are invaluable to a nation." Teddy's strategy of "speaking softly and carrying a big stick" — or a Colt .45 — fit the image.

Cowboy theme was eagerly taken up by the infant film industry, hungry for the action-packed potential of the Wild West hero. The first series (1908-1915) featured "Broco Billy" Anderson, whom Taylor describes as "an athlete with a boyish grin and tousled hair who saved scores of heroines from bandits, runaway horses and fates worse than death." Tom Mix, Hopalong Cassidy, Buck Jones and others were to fill similarly acrobatic boots.

Meanwhile, the romantic cowboy moved into the screen, as "the strong, silent man of action with an independent but impeccable moral code." William S. Hart fathered this tradition; his heirs included Gary Cooper, Randolph Scott and John Wayne.

A third type of cowboy hero owes his existence to Texas A and M English professor John A. Lomax, who set out in 1907 to collect and preserve songs sung by cowboys. In his pioneering enthusiasm, Lomax accepted a lot of material that was bogus, and he substantially rewrote and sanitized many authentic lyrics that were vulgar, bawdy or downright obscene. But "Cowboy Songs" (1910) was uncritically accepted by a public already convinced that an important part of a cowboy's job was singing cattle to sleep. Professional songwriters took up the theme, and the singing cowboy was born.

"In the very early '20s," Taylor sayd, "it was a poor radio station indeed which could not boast a Lonesome Cowboy, an Oklahoma Yodler or a Sagebrush Sam," singing Lomax songs or their own compositions. "By the onset of the '40s, most Americans believed that a guitar was as much a part of the cowboy's equipment as a rope or a horse." some singers, notably Gene Autry and Roy Rogers, moseyed into the movies and thence to TV.

In the '20s and '30s, Will Rogers — wrangler, cowboy, Wild West performer, movie star, political commentator — added the cowboy philosopher to the roster of ideals and, like Teddy Roosevelt before him, became America's image of what was best in itself, a bridge between reality and fantasy. In that same era, rodeo became a national spectator sport, and popular dude ranches of varying degrees of authenticity made it possible to actually live the fantasy. But the Depression curbed such pursuits, and the cowboy entertainer was soon pretty much confined to movies and radio — and their youthful audiences.

"As a result," Taylor says, "the cowboy hero began to assume a fourth aspect, one he was to wear all through the 1940s and early 1950s: that of cowboy father, moral preceptor to small children." During the second World War, mothers raising families alone might chasten their children by saying, "what would Gene Autry say if he saw you do that?"

Soon, business began to appreciate the commercial clout of little cowpokes. Ralston Purina, sponsor of the Tom Mix radio show (so successful it outlived the star by a decade), created the Tom Mix Ralston Straight Shooters Club. William Savage, author of "The Cowboy Hero," summed it up neatly: "The cowboy sold the cereal, the cereal was necessary to acquire the premium, and the premium reinforced interest in the cowboy, which meant, presumably, more listening and more eating and of course more dimes." Other companies quickly joined in. "In order to sell food to children, however," Taylor says, "The cowboy had to reform. He could no longer drink whiskey, chew tobacco or swear."

Modern commercial cowboy isn't so hobbled, though network TV has its limits. The Philip Morris Tobacco co. created him in the mid-1950s, in an ad campaign designed to counteract the idea that filter-tipped Marlboro cigarettes were "sissy." Now, cowboys descended from the Marlboro man sell most everything from jeans to hot tubs and men's cologne.

"The future forms that the mythical cowboy will take are uncertain," Taylor says, envisioning "the punk cowboy, the computer cowboy, the Third World cowboy, the astral cowboy. None of these could be farther from reality than the series of mythical cowboys that we have already created, yet all will be equally important as reflections of ourselves and our aspirations — which is, after all, the function of a myth."

JAZZ ENSEMBLE from Northland community college will be performing in concert with the chamber choir and the community band at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, in the college gymnasium, finalizing a three day tour by the groups. Musical selections to be performed by the ensemble will include a tribute to Count Basie and current hits such as "Memory" and "Flashdance".

'U'M Psychologist Studies Effect Of Crime Reports

by Lynette Lamb
'U' M News Service

Same murder that is terrifying to read of when it occurs down the street is almost comforting to read about when it happens 2,000 miles away.

This was one of University of Minnesota psychologist Linda Heath's findings in her recent study of the impact of newspaper crime reports on fear of crime, which will be published in the Journal of Personality and Social Psychology.

"What led me to study the media is that fear of crime is focused on serious crimes," said Heath. "And yet not enough people directly or indirectly experience serious crimes to make their fear a consequence of their experience."

Heath found that the reporting of sensational local crimes makes people fearful, but the reporting of sensational distant crimes actually reassures people. "Readers like the grass to be browner on the other side of the fence, and the browner the better," her study concludes.

San Franciscans, for example, feel safe in their city despite a rather high crime rate. Although San Francisco was not one of the cities Heath systematically studied, from her reading of that city's papers she surmises that its residents probably feel safe because the local papers include many more accounts of "farm families in Nebraska being wiped out and crime in Los Angeles" than they do of crime in San Francisco. Philadelphia, on the other hand, where residents feel more fear than crime statistics warrant, has newspapers that include many more accounts of local crimes.

Cities Heath studied all had similar rates of violent crime but varied dramatically on how much fear their citizens reported experiencing. People in Fresno, CA, Youngstown, OH, and Tacoma, WA, were more afraid than people in Rockford or Peoria, IL, and Nashville, TN, despite similar violent crime rates in all those cities.

"My personal reading is that fear levels are too high," said Heath. "The crimes that people are most afraid of (assault and murder, even rape) are usually committed by a friend, relative or acquaintance — someone the victim knows," she said. "So for the average person to be terrified of being attacked by a stranger just doesn't make sense."

In determining that women are more fearful and take more safety precautions than men, Heath has replicated findings from a 1979 study on crime, women and the quality of urban life, in which she took part. In fact, said Heath, the population groups that are most fearful — women and the elderly — are actually those statistically less likely to be victimized. Their fear, Heath concludes, has more to do with riveting individual media reports than with actual crime statistics. "One report of a violent attack is more real than all the statistics in the world," she said.

Although Heath doesn't suggest that newspapers eliminate articles about sensational local crimes, she does have several suggestions for how they can reduce their readers' fear.

First, by including wire service reports of crimes in distant places, they can reassure readers that not all crimes take place in their city. Second, because Heath found that random crimes are much more fightening to readers than are crimes with some sort of motive, she says that by including details that clarify the crime's nonrandom nature, reporters can ease readers' minds.

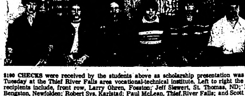
Heath tells of a case in which a man and woman were severely beaten in their middle-class neighborhood home. No robbery was committed and the assailants were still at large. One newspaper wrote nothing more of the case; another newspaper added the information that the male victim had been recently indicted on several counts of promoting juvenile prostitution. The extra information, said Heath, allows readers to make what are called self-protective attributions. In other words, details enable readers to rationalize what happened as something unlikely to happen to them.

Carefully considering whether to include the sensational details of a case is Heath's final suggest to news personnel. Although she believes it's important for the public to be informed of crimes, she questions whether it is necessary for newspaper accounts to include all the gruesome details. The Twin Cities-area case several years ago in which a man murdered his wife and then tried to stuff her body down the garbage disposal was thoroughly reported, but Heath questions what purpose was served by relaying the murderer's [illegible] the sensational detail really inform the public of a possible threat?" she asked.

Determing just which elements in a sensational media account do arouse fear is a topic Heath would like to study next. In the meantime, she will soon publish a study looking at the fear that television violence creates in viewers. Also working on a grant from the Hubert H. Humphrey institute of public affairs along with university sociologists David Ward and Candace Kruttschnitt, Heath is researching the effects the media has on crminals' behavior.

Finally, because she remains particularly interested in women, she is studying the effects the presentation of crimes in the media has on women. "Our socialization as women is to be more cautious," she said. "I'm very angry that women have to be afraid and engage in so many self-protective techniques. It's very hard — I don't want to tell women not to worry, because the facts are that they have to — but too often women fear the wrong situation. It's often not the stranger on the street but the person they've just met at a party who presents more danger."

In Minneapolis and St. Paul, said Heath, "the media are very responsible," giving their readers lots of contextual information about crimes. "I would say fear among Twin Cities residents is probably lower than it should be given the crime statistics," Heath said. "When I talk to people here they seem to know about crimes but always dismiss them as flukes. It's probably very healthy."



$100 CHECKS were received by the students above as scholarship presentation was made Tuesday at the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical institute. # U of M Names Task Force To Evaluate Ethics

Fifteen-member task force representing a broad cross section of the University of Minnesota academic community has been formed to evaluate the biomedical ethics curriculum.

Appointments were made jointly by Dr. Neal Vanselow, vice president for health sciences, and Kenneth Keller, vice president for academic affairs.

"There is obviously an increasing amount of interest in the area of biomedical ethics — both at the university and in the general community. Hardly a week goes by without some medical ethics issue being raised in the newspaper or a medical journal," Vanselow said.

"I believe that it's necessary to ensure that those issues are being addressed in both our teaching and research in the Health Sciences center," Vanselow said. "I also believe we should be taking an active role in defining and dealing with ethical situations that students will inevitably face when they begin their professional careers."

Dr. Shelley Chou, professor and chairman of the department of neurosurgery, and John Wallace, professor of philosophy, will serve as task force co-chairs.

Other members are David Angaran, associate professor of pharmacy. Mila Aroskar, associate professor of public health; Dianne Bartels, associate director of education services, University hospitals; Muriel Bebeau, associate professor of health ecology, school of dentistry; Dr. Ronald Cranford, associate professor of neurology; Patricia Crisham, associate professor of nursing; Timothy Culbert, second-year medical student; John Dolan, professor of philosophy; John Eyler, associate professor of the history of medicine; James Rest, professor of educational psychology; Suzanne Sherry, associate professor of law; Roberta Simmons, professor of sociology; and Robert Terry, director of the Reflective Leadership program at the Hubert H. Humphrey institute of public affairs. The committee's first meeting was held last week.

"Right now, we are trying to define the mission and the scope of the existing biomedical ethics programs at the university," Chou said. "We are also interested in looking at other programs throughout the nation."

After taking inventory, the committee will consider what changes need to be made in the curriculum, Chou said. The task force may also identify topics for faculty research.

"All of the students in the health sciences are concerned about ethical problem-solving and feel there has been a lack of formal instruction in this area in the past," Culbert said, who thinks the student body welcomes the task force study.

As evidence of student interest, Culbert noted that a recent series of 10 lectures dealing with medical ethics, sponsored by the health sciences student organization, drew overflow crowds in a 300-seat auditorium.

Task force has been asked to complete its work by next January.

COOP Yield & Profit Boosters.
Fertilize your soybeans for optimum response.
The two fertilizer elements most associated and most critical to high soybean yields are phosphorus and potassium. A soil test is the only way to accurately determine the amounts needed.
What's more, acid soils will not produce top-yield soybeans. Check your soil pH and work in lime ahead of planting if it is indicated.
Soybeans also consume huge quantities of nitrogen, but produce most of their N requirements through nodulation. High-yield soybeans, however, may take a third of their nitrogen requirements from the soil. Carry-over nitrogen from the preceding crop, is favored.
Don't gamble on your soybeans! A soil test can tell you just what you need to reach your yield goals. Our Fertilizer Specialist can help you with all your planning. He has the know-how and we have the materials. We're ready when you are.

"Service"
When most people think of banks they think of handsome buildings with vaults and teller windows. A place where money is kept. Those things are part of what a bank must be. But there's more to it than that. A hometown Independent Bank is a living, breathing part of your community, made up of a group of your neighbors who have the responsibility of providing financial services for the entire community. These services include holding money, loans, checking, sound financial advice, helping people achieve their dreams in buying homes, cars, businesses, financing educations and many other human concerns. banks seem to be very serious places, it is only because caring for other people's fortunes and futures is a very serious business. It is only through service that your Independent Bank can survive. Service that is responsive to the needs of our community. Neighbors helping neighbors is the spirit that built Minnesota. DIVERS PREPARED to enter the water at the Eighth Street landing on Sunday afternoon, as a pair of fishermen were docking their boat to get out of the rain, providing an interesting contrast in attitudes. The divers were members of the Northwest SCUBA Divers club of Thief River Falls, and volunteered their time and equipment to clean the river bottom of potentially hazardous debris in the vicinity of the public beach at Bill LaFave Park. They included (from left) Don Vanek, president; Jerry Moyer, Rick Quigley, safety officer; Marion Johnson and Keith Johnson. This was the first official outing of the newly formed club, which meets at 7:30 p.m. on the third Tuesday of each month in the Law Enforcement Center.

Insurance and Safety Tips
By: CARL L. ANDERSON
TREAT POWER TOOLS WITH RESPECT THEY DEMAND
Few things are handier around the home or workplace than electric power tools. But unfortunately, few things are also more hazardous.
That doesn't have to be the case. You can carry out your chores with both safety and enjoyment simply by following instructions and knowing your tools' capabilities and limitations.
Make sure they're clean and in good working order, with all safety guards in place. Use them only for the jobs they're designed to perform.
If they aren't double insulated, be certain they're properly grounded. Whenever necessary, use adaptors. Never operate them in damp or wet places.
Wear safety glasses or goggles when appropriate. Don't wear clothes or jewelry that can get caught in your equipment. And keep visitors — especially curious young ones — away from the area in which you're working.
Above all, approach your job the way we approach ours. With respect and thorough preparation.

Post-season high school tournament play is fast-approaching for the Thief River Falls spring sports teams.

Tennis tournament, featuring a single-class sub-section format, will start here Monday, May 21, with team competition and will return to Thief River Falls Wednesday, May 23, for the individual matches in singles and doubles. The Prowlers will be joined by Bemidji, Crookston, East Grand Forks and Mahnomen.

North Sub-Region 8AA track meet for boys and girls will be held Thursday, May 24, at Bemidji. The field will include the host Bemidji teams, plus Thief River Falls, Fergus Falls, Moorhead, Park Rapids and Detroit Lakes.

Region 8AA golf meets will be held at separate sites and on separate dates. The girls will golf Friday, May 25, at Little Falls and the boys will golf Tuesday, May 29, at Brainerd. The full 14-team Region 8AA field will be involved in both meets.

Final tournament event will be the North Sub-Region 8AA baseball playoffs, scheduled Tuesday, May 29, and Thursday, May 31, at Moorhead. Thief River Falls, Bemidji, Moorhead, Detroit Lakes, Fergus Falls and Park Rapids will be there.

Miscellaneous

+Luther Huggins, who made a big impression on the Northland Community College football team last fall as he completed a 1,000-yard rushing season against the Northmen, became the first University of Minnesota-Crookston qualifier for an NJCAA national track meet berth by winning the 100-meter dash at the Region 13 meet Saturday in Waseca. Huggins set a school and track record with 10.71 finish, just missing the Region 13 record by one one-hundredth of a second set by Davey Lewis of Golden Valley Lutheran in 1979. Former Thief River Falls coach Jim Sims, who coached Huggins and the UMC football team to a 7-1 record this past fall, also serves as the Trojans' track coach. The NJCAA national track meet will be held May 17-19 at San Angelo, Texas.

+It was reported over the weekend that the 1984-85 Minnesota high school basketball season, players who commit five personal fouls will not be automatically expelled from the game. But if they continue to play, and any subsequent foul will award the opposing team two free throws, plus possession of the ball. Minnesota was selected for the experiment by the national high school basketball rules committee. Minnesota will be the only state trying the experiment. Most coaches feel the rule will be used only in the case of star players because the penalty is too stiff to leave a marginal player in the game for more than five fouls.

+Roseau native Neal Broten on Monday became the first Minnesota native chosen as the Minnesota North Stars' most valuable player when the National Hockey League team announced its trophy winners for the 1983-84 season. He collected four awards as his teammates chose the 25-year-old center winner of the Bill Masterton Memorial Cup, awarded annually in memory of the North Stars' center who died in 1968 as the result of an injury incurred in an NHL game; he won the WCCO radio trophy as the team's leading scorer; and he won the Stargazer's Fan Club trophy as the team's most popular performer. Broten, who completed his third full season as a member of the North Stars, has won or shared the team's scoring title for the past two seasons, has won or shared the Stargazers award for the past three seasons and has won the Three-Star Award voting in two of the last three seasons, including 1983-84. He had 28 goals, 61 assists and 89 points in 76 NHL games this winter to lead all American-born NHL players in scoring.

+Thief River Falls will face a tough assignment Saturday at the annual four-team Moorhead Invitational high school baseball tournament. The 12-noon openers match the Prowlers against the host Spuds and state-ranked Grand Rapids vs. Minot, N.D. Thief River Falls beat Moorhead 4-2 just last week, and you can figure the Spuds, especially at home, will be looking for revenge in a game that could have a big bearing on the post-season North Sub-Region 8AA positions.

TRF Takes Doubleheader From Pirates 9-4, 12-6

Thief River Falls' range of emotions went from frustration to satisfaction Tuesday following the Prowlers' 9-4, 12-6 high school baseball doubleheader sweep over Crookston at the windy fairgrounds diamond.

"Very satisfying," was the way Thief River Falls coach Charlie Cornell described the wins over the rival Pirates that boosted the Prowlers' record to 5-1 for the year. Crookston was 3-0 coming into the doubleheader. Thief River Falls' lone loss this spring was the frustration that preceded the satisfaction as the Prowlers dropped an eight-inning 5-4 decision to Bemidji in their previous start last Friday.

Two more doubleheaders await the Prowlers before this week is completed. They will host Ada Thursday in a 3:30 p.m. twinbill that includes a regularly scheduled contest, plus a make-up game from an April 24 rain-forced postponement at Ada. Thief River Falls will then participate in the annual four-team Moorhead Invitational Saturday that actually amounts to a doubleheader, with the Prowlers matched against host Moorhead and Grand Rapids playing Minot, N.D. in the 12-noon openers. Winners and losers meet in the 3 p.m. championship and consolation games.

TRF . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . 9
Crookston . . . . . . . . . . . 4

Thief River Falls had just three hits in a doubleheader-opening 9-4 victory over Crookston, but the Prowlers capitalized on 10 walks and five Crookston errors in building a 9-0 lead.

Six of those runs came in the first inning when the Prowlers had two of their three base hits, plus five walks and three Crookston errors. Crookston starting pitcher Pat Madigan was charged with the loss, even though he was not officially credited with pitching any part of an inning since he failed to retire a batter, giving up two walks and a base hit before being replaced by Vince Boyle.

Meanwhile, Thief River Falls righthander Brian Johnston was effectively shutting out the Pirates for five innings before surrendering three runs at the end.

"Johnston pitched real well," explained Prowlers coach Charlie Cornell. "He got tired at the end."

Crookston started with a 3-0 lead in the top of the first inning of the second game, but the Pirates couldn't hold on to that advantage very long as Thief River Falls rolled to a 12-6 victory and the twinbill sweep.

Thief River Falls had a 4-3 lead before the first inning was completed, and the Prowlers kept right on scoring en route to a 12-3 fourth inning lead as lefthander Ryan Drees shut out the Pirates over the middle innings before giving up three seventh inning runs.

A ten-hit attack — the Prowlers highest total of the 1984 season — included a 3-for-3 performance by Todd Ortloff, who also had three RBI's.

Strong game-long winds made for less-than-ideal playing conditions, but the Prowlers were able to cope with the elements in beating the Pirates, who are now a Class A team and not a Class AA Thief River Falls rival.

IN A CLOSE finish at the wire in the 100-meter dash, Marshall County Central's Brian Rud leaned just ahead of teammate Randy Dahl to give the Nordics a 1-2 placing during Tuesday's Thief River Falls Invitational high school track meet. Mike Sugden (middle) of Hallock was third in the event and Tom Walker (right) of Thief River Falls was fifth. The Nordics fared extremely well in the sprints yesterday and finished in a second place tie in the final meet standings with Red Lake Falls.

Prowlers Sweep Boys, Girls TRF Invitational Track Meet Titles

It was a productive afternoon Sunday for the host teams as the Prowlers won both the boys and girls titles at the annual Thief River Falls Invitational high school track meet.

While the field admittedly wasn't overpowering, the Prowlers nevertheless thoroughly enjoyed the double-victory with impressive point totals. The girls won with 204 points, followed by Hallock with 128, Roseau 95, Red Lake Falls 27, Stephen 23 and Marshall County Central 15. The boys won with 81 points, while Marshall County Central and Red Lake Falls had 53 apiece, Hallock 40 and Stephen 39.

It was the second home meet victory in a week's time for the Thief River Falls girls, who won the Quentin Jones Invitational here the previous Tuesday in a heated battle with Roseau. But this time the Rams were without top sprinter Lisa Brateng, who is worth about 40 points in this type of meet. She is sidelined with an ankle injury.

"I didn't expect to be this far ahead," admitted Thief River Falls coach Tom Schafer. "It would have been a lot closer with Brateng in there."

High winds inflated many times, so Schafer broke from tradition and stressed place finishes instead of times yesterday. "With a windy day like this it's tough to look at the times," he explained. "We worked in places instead."

And the Prowlers collected six firsts, including a double-triumph by Stacie Kruta in the 100 and 200-meter hurdles. Paula Wilkens added a win in the mile and the Prowlers took three of the four relay races. Cindy Kruta, Peggy Cruz, Georgia Howard and Wilkens won the two-mile relay; Tricia Armstrong, Lynell Armstrong, Loralee Iverson and Sue Pfeifer won the 440 relay; and Cindy Kruta, Vikki Weigand, Stacie Kruta and Michelle Puetz took the mile relay.

Individual standout, though, was Jody Renville of Hallock, who won the 100 and 200-meter dashes, plus the long jump and ran a leg on the Bears' first place 220-yard relay. Kim Bedard, a winner in the 440 and 880-yard runs, also ran the lead leg on that relay.

It was the Prowlers' third victory of the 1984 track season, which included a win in a triangular at Bemidji back on April 19.

Thief River Falls boys, meanwhile, celebrated their first win in recent memory, and even in a not-so-strong field the Prowlers celebrated the rare victory. "It's a win," noted Thief River Falls coach Tim Olson, "and it's a long time since we've had one."

It was a field that afforded the Prowlers a taste of something many of the athletes haven't had a chance to enjoy — a first place finish.

Junior Dave Dalager, for example, has been consistently dropping his time in the two-mile throughout the season, but would still wind up in fourth or fifth place at the larger meets. Yesterday, even with a windblown time higher than he has been turning in, he was an appreciative winner for the first time.

"Dave has been working hard," pointed out Olson. "His times have been dropping consistently. It does a world of good to see those time drops, even if you don't win. His time was up today because of the conditions and because he doubled up (one and two-mile) in this wind."

Others who also enjoyed a not-so-common win were Jeff Johnson in the shot put and Gus Miller in the discus, while some other consistently strong events for the Prowlers also came through as Randy Swenson won the 110-meter high hurdles; Jeff Langan won the 300-meter hurdles; Kevin Kezar won the 880-yard run; the sprint medley relay team of Paul Brandt, Tim Peterson, Dan Iverson and Kezar was a winner; as was the mile relay unit of Iverson, Langan, Kezar and Swenson.

Marshall County Central came up with another strong showing here, led by Kevin Boe, who won the long jump, triple jump and high jump, and ran a leg on the Nordics' first-place 440-yard relay

CELEBRATING AS he crossed the finish line, Thief River Falls' Dave Dalager was a winner in the two-mile run Tuesday during the annual Thief River Falls Invitational high school track meet. Extremely windy weather made the two-mile a chore to run as the athletes circled the Prowler Field track eight times. The Prowlers won both the boys and girls titles in the five-team meet.

'84 Fishing Opener Scheduled On Sat.

After a winter of truly miserable weather, Minnesota anglers are looking forward with eagerness to the fishing opener Saturday and hoping for light winds and warm temperatures.

Most of the regulations are similar to previous years, says the Department of Natural Resources, but there are a few changes:

Anglers on Minnesota-Canada boundary waters with both Minnesota and Canadian fishing licenses will no longer be allowed to possess more than the legal limit of fish permitted under one license.

And, in an earlier news release, the DNR said a new regulation will prohibit the taking of northern pike from Mille Lacs lake until July 24, but during the last hours of the legislature a bill was passed cancelling this rule. Northern pike may now be taken in Mille Lacs during the regular season.

Department also reminded that starting Monday, May 14, fishing on Mille Lacs will be prohibited between the hours of 10 p.m. and 6 a.m. through June 10.

As usual, there will be a few areas where the season opener will be delayed to protect concentrations of spawning walleyes:

1. St. Louis River, St. Louis county — from the Highway 23 bridge to the Fond du Lac Dam on both sides of the river between April 28 - May 12, 1984, both dates inclusive.

2. Black Bay of Rainy Lake in St. Louis and Koochiching counties, south of a line between Four Islands Resort on the west side of the Bay and Perry Point on the east; also all of Rat Root Lake in Koochiching county and that portion of the Rat Root River between Rat Root Lake and Black Bay between May 12 and May 18, 1984, both dates inclusive.

3. Channel between Little Gunflint Lake and Little North Lake, Cook county, Township 65, Range 2, Sec. 16 between May 12 - May 18, 1984, both dates inclusive.

4. Saganaga Falls, Cook county, on Canadian border, between May 12 and May 18, 1984, both dates inclusive.

5. Cross River, Cook county, Township 65, Range 3, 4 — from the Gunflint Trail to the posted area at the mouth at Gunflint Lake between May 12 - May 25, 1984, both dates inclusive.

6. Sea Gull River, from Sea Gull Lake to Saganaga Lake, approximately ½ mile north of the narrows, Cook county, Township 66, Range 4, 5 between May 12 - May 25, 1984, both dates inclusive. The area will remain open for motorized travel (maximum 25 HP motors).

7. Little Gunflit Creek beteen Little Gunflint Lake and Little North Lake from May 12 - May 18, 1984, both dates inclusive.

With exceptions noted above, the fishing regulations will be as shown in the official "1984 Minnesota Fishing Regulations" available from state license agents and many DNR offices around the state.

Regulations for inland waters are found on pages 6 and 7 while the regulations on boundary waters are covered on the following pages.

Last year, the DNR Enforcement Division intensified its efforts to apprehend violators of state fishing regulations by setting up road checks on highways heavily used by anglers.

Conservation officers expressed surprise at the number of serious violations of fish limits. Many arrests were made and officers said the road checks will be continued again this season.

Agassiz Refuge Auto Tour Route Open To Public

Lost Bay auto tour at Agassiz National Wildlife Refuge opened recently and will remain open until late September. The four-mile route originates at refuge headquarters, located 11 miles east of Holt, and is open during daylight hours, seven days a week.

Refuge office hours are 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday-Friday. Brochures containing information about the refuge and auto tour are available at headquarters.

On a quiet morning or evening visit one can expect to see and hear a variety of wildlife. Most waterfowl and other bird species will entertain you with colorful and often vocal courtship and nesting activities, point out refuge personnel.

Excellent winter survival and productivity during the past several years has resulted in large and healthy deer and moose populations. These animals are often observed along County Road 7, which bisects the refuge or along the auto tour route. Smaller mammals like woodchuck, beaver, muskrat, milk, raccoon and possibly even an otter might be observed.

Evidence of management activities such as prescribed burning, brush cutting, water management and nesting sites will also be seen.

Pool levels are about normal and habitat conditions are considered good for waterfowl production in 1984.

Bring your binoculars, field guide and family for a few hours of relaxing therapy at the refuge, officials suggest.

Nearly 90 nuclear power plants have been cancelled since 1975, reports "National Wildlife" magazine.

DNR NEWS

Department of Natural Resources is reminding everyone that a permit is required for open burning in Minnesota.

Period between snow melt and green-up — when exposed grass is dead and in a flammable condition — is the time when most wildfires occur in Minnesota.

This spring, 762 fires have destroyed 40,000 acres and several small buildings. About 97 per cent of all fires are man-caused, either due to neglect or arson. The DNR has increased its fire enforcement capabilities with conservation officers and foresters forming fire investigation teams.

Fire protection agencies are urging everyone in counties where open burning is legal to take the following steps if they plan to do any type of burning:

1. Obtain a burning permit. These may be obtained free of charge from your local DNR Forest Officer or Township Fire Warden. This permit to burn vegetative material is necessary to comply with the state of Minnesota fire prevention and air quality laws.

2. Have help available. Don't attempt to carry out a burning project alone. Gusty, shifting winds can cause the fire to spread and result in a wildfire. This can happen very suddenly and may be impossible for one person to control.

3. Have the proper tools available. Rakes, shovels and water are necessary tools to keep the fire under control. If a tractor and plow are available, a plowed fire break will provide additional protection to keep the fire from spreading.

4. Don't burn near buildings. When burning piled debris, be sure to locate the piles away from grass fuels that could allow the fire to spread to nearby buildings.

5. Watch the weather. The best time of day to burn is usually in the evening when the wind decreases and the relative humidity rises. This reduces the chances of a fire escaping and burning out of control.

6. Stay with the fire. Don't leave the fire until it is out. Sudden changes in the weather, such as increasing or gusty winds, could blow burning embers outside the burn area and cause the fire to spread out of control.

DNR Warns Boaters

Minnesota's rivers are flowing well again, too well in some cases, and the Department of Natural Resources is suggesting that you use caution when canoeing and boating.

Steve Kirch, River Recreation Supervisor, noted that river level conditions are currently dangerous on some rivers.

"You should use caution and exercise wise judgement when canoeing rivers this time of the year," Kirch warned. "The higher water levels can cause some maneuvering problems that you may not experience in lower water conditions. People tend to over-estimate their skill and ability to navigate hazardous areas such as low head dams and fallen trees.

"This time of year the cold water conditions make it even more important to use sound judgment."

Kirch said some things to keep in mind before starting a river trip are:

1. Plan your trip based on the existing conditions of the river; scout it out first if you are not sure.

2. Always carry extra clothing, even if planning a short trip.

3. Always wear a personal flotation device life preserver.

4. Respect the force of water; check out potential hazards when you approach them.

A river level reporting system began on May 2 and extends through most of the canoeing season. Information on river level conditions for the 19 designated state canoe and boating routes, and free river maps, can be obtained by calling 296-6699.

Little Miss Muffet not only sat beside spiders, says National Wildlife's Ranger Rick magazine. She lived with them. Miss Muffet's father, a medical doctor who lived in the 1500s, let spiders drape all over his house in the belief that spiders would protect his family from diseases. Dr. Muffet even gave his daughter pills made from spiders when Miss Muffet got sick.

Oakland Park Activities Set For May 13-19

Schedule of activities at Oakland Park nursing home during nursing home week May 13-19 has been announced by administrator Sherryll Irvine. Theme for the week is "Long Term Care — Tender Loving Care".

Mrs. Irvine said the theme not only "calls attention to the total care and support that homes for the aging provide, but also emphasizes the special care and love received by residents of nursing homes."

Events schedule includes the following: Sunday, Mother's day; Monday, resident appreciation day and pet day; Tuesday, staff appreciation day and basket social; Wednesday, May 16, mother-daughter tea; Thursday, May 17, church worship services and Syttende Mai observance; Friday, May 18, style show of current fashions and open house; and Saturday, May 19, movies and popcorn.

Many of the events this year will be filmed with the home's new video camera which was donated by Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Swenson.

Mrs. Irvine also noted that the home observed arbor day by beginning the planting trees, bushes, shrubs and plants in memory of Fern Quesnell, Ron Koestner, George Fricker, Edward Gerster, DuWayne Olson, Dr. Duane Davidson, Olger Green, Marvin Wedger, C.J. Collins, Glen Knutson and Suniva Ohnstad.

"Honor a Loved One with Something Living" is the theme of the beautification program which was begun as a memorial to Lloyd Quesnell by his family. The Happy Acres 4-H club has been responsible for planting annual flowers.

COMMUNITY BAND will be performing in concert along with the chamber choir and Jazz ensemble at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, in the Northland community college gymnasium, concluding a three-day tour by the groups. Band selections will include music by John Philip Sousa, George Gershwin and Johann Sebastian Bach.

Mrs. Vatthauer Honored At St. John's Hospital

Fern Vatthauer, nurses' assistant at St. John's hospital in Red Lake Falls, has been selected as this year's "Employee of the Year". Selection is made annually and recognition is given during national hospital week.

Mrs. Vatthauer was elected by her fellow employees by secret ballot. She became the 13th employee to be selected since the program was enacted.

Fern began working at St. John's hospital 14 years ago. She is a nursing assistant and is considered a key element in the care of hospital patients, as are all nursing assistants in a small rural hospital.

Active in the Presbyterian church and home Bible studies and the Red Lake county health planning council, she likes reading, riding her bike and cross country skiing. She keeps a scrapbook about her family and relatives, enjoys keeping a diary and is involved in farm activities as well.

For being selected as St. John's hospital's employee of the year, Mrs. Vatthauer received an honorary luncheon in her name, a $25 cash award, an engraved plaque and the day off with pay.

Hair Wreath In Marshall Co. Museum

According to Jean Johnson, Marshall county historical society museum curator at Warren, Hazel Ranstrom recently brought in a hair wreath in a gold carved frame. It has been hung in the millinery shop of the museum.

"Victorians had an obsession with preserving hair of their dead loved ones. Brooches, other jewelery and pictures were made of the hair of the deceased. This custom peaked in the nineteenth century although it dates back to Georgian times or earlier," Johnson said.

"Hair pictures are not easy to get. Families preserve and treasure them and generally keep them in the ancestral home. In the 1960's and 70's it was fashionable for hair weaths to be made with the combined locks of the entire family. They were mounted in a recessed ornate frame, usually on silk, and hung in a favorite room until replaced by some other passing vogue," she added.

Matching Fund Offer Made To Local Academy

Our Saviour's Christian academy, Thief River Falls, has been selected as one of 66 Lutheran high schools across the nation to participate in LIFT, Lutheran Brotherhood's newest program in support of Lutheran secondary education.

Purpose of the new program is to encourage increased giving to Lutheran high schools for immediate needs and to stimulate interest in endowment support for long-term needs. It is scheduled to run for five years from July 1, 1984 to June 30, 1989.

Beginning July 1, Lutheran Brotherhood will match gifts from $25 to $100 contributed by eligible members of the fraternal benefit society to the academy. Members are eligible if they have a life, health or annuity contract in force with the company, or own shares, individually or jointly, in a Lutheran Brotherhood mutual fund.

During the first year, all gifts and LB's matching grant will be unrestricted as to use. During the second to fourth years, an increasing percentage of the LIFT receipts and LB's matching grants will be placed in the school's permanent endowment. During the fifth year, all receipts including LB's matching grant will be placed in the academy's endowment.

Lutheran Brotherhood contributed nearly $5 million in support of Lutheran education in 1983. LIFT is one of many fraternal programs administered by the society.

Wildlife Meet At Grygla Is Report Session

Annual wildlife meeting of the Marshall-Beltrami soil and water conservation district was held recently when wildlife managers from Thief River Falls, Agassiz national wildlife refuge and Thief Lake wildlife management area attended and discussed past and planned projects and activities.

Ron Bell, Agassiz assistant manager, listed the following past projects:

(1) The ditch clean-out east of Olson Lakes which provides better water management and also provides a 1,200-acre burn compartment for controlled burning.

(2) Repair or installation of two control structures.

(3) Rotary mowing of about 150 acres of brush for deer and moose habitat improvement.

(4) Moose harvest in 1983 was 36 moose for 37 permits.

(5) Deer harvest was about 500.

Future plans include:

(1) Installation of a new structure between Tamarack and Northwest pools.

(2) Completion of dike repair and sealing along the Thief river in the north part of the refuge.

(3) Continue controlled burns for habitat management.

Gordon Forester, area game manager from Thief River Falls, discussed some accomplishments and plans. Listed were:

(1) Reapir and graveling of access roads on southeast corner of Eckvoll unit to the parking areas.

(2) Clean-out of the food plot ditch in Section 21 of Eckvoll unit to provide protection for private cropland above the unit.

(3) Complete dividing the Elm Lake unit into burn compartments.

(4) Plant about 40 acres of food plots.

(5) Seed dike and spoil on judicial ditch 11 clean-out and county ditch 27 clean-out for deer browse.

Gerald Maertens, Thief Lake manager, discussed past accomplishments and future plans, including:

(1) Possibly lower Thief Lake level to get more emergent vegetation in wetlands.

(2) Develop moist soil units for better waste management.

(3) Food plots and cooperative farming will remain about the same.

(4) Mechanical vegetation control was accomplished on about 200 acres north of the Moose river for deer and moose habitat.

(5) Plan mechanical vegetation control on elk range in northwestern Beltrami county.

(6) Plan to do controlled burns on about 2,000 acres this spring.

(7) May improve a half mile of township road to provide better access to the landing on north side of Thief lake.

(8) Will continue controlled hunting for waterfowl.

(9) Trying to get a good food plot for elk on private land north of Grygla, probably using sunflowers.

DelRay Larson, Marshall county commissioner, was present and discussed some of the county plans for the coming year. This meeting is held annually to provide an exchange of information and plans between agencies, the soil and water conservation district and the public.

Air Traffic Program At Inver Hills

Air traffic controllers are now being trained in a recently instituted joint program between Iver Hills community college, the University of Minnesota's general college and the Federal Aviation administration. Participants in the program will have jobs with the FAA associate degrees in applied science in air traffic control from Inver Hills and bachelor's of applied studies from the university.

Twin Cities campus-Inver Hills program is one of eight in the Great Lakes region cooperative education agreement with the FAA, which is part of a larger national project to turn out air traffic controllers with bachelor's degrees. Minnesota's cooperative arrangement between a university and a community college is unique, however.

"The FAA feels that controllers with broader educational backgrounds will make better employees," said Hope Isaacson, associate dean for instruction at Inver Hills community college. "Training air traffic controllers in communications and human relations skills is part of an overall effort by the FAA to humanize the agency and to better prepare air traffic controllers for advancement in the agency," she added.

About 20 students will be admitted to the Inver Hills program each fall, Isaacson said. After earning 45 credits, the students will be eligible to be tested and interviewed for jobs in the FAA program. Beginning this year, an FAA representative will visit campus each spring to interview students; four each year will be chosen to continue in the program.

Students who do continue in the program will become FAA employees appointed to the FAA non-competitive register of air traffic controllers. During their four-year educational program they will spend 39 weeks and earn 36 credits on paid internships in FAA facilities in Minnesota.

Course work at both Inver Hills and the university will focus on computer science, business and communications, as well as on air traffic controll.

Upon graduation, students will train for 16 to 20 more weeks at the FAA academy in Oklahoma City, after which they will return to air traffic controller positions in the Great Lakes region.

Coordinators hope that the addition of a bachelor's degree and financial compensation for the internships will help attract to the program more women, minority group members and the handicapped, groups that haven't previously entered the field of air traffic control in great numbers. "We think that to have these two educational institutions working together on a program like this is significant," Isaacson said. Dean Jeanne Lupton of the university's general college echoed this response saying, "This program is a model for cooperative education career ladders called for by Minnesota legislative leaders."

For more information on the air traffic control cooperative program, contact Isaacson at (612) 455-9621.

Small Business Week Observed In Community

In observance of national small business week, May 6 through 12, Thief River Falls, Chamber of Commerce has planned some special activities for area school students, intended to help recognize the contributions which small businesses make to the community.

Tours through several area businesses have been arranged for groups of high school and junior high school students, to enable them to get a behind the scenes view of what makes small business work. Elementary students are being requrested to construct posters depicting their favorite business and hand deliver them to the respective business owner.

Noting that small businesses are the lifeblood of the community, Chamber of Commerce President Roger Tunberg referred to an official proclamation by President of the United States Ronald Reagan, which stated in part: "America's Strength lies in the ingenuity and perseverence of its people. No other group of Americans better exemplifies these qualities than the nation's small business owners, who contribute daily to our economic well-being.

"The willingness of these individuals to embrace the challenges of competition and independence ensures that our lives are enriched with new opportunities and innovations. When their resourcefulness and resilience are melded with an economic system that allows them to pursue their goals and harness the dynamic formces of the marketplace, new products and technologies are developed, jobs are created, and the young and unskilled are trained for more productive lives. With each new opportunity our commitment to liberty is strengthened; with each new accomplishment our faith in ourselves is reaffirmed.

"Entrepreneurs are the standard bearers of economic progress and the stalwarts of the energizing forces of the free market. As we embark upon a new era of economic growth and development, we should encourage small business owners by acknowledging their tremendous importance as the mainsprings of continued economic and individual progress for our nation."

Wild Mustard Eradication Is Difficult Task

Eradicating wild mustard from an infested field is impractical with currently available weed control techniques, according to recent studies by the University of Minnesota.

Researchers used nine different cultural and chemical treatments and tried to eradicate a wild mustard patch at Morris. "Sad to say, after seven years of tests, the most effective treatment proved to be an impractical combination of three plowings and constant fallow treatments with a field cultivator," says Dennis Warnes, agronomist with the University of Minnesota's agricultural experiment station, Morris.

"When we sampled the top 12 inches of soil, we found we had reduced the wild mustard seed by 97 per cent, but that remaining three per cent worked out to 5.9 million seeds per acre," he says. Robert Andersen, research agronomist with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, worked with Warnes on the project.

Wild mustard is a serious problem in spring-seeded small grains in western Minnesota and in North and South Dakota. Recent improvements in herbicides have provided control methods for wild mustard in soybeans.

New Arrival Mother

The arrival of a baby is a miracle—it is creation! Birth brings into the world a new personality, alive with the promise for a full and useful life.

Babies! Each one is unique! Each one is divinely different! Even identical twins have different personalities, despite their same physical looks. Yet each mother is also unique in her own special way.

The same infinite power that provides the spark of life for a new child also created you. Like every baby who grows into an adult, you too have the stamp of your own individuality. There is nobody else in the world quite like Mom.

In fact, you, yourself are a walking, breathing miracle. And every day an all-wise and loving Heavenly Father brings you yet another great and unique miracle . . . a fresh, new, untouched day.

God's Church stands ready and anxious to help you begin these days with new hope—new promise.

This week, lets all of us pay homage to our mothers. Attend the church or synagogue of your choice.

LEFTOVER HAM GOES HAWAIIAN

On a leisurely Sunday, when you bake a ham, use the leftovers for a tasty and time-saving dinner that is sure to please your family. The Ham Cakes and Pineapple recipe featured here is perfect for a hectic weekday after work, when you want to streamline your time in the kitchen.

You can assemble and prepare the ingredients for the Ham Cakes in about 15 minutes. Then, while they are baking, you can make a salad, steam a fresh vegetable like carrots, and set the table, all in under an hour!

Although this tasty dish serves six, it only requires one pound of cooked ham, thanks to Honey Maid* Graham Crackers. Crush these crackers into crumbs and you have a new and delicious way to extend meat. Although children and adults have enjoyed Honey Maid Graham Crackers as a sensible snack for years, cooks are now discovering that the crackers add a special flavor to many recipes.

For a free copy of "Honey Maid Graham Crackers—Recipes For You and Your Family," write to Nabisco Brands USA, Food and Nutrition Center, River Road, East Hanover, New Jersey 07936.

HAM CAKES AND PINEAPPLE

How To Make Mowing Easier

Whether your lawn is the best on the block or not, you must mow it regularly, so why not do it right? Turf experts at The O.M. Scott & Sons Company offer the following tips to help make it more pleasant.

First, mowing doesn't have to be a chore. To expend less energy when you mow, take time beforehand to do some routine maintenance on your mower. You should always keep the blade sharp. It takes more energy (gasoline or electricity) and muscle power to operate a mower with a dull blade. What's more, a dull mower blade chops off the grass leaves, rather than slicing them cleanly. In just a few days your lawn can end up looking dry and brown.

Second, grass clippings don't have to be a problem. Some lawnowners like to leave clippings, in the belief that they add needed nutrients to their lawns. But even though clippings do provide a minimum of nutrients, the amount is not enough to warrant leaving them on the lawn. An excess of clippings can even cause yellowing or browning of turf. A leaf sweeper or lawn vacuum will pick up the clippings easily and safely. So will a mower with a grass catcher attached.

How often should you mow your grass? Scotts® suggests that you mow at least once a week during the growing season. When the grass growth slows down, you can cut back on your mowing frequency. They do recommend, however, that you start mowing your lawn in the spring, once a week, every week, and even more often if the spring season is rainy. They also say that you should continue mowing as long as the grass is growing, which is often until late fall.

The seasons also dictate how high or low you should mow your grass. During the heat of summer, raise the cutting height as much as an inch. Never mow too low in hope of prolonging the time between mowings. This practice will weaken grass and encourage weeds and other unnecessary problems. Also, never cut off more than 1/3 the length of the grass in a single mowing. If you miss a mowing, raise the cutting height slightly the next time. Then, bring the height back down when you mow again. Cutting off too much grass at once can "shock" the grass plants and cause them to turn brown.

By following these tips from Scotts lawn experts, you'll not only have a better lawn, but mowing will be easier and more enjoyable.

Nothing Political

Several years ago when the initial meeting on hazardous waste disposal site selection was conducted by the state waste management board in Thief River Falls, assurances were made that the selection process would be purely on a scientific basis and not a political process. Many local people were skeptics.

It now appears that the skeptics were also prophetic. Not only did the site selection situation become politicized, it became so highly political that the desperate need for a site two years ago has now diminished to no need at all. The Minnesota legislature has directed the waste management board to suspend its evaluation of candidate hazardous waste disposal sites.

Assurance was given in that initial meeting of the waste management board in the Thief River Falls city auditorium that the selection task had been given to the board by the legislature to prevent its becoming political. Since that time the political pressures have become immense and the waste management board and staff must have felt overwhelmed by them.

Opponents of a hazardous waste landfill — seemingly looked upon as merely uneducated alarmists and agitators by the WMB — refused to be stampeded into potentially unwise situations. They demanded accountability, they insisted on knowledgeable answers based on experience, they questioned speculative material presented as fact, they insisted on consideration of alternatives and they even presented alternatives for consideration.

Compelled to substantiate its contentions, the waste management board staff conducted substantial further study and research. Lo and behold, the results started to show what the uneducated had suggested all along — that the potential for recycling and recovery is greater than at first thought, that the urgency of a disposal facility was diminished, that underground burial of materials might not be either wise or secure, that efforts and finances might be better spent in researching and developing those areas where disposal is a last resort alternative.

The assurance was also given by board chairman Robert Dunn that because of the strict deadlines assigned to the board and its commitment to adhere to them, the board would complete its work in two or three years, turn its findings and recommendations over to the legislature and disband having done what it was assigned to do.

Alas, such was not to be. We believe Dunn to be a capable individual who very likely sincerely believed in the principles he espoused here at that early meeting. Having been a legislature himself, however, he shouldn't have been so naive about a board created by the legislature. It would appear that the waste management board, which should have faded away into the sunset, has now become a permanent additional fixture among Minnesota governmental agencies.

Let us note here that despite all the furor, opposition activity, charges and counter-charges, distortions and questionable facts which emerged in the flap over a waste disposal site, we strongly believe that the open presentation and public involvement was the way to go. Minnesotans are perhaps now more aware that residents of most states about hazardous waste problems and the need for solutions.

But we also believe that area people who feared political maneuvering and said so should be vindicated. They should also continue to be vigilant. Hazardous waste continues to be a problem and the battle is not won. And rest assured that politics will not be absent when the issue surfaces again in the not too distant future.

Model T Curbed Drunk Driving

We couldn't help but chuckle at the comment by publisher Kieth Axvig of the Red Lake Falls Gazette in his AOK column. "We have to give our forefathers a lot of credit. Back in 1923 I don't think very many people went to town, got drunk and then tried to drive home," he wrote.

The reason, he reasoned, was the following procedure generally followed to start a 1923 Model T Ford:

First you had to push the spark lever, on the opposite side of the steering column from the throttle lever, up as far as it would go. This kept the engine from "kicking." The throttle lever was usually pulled down about half between "shut off" and "wide open." You'd turn the switch key to the left. This would start one of the four coils buzzing and you knew you had current going through. The choke lever was on the right hand side of the dashboard, and the usual procedure was to sit with one hand on the spark lever, one pulling the choke and the foot on the starter button. Then when the engine started, you'd pull the spark lever down with the left hand, let loose of the choke with the right hand, move the right hand over to the switch key and turn it completely to the right, from "Bat." to "Mag."

If today's driver had to go through that system of starting the car, very few drunks would be on the road.

1984 Session Ends

Following editorial is from the Morris Sun:

In a news release dated Wednesday, Senate Majority Leader Roger Moe (DFL-Ada) paints a rosy picture of the recently-ended 1984 session of the Minnesota legislature. "I was delighted to have a surplus for a change," he tells us.

It seems that the $900 million surplus — money that never should have been taken from the taxpayer in the first place — gave lawmakers the opportunity to play Santa Claus on a grand scale. They were able to increase spending, fatten the state's "rainy day" fund, and even return a few bucks to the taxpayer.

The increased spending includes $24 million for legislative offices, $10 million for a light rail system in the Twin Cities, and $49 million for a "jobs program". The state budget reserve, already excessive at $250 million, was increased to $375 million.

Of course, the legislature did repeal the ten per cent income tax surcharge. Lawmakers were so proud of this accomplishment that they voted themselves (and other state officials) another big raise. (In 1972, legislators were paid $4,800 a year. By 1986, they will make $22,350 a year.)

Lawmakers would have us forget that the six per cent sales tax, characterized as "temporary" when it was enacted, has become permanent. The four per cent sales tax was "temporarily" raised to five per cent in July 1981 and "temporarily" boosted to six per cent six months later.

Adding to this burden is a property tax system that hits farmers the hardest. Yet $900 million to play with, the legislature suppled only $12.9 million in ag property tax reductions.

We should remember that even after eliminating the surcharge, Minnesota's income tax rates are among the highest in the nation.

Is it any wonder that the business exodus continues?

This year's spending increases come on top of last year's $1.2 billion jump in state spending. We can understand the expenditures for essential services like education and transportation. But it is absolutely foolish to spend $49 million on a jobs program when far more jobs would be created by allowing the taxpayers to keep this money. The jobs program was just one of many wasteful programs enacted in the 1984 session.

This is the basic problem: legislative leaders think they know how to spend your money better than you do. It's time to change this attitude.

Minnesota's business climate will improve when state government learns to curb its appetite for the taxpayer's dollar.

Greater Effort Needed

Following editorial is from the Rochester Post-Bulletin:

It is hard to give rational consideration to crimes that involve the sexual abuse and exploitation of children.

More and more frequent revelations of such cases make it appear that a sudden increase has occurred in offenses of this kind. It is more likely, however, that these despicable crimes have occurred with the same degree of frequency in the past — they simply were not reported. Thus, we must face that fact that one more ugly facet of human character is less exceptional than we would like to think.

This country's increasing openness and casualness in discussing sexual matters, while offensive to some, has at least permitted a more realistic look at people's behavior. It has led us to face the fact that sexual abuse of children is more common that most people have believed and that a much greater effort must be made to curb it.

Feeding Finicky Cows

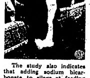
Dairy cattle can sometimes be finicky at feeding time, and one reason may be the acidity of their diets. Researchers at the University of Maryland have found that animals eat better when their corn silage rations are slightly acidic — between pH 5 and 6. At pH levels above and below this range, feed intake is reduced, the researchers say.



The study also indicates that adding sodium bicarbonate to silage at feeding time improves feed intake and cattle performance. The Maryland researchers compared consumption of Holstein steers fed various corn silage rations.

Feed intake appeared to be linked to pH of the feedstuffs. The highest consumption rate was with corn silage that had been supplemented with sodium bicarbonate. This ration had the highest pH--5.9. Consumption was lowest with fresh whole corn plant which had been acidified to a pH of 3.6.

In a second study, researchers compared intake of Holstein heifers fed corn silage to which had been added either 2,4 or 6 percent sodium bicarbonate, on a dry matter basis. A control group received silage which had no bicarb added.

Again, consumption improved as pH approached neutral. However, at the highest level of bicarb, pH of the silage was slightly alkaline, and intake was reduced.

"This research shows that corn silage pH is a factor affecting intake, and that sodium bicarbonate added to the ration can be beneficial in keeping silage pH within an optimum range of 5 to 6," says Randy Shaver, who conducted the research.

"Many studies have shown a response to sodium bicarbonate, and we have assumed that buffering in the rumen has been the reason for the response," adds Dr. Richard Erdman, assistant professor of animal science who participated in the research. "We're interested in the possibility that bicarb may also improve palatability by keeping pH of the ration at an optimum level."

TOOTH TRIVIA

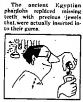
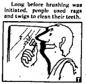
The ancient Egyptian pharaohs replaced missing teeth with precious jewels that were actually inserted into their gums.

Long before brushing was initiated, people used rags and twigs to clean their teeth.



Back in the 50s stannous fluoride was added to toothpaste to help make tooth enamel more resistant to tooth-destructive acids.



Today, a unique toothpaste called Oral-B* Zendium™ contains a dual-enzyme cleansing system to help prolong the benefits of professional cleaning.

Your dentist can help. By removing stains. Making broken, chipped, or discolored teeth good as new. Bridging gaps. Or your dentist may recommend you have orthodontic treatment to correct crooked teeth or improper jaw alignment.

The fact is, cosmetic dentistry can improve your appearance more than a new hairstyle or a closet full of designer clothes.

STRAIGHT TALK

Albert D. Hattis, Associate Professor of Business and Holder of the Schwan Endowed Chair for Free Enterprise, Southwest State University, Marshall

Bob's employer moved from a central city office, with plenty of public transportation, to a distant suburb 90 miles from his home and no train or bus service. Bob visited all of the new community realtors to find listings for a new home, but he was told that nothing was available. Because Bob's boss was concerned about losing a top mechanical engineer, he checked with the real estate brokers and found lots of listings.

Bob's boss bought a home and sold it to Bob. The neighbors terrorized Bob, his family and his boss. This was a suburb with a core population of so-called sophisticated professionals. They just weren't interested in a neighbor of Japanese-American heritage, even if he was a second generation American, a war hero, and a professional engineer.

Lorenzo had been an honor grad of his college class, but had lost one eye in an accident. Hundreds of employers had rejected his job applications because of that one artificial eye. It would have no impact on his job performance, but might disturb a fellow employee.

Mary Ellen was capable and committed to doing her best on any job she undertook. The only job offered was a secretary to the dean of a major medical school. She quickly proved that she was more than a clerk-typist. In spite of her demonstrated skills in managing administration and people, no one ever considered Mary Ellen for a supervisory job. After all, she was a woman!

What chance do you think an applicant as a research engineer would have who listed only three months in public school as his formal education? Those who measure intelligence, knowledge and ability based on formal education, would never have been willing to hire Thomas Edison, holder of 1,033 patents on everything from telegraph systems, the technology that made the telephone practical, the phonograph, the light bulb, batteries, motion picture cameras and projectors, improved motors and generators, and so much more.

A real estate developer wanted to build a housing project encouraging integration of races, ethnic and religious groups. The houses were priced to sell for almost double the national average price for new homes so that any buyer would have been in the top five per cent of income earners. The community in which this project was proposed unified to take every possible action to kill it. The future liberal governor of a major state worked to kill this project, even though he and most of his neighbors considered themselves supporters of good causes. They just didn't want integration next door to their homes!

What is that all about?

Two high school sophomores, one from the midwest and another from New England, sent me letters asking for my thoughts on prejudice because they had school assignments and were Straight Talk readers. They wanted to know what prejudice is, what causes it, whether it exists today, and what we, as individuals, can do about prejudice.

The dictionary I have on my desk defines prejudice as "making a judgment or having an opinion without gathering and examining the facts." Prejudice is the lazy person's way of doing things.

Looking at our examples, Bob's neighbors, who had never met him, didn't want him because his grandparents emigrated from Japan. Employers didn't want Lorenzo because of an accident he didn't cause. Mary Ellen didn't get promoted because her genes, at the time of conception, determined her sex. Thomas Edison couldn't get a research job because some people stupidly believed that ability is determined solely based on years of formal education. That integrated housing project never got built because the community feared people it didn't know or understand.

Prejudice is unfair to the man or woman who doesn't get a chance. Prejudice is unfair to our nation because it kills enthusiasm and a belief in freedom of opportunity.

I wouldn't be satisfied with the comment that there is less prejudice today than ever before, and that the situation will be even better in a few generations, if I were a victim of prejudice! Would you?

What can we do about prejudice? Each of us has to be willing to give every person we meet a chance to prove themselves. It's what they can do that is important, not who they are, how they appear, or even what they may have done. It's that simple.

Some time in the future, I will give you a blow-by-blow description of a civilized, sophisticated and free thinking American community torn apart by prejudice. Observing this city and its people taught me how thin is our veneer of civilization, even in 1984!

That's Straight Talk!

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

The 'Good New is Bad News' Cult

I just may have something here for the "Ripley's Believe It or Not" books. It is the recent emergence of a bizarre new tribe or cult distinguished by its mantra, "Good economic news is bad news." Its high priests can be found speaking from the front pages of the morning newspapers responding to the almost daily announcements that real economic growth is higher than projected, unemployment is falling, and job creation is proceeding at a breakneck clip with such stunning insights as, "Boy, are we in trouble now."

The latest sightings of this rather novel theology — for its tenents must be taken on faith rather than arrived at through reason — have been reactions to the Commerce Department's announcement that real economic growth for the first three months of 1984 was better than expected. The government had projected real economic growth at an annual rate of 7.2 per cent, but when the final numbers came in, we found the economy chugging along at the faster rate of 8.3 per cent. Economic growth means more jobs and more wealth, but the "good news is bad news" gang dons sad clown faces in response to this latest report.

The argument, and the word is used charitably, runs as follows: Economic growth leads to inflation; inflation leads to higher interest rates; and higher interest rates slow down economic growth. Thus, the way to avoid a slowdown of economic growth is to avoid growth in the first place. This is not a serious economic theory, and it certainly isn't common sense.

Now these experts and pundits whose grey matter would be better employed as paperweights cannot be expected to remember back four years. You and I, on the other hand, probably remember what was going on in 1979 and 1980. In 1979 economic growth was 2.8 per cent. Inflation was 11.3 per cent. In 1980, real economic growth was negative 0.3 per cent. The economy was shrinking, not growing. Now the growth-creates-inflation crowd would expect such a contraction to lead to low inflation and low interest rates. It did not. Inflation in 1980 was 13.5 per cent, and interest rates were at their highest level since the Civil War — 21.5 per cent.

The growth-creates-inflation theory is also rebutted by the recent history of Japan, which enjoyed both high rates of economic growth — rates which these experts tell us are "unsustainable" in the United States — and low inflation.

Both history and theory tell us that low inflation is a prerequisite for real and sustained economic growth.

Why then are we treated to the spectacle of some economists and politicians telling us that economic growth is a bad thing? There are several reasons.

Not so very long ago the politicians and their court economists told the American people that, if we would only hand the economy over to them to manage scientifically, they would produce economic growth and eliminate boom and bust business cycles. Well, we were foolish enough to have believed them, and they proceeded to run the economy into the ground and accelerate the recession, then inflation, and back to recession cycle. And stagflation.

To cover their tracks, the politicians then told us that we had reached an era of limits, that economic growth was no longer possible, and, indeed, some went on to say it wasn't even desirable. (The latter was heard from those who already had nice-paying jobs.)

When the American people rejected the idea that growth was impossible or undesirable and elected Ronald Reagan, these same pundits told us that supply-side economics would not bring growth and would bring high inflation. When inflation fell and growth took off — creating some five million new jobs in the process — the critics shifted to the argument that the recovery would soon abort. It didn't.

Desperate to cover for their own policy failures and jealous of the success of supply-side economics. They are grasping at straws and declaring economic health to be symptomatic of terminal illness.

So the next time you hear this sort of carping, just remember: Economic growth is just that, economic growth. And remember the corollary: It is a good thing.

CONFETTI SCRAMBLE

BREAK OUT THE EGGS
To Cut Calories

4 servings (about 255 KCal/serving)

1 cup kernel corn (cut fresh from cobs, frozen or drained canned)
1/4 cup chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons chopped onion
1 jar (2 oz.) chopped pimiento, drained
2 tablespoons butter
8 eggs
1/4 cup skim milk
1 teaspoon seasoned salt
Pepper rings, optional

In 10-inch omelet pan or skillet over medium heat, cook corn, pepper, onion and pimiento in butter until tender but not brown, about 5 to 7 minutes. Mix eggs, milk and salt until blended. Pour over vegetables. As mixture begins to set, gently draw an inverted pancake turner completely across bottom and sides of pan, forming large soft curds. Continue until eggs are thickened but still moist.* Do not stir constantly. Garnish with pepper rings, if desired.

*It is better to remove scrambled eggs from pan when they are slightly underdone. Heat retained in eggs completes the cooking.

This film is aimed primarily at 8-12 year olds, but older youth, parents and other adults may benefit from attending. Discussion will follow the film.

Ombudsman For Long Term Care In TRF

Northwest long term care ombudsman program is an advocacy and education project whose purpose is to improve and enhance the quality of life for nursing home residents. It is funded under the federal older Americans act and the Minnesota board on aging.

The ombudsman program in northwestern Minnesota is sponsored by Northwest Minnesota Legal Services (NMLS) of Moorhead.

Prior to 1984, the program was sponsored by Lutheran social services and had one full-time ombudsman located in Moorhead. In an effort to make services more locally accessible, NMLS has employed two part-time ombudsmen, one each for the northern and southern portions of the region.

Residents of Beltrami, Clearwater, Hubbard, Kittson, Lake of the Woods, Mahnomen, Marshall, Norman, Pennington, Polk, Red Lake, and Roseau counties may contact Jane Croeker in Thief River Falls at 681-6497.

Services available include assistance in resolving resident complaints or grievances, education and information on various aspects of nursing home life, including financial assistance and resident rights, and development of resident and family councils. Educational services are available to nursing home staff, residents, families of residents and the public in general.

County Board Takes Look At Woodland Bldg.

Pennington county commissioners considered purchase of the former Woodland Construction building and property for use by the county highway department at a recent monthly meeting. The county has been offered the property for $100,000 and made an inspection of it at its May 8 meeting.

The board membership is split on the possible purchase and members would be interested in hearing from interested members of the public regarding acquisition of the property. After visiting the site and considerable discussion at the last meeting, the issue was tabled until the next meeting.

Also presented to the board at the meeting was a progress report on Future Fuels, Inc., by Les and Rick Nordhagen and Russ Christianson. Further discussion was held on feasibility, land and site acquisition, financing, equipment cost and other items.

It was noted that a demonstration of the equipment will take place May 23 in Cherokee, Iowa, and it is expected that the county engineer and at least one county commissioner will witness the demonstration. It was also pointed out that the county's solid waste plan must be brought up to date prior to May 31, the deadline for Future Fuels' application for a grant. The plan is currently being updated.

Deputy Sheriff Bob Wold reported that 16 windows had been broken at Oakland dormitory and it was the decision of the board that all windows will need to be boarded shut. The former Oakland Park nursing home building is now vacant.

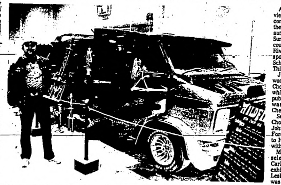
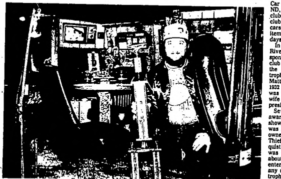
4,000 Visitors And 131 Entries At 5th Auto Show





PEOPLE'S CHOICE award winner at the North Country auto showtime in Thief River Falls this weekend was John "Wildfire" DeLong of Chisholm, who displayed a 1974 Chevrolet van and trailer. DeLong drove the entry to Thief River Falls Friday, running through rain to get here, then had the job of getting it spotlessly clean for the show. People's Choice award is considered the top award of the show since it is voted by show visitors as their selection as the top entry of the event. Photos above show exterior and interior views.

An estimated 4,000 people viewed the 131 total entries in competition and exhibition at the fifth annual North Country auto showtime Saturday and Sunday at the Pennington county fairgrounds in Thief River Falls. The event is sponsored by the Prairie Schooners street rod club of Thief River Falls.

John DeLong of Chisholm won first place in the People's Choice division of the show which was voted by general public attending the show. He was exhibitor of a 1974 Chevrolet van and trailer.

Second place in the People's Choice division went to Otto Johnson of Gatzke with a 1928 Ford Roadster and third place to Harvey Matthies of Anoka with a 1932 Ford Roadster.

Mayor's award winner selected by Mayor Bob Carlson was a 1935 Pontiac exhibited by Curt and Deb Leslie of Kindred, ND. The car was included in the Topper's Car Club display from Fargo, ND, which was winner of the club participation award. The club exhibit included several cars, old gas pumps and other items for early service station days.

In the absence of Miss Thief River Falls, ladies of the sponsoring Prairie Schooners club made their selection of the Miss Thief River Falls trophy. Recipient was Harvey Matthies of Anoka with his 1932 Ford Roadster. Award was made by Mary Walseth, wife of Prairie Schooners president Ed Walseth.

Several other special awards were made at the show. KKAQ radio selection was a 1960 Chevrolet Impala owned by Edna Lindquist of Thief River Falls. Mrs. Lindquist purchased the car when it was new and has driven it about 30,000 miles. It was entered for exhibit without any modification. The award trophy was presented by Phil Scott of KKAQ, who also served as master of ceremonies for the awards program.

School Elections In Area Tuesday

While voters in area school districts cast their ballots on Tuesday in local school elections, School District 564 board members will have several more months on the job. The board elected to hold its election at the same time as the general election in November, thereby anticipating a larger turn-out of voters.

In other school districts in the area, however, some interesting situations have developed.

At the Plummer school, for instance, where the polls will be open from 6 to 9 p.m. Tuesday, there are no candidates who have filed for election. Incumbent veteran board members Jerry Gerardy and Jerry Freitag did not file for reelection. School administration has been notified, however, that both would accept office if elected on a write-in ballot. Also announced as write-in candidates are Joyce Jolly, Madonna Lollier, Arlene Anderson and Merlin Carlson.

At Newfolden five of the seven members on the board will be up for election this year but there is no announced opposition. Polls will be open from 5 to 9 p.m. at the school in Viking, community center in Holt and elementary school in Newfolden.

Three members who have their regular terms expire this year are Donna Graham, Doyle Harstad and David Bakke. Two years remain in the unexpired term of Daniel Olson to which Roger Anderson was appointed and one year in the term of Robert Dahl to which Doreen Amundson was appointed. All of the incumbent board members have filed for relection.

A scramble is expected at Oklee where long-time board member Dr. Harold Lindquist did not file for relection. Incumbent Richard Rustan is being joined on the ballot by Dwight Carlson, Richard Mathson, David Bachand and Robert Melby to create a five-

Their display included several older vehicles which were award winners in themselves and an old-time service station theme complete with gas pumps. ## Tom Mickelson Demonstrates At Deer Park Meet

Thomas Mickelson, Thief River Falls, grand champion winner for his gardening demonstration at the Crookston Valley winter show, presented the program at the Deer Park garden club held recently at the Lavonne Radniecki home.

In his presentation, Mickelson, a deaf youth, stated that the various kinds of flower bulbs require different depth, location and care. To illustrate the proper depth in planting for more abundant bloom, he used a box, ruler and clamps.

Also speaking to the group was Beattie Mickelson. She gave information on the various perennials popular through the season and shared tips on their culture. She also distributed lists of perennials and explained the notes about each type.

Correspondence included a letter from the State Horticulture society announcing the society's project "1000 Blooms," for the media in observance of Horticulture Awareness week, May 13-19. Ethel Wiseth and Dorothy Svanjord were elected to head the project.

Pat Radniecki read the article "In Memoriam," regarding Richard C. Davids, who was president of the Bagley garden club at the time of his death. It was noted that at his request, his property "Farm by the Lake," has been turned over as a retreat center and a bird and plant sanctuary. President Helen Chervestad, chairman of the June tour, stated that the club will be visiting the place at that time.

Final plans were made for the annual plant sale to be held at the Senior center. Lauretta Stucy is chairman of the event and together with Theodora Anderson will be cashiers. Lois Swanson will distribute posters.

The meeting concluded with the presentation of appreciation gifts to Evon Hamilton; Shelly Steva and Tom Mickelson. The amaryllis donated by Tom Mickelson, was won by Lavonne Radniecki.

Seventeen members attended the meeting. Mrs. Clifford Arveson was a guest.

Students Lack Knowledge Of Other Language

American foreign language training is sorely lacking, creating grave economic, national security and educational consequences, University of Minnesota President C. Peter Magrath told the council of chief state school officers at its national meeting in the humanities in San Marino, CA.

Saying that Americans were "dyslexic when it comes to anything other than English," Magrath pointed out that just 15 per cent of U.S. high school students study another language and just one in 12 college students does. He called this lack of foreign language training in U.S. schools "one of the greatest shortfalls of our educational system" and asked if our nation wanted to be characterized as "the home of the brave and the land of the monolingual."

Although Magrath admitted that as a dean at the University of Nebraska in the late '60s he had helped dismantle foreign language requirements, he told the school officers that he now believes that decision was wrong. Magrath added that he was happy to have recently approved reinstating foreign language requirements at the University of Minnesota's college of liberal arts.

Magrath cited several examples of what he called the "embarrassing as well as dangerous consequences" of foreign language ignorance, such as a Pepsi slogan, "Come alive with Pepsi," nearly appearing in a Chinese publication as "Pepsi brings your ancestors back from the grave."

He made the following suggestions for U.S. schools:

+ Local school districts should provide foreign language instruction beginning in the earliest years of formal education.

+ Local school districts should begin a talent search for students of the highest foreign language ability and give those students opportunity for advanced study.

+ Colleges and universities should require second language proficiency for admissions.

+ Foreign language teachers should be required to demonstrate a high level of language proficiency and teaching ability to be certified.

+ An international perspective should be included in basic social studies courses.

+ Funding of foreign language programs should be shared by the local, state and national sectors.

+ Comprehensive plans for improving the quality of teaching and learning foreign languages and international studies should be developed in every state.

While acknowledging that improving foreign language training meant adding one more burden on the education system, Magrath reiterated that this goal is important nevertheless. "American schools must lead the crusade in advancing foreign language competency," he said. "At a minimum, such leadership requires a citizenry that knows the languages, cultures and social conditions of our friends and allies as well as our adversaries and antagonists."

Congress Hears VA Research On Diseases

Possibility that a damaged spinal cord could one day repair or regenerate itself is currently under investigation, said Veterans administration researchers at a recent congressional hearing. The hearing, before the subcommittee on hospital and health care of the house committee on Veterans affairs, was the first in a series of forums on VA medical and prosthetics research.

While providing high quality health care to the nation's veterans, VA also conducts an array of research activities concentrating on some of the most difficult research challenges facing medical science today. The first hearing focused on spinal cord injury, spinal cord rejuvenation and neurological disorders, including Alzheimer's disease and schizophrenia.

VA's deputy chief medical director, Dr. John A. Gronvall, also presented to the subcommittee a new publication that chronicles the contributions of VA researchers. Entitled "Medical Advances: The VA's Contributions to Health Care," the booklet was suggested by representatives of veterans' service organizations. It also traces the development of the VA research achievements possible to attain.

"We have a proud tradition of accomplishment that has been of benefit not only to veterans' health care but also the U.S. health-care system as a whole," said Gronvall. Such VA innovations as a robotic arm, omni-directional wheelchairs and aids for diminished vision will be featured at a second hearing on prosthetics research.

VA advancements in geriatrics research, with a special emphasis on Alzheimer's disease, will be the focus of a hearing on aging research scheduled for June 13.

Some of the advancements in medical science spearheaded by VA researchers include drug therapy for tuberculosis and mental illness, the concept of computerized tomography (the cat scan), kidney and liver transplants and development of the heart pacemaker. In 1977, two VA researchers were awarded the Nobel prize for medicine: Rosalyn S. Yalow of the Bronx VA medical center for her work with radioisotopes, and Andrew V. Schally, Ph.D., of the New Orleans VA medical center for his work on the endocrine system.

Developers To Meet Thursday

Union-Lake Sarah development association annual meeting will be held at 8 p.m. Thursday, May 17, at the "Old Main" (formerly Upper Deck) at Crookston.

Committee reports will be given and directors will be elected.

ID Card Needed To Apply Own Pesticides

In Minnesota, people who apply pesticides for hire or apply "restricted use" pesticides as part of their jobs must be licensed by the Minnesota department of agriculture. Private applicators who apply restricted use pesticides on their own crops and property do need an I.D. card, available after participation in a county training program.

To qualify for a license, a pesticide applicator must complete monitored examinations, meet financial requirements and pay a license fee. After that, participation in an approved pesticide applicator training program is necessary for relicensing.

Minnesota agricultural extension service offers a applicator's correspondence study course to help both commercial and non-commercial pesticide applicators meet their annual training requirements for licensing renewal. Enrollment begins immediately for the 1984 course.

An applicator qualifies for the correspondence study course if the applicator did not attend one of the pesticide workshops in early 1984; plans to be relicensed in 1985; and is licensed in one of the following categories: herbicide, fungicide-insecticide, turf and ornamentals, aquatic, forest spraying, seed treating, oak and elm disease, rights-of-way, agricultural pest control-animal and mosquito control.

To meet the October 1 enrollment deadline, contact the Office of Special Programs, 405 Coffey Hall, 1420 Eckles Ave., St. Paul, 55108 (612-373-0725).

Garden Space Should Fit Size Of 4-Her

Children's gardening projects should be geared to the child's capabilities. That way there's a good chance of success, says Polly Prunuske, Pennington county extension agent.

Best lessons are learned by actually doing. Sowing a few seeds or setting out some plants can give children the chance to help produce food for the family.

As soon as youngsters show interest, encourage a small garden plot of their own. Help them choose vegetables or flowers with easy-to-plant seeds and quick maturity so they won't be discouraged waiting for results.

For more information, contact the Pennington county office of the University of Minnesota's agricultural extension service at Thief River Falls.

Development, Erosion Cause Farmland Loss

by Gayle Borchert

Gayle Borchert

There are two main factors which cause the loss of topsoil. They are erosion and urban development.

Every day in the United States, four square miles of our precious topsoil is shifted to uses other than agriculture. The greatest shift is to urban development.

With the increase in population has come the rise in industrialization which means more roads, homes, airports, office buildings and shopping centers. These people, like the pioneers, look for new areas in which to build their homes and the only area left to be conquered is the rich farm land. The total annual loss to urban development is equal to three million acres or a half section of farm land per hour.

A very good example of this is in the Red River Valley. On one side of Columbia Road in Grand Forks, ND, is a farmer's field. On the other side is a large shopping mall and its parking lot. The size of the shopping center is estimated at 160 acres of mineral rich farmland taken out of production.

Things are being done to help us retain some of this farmland. Forty-eight states have adopted agricultural retention programs of one form or another. The effectiveness of these efforts will not be known until the "National Agricultural Lands Study" is evaluated. These results will be made available to all concerned with the land use program. Another possible solution is to offer incentives to developers to try to get them to use less desirable land and to keep the prime land in production.

The other main factor that causes us to lose topsoil is erosion. Erosion is defined in the dictionary as the "process by which the surface of the earth is worn away by the action of water, wind and waves".

Erosion by water happens when rain or any source of water starts to flow downhill. As it flows it moves soil particles. This will occur anywhere there is enough rain to cause runoff or where land is flooded by irrigation, snow melt or other causes.

Erosion by wind starts when the wind velocity reaches nine miles per hour at the ground level or 13 miles per hour, one foot above the ground.

There are several methods that will help to control erosion. Vegetation will help to keep the soil particles from separating and moving by putting down roots which bind the soil.

Mulch tillage is a method in which a farmer produces a crop while leaving all or a part of the residue from the previous crop on the land surface. This type of tillage has several advantages and they are: Helping to conserve soil moisture, reducing soil loss from water or wind, cutting production costs and providing food and cover for wildlife. There are also types of tillage which leave all crop residue on the field. This is called "no till planting". There is also strip tilling which leaves crop residue in the rows while tilling between the rows.

Field windbreaks will also help to curb erosion if they are placed on the right side of the field. Most farmers prefer to have trees in our region because shrubs catch too much snow, taking the land longer to dry out in the spring.

Terraced farming is not a method that is used readily in northwestern Minnesota, but in areas where there are hills, it helps to conserve soil by building up furrows which hold the soil in place.

It is clear that progress has been made in the battle to save our precious soil. The public has been made aware of the need to help save farmland through such agencies as the Soil Conservation Service and others. Some of our early forefathers like George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and James Madison worried about soil erosion, but it was in an age when there was still a whole country to be conquered.

We live in an age where we haven't turned over a new acre of farmland since the turn of the century. If each person participated in conservation programs just a little bit, the programs would work for everyone instead of for just a few.

Registration For Selective Service Good

Selective service registration was resumed in the summer of 1980. Men born in 1960 and later years, both U.S. citizens and aliens residing in the United States, are required to register as they reach age 18. Latest registration statistics show an overall compliance rate of 97 per cent. Minnesota has received 235,922 registrations as of the end of March. The registration compliance rate for the state is very close to 100 per cent.

"I am very proud of all the young men who have recognized their obligation and registered as required," director Thomas Turnage stated. "Their registration helps keep the nation prepared and at peace."

Men register by going to any U.S. post office and filling out a registration form which asks for their name, address, telephone number, social security number and date of birth. They should take some form of identification (driver's license, student ID card, etc.) with them to show the postal clerk.

Peacetime registration, when no draft is in effect, enables the U.S. to respond quickly to any emergency mobilization requiring rapid increase in the size of the armed forces.

"Registration is quic, it's easy and it's the law," Turnage added.

Hansons Are Artists Of The Month In May

(Thief River Falls community arts council regularly features an area "Artist of the Month" whose work is featured in a special exhibit for the month. Persons who would like to suggest an artist for this honor should contact the arts council by phoning 681-2980, evenings.)

Arvin and Gertrude Hanson of Thief River Falls were selected as "Artists of the Month" for May. Working as a team, this couple turns out an astounding variety of hand-crafted items, a selection of which will be featured in the display case at Northwest regional library through the month.

"Turns out" is an apt verb in the case of Arvin, who creates the majority of his fine woodwork on the turning lathe. Gertrude, in turn, adds a finishing touch to many of the pieces with paint and brush, creating designs which have a traditional Scandinavian look, while retaining an individuality suited to the particular piece.

Their work is so meticulously crafted, it is difficult to believe that they only began their hobby a few years ago, when they retired. Arvin was very ill in the spring of 1978, when he saw a lathe on sale, and thought, "This is something I've always wanted and just have to buy." By that winter, Arvin was creating wood turnings, and with some assistance from daughter Arlys Hendrickson, Gertrude was persuaded to take up rosemaling, enabling them to work together.

"This is what keeps me going," says Arvin of his woodworking. And it does keep him going, creating pieces both on special order and as the mood strikes him. Crafts made by the Hansons have been purchased by many people from throughout Minnesota, and are scattered across the United States, as far south as Texas, with a few projects carried as far away as Norway.

And while they do turn out an amazing volume of work, each piece retains an individuality that states that it is definitely not mass produced. Arvin studies a piece of wood before deciding what he will do with it. Then as it is shaped with chisels on the spinning lathe, changes in the grain of the wood may dictate further what the final outcome will be. Variety may be added by laminating different woods together. Before it is removed from the machine, it will be sanded and finished until it is smooth as silk.

Gertrude again studies the grain of the wood before she paints her designs, attempting to incorporate the grain of the wood into that design. Having been featured in a special article in the Times in April of 1983, she was somewhat averse to receiving additional publicity, commenting, "I believe that everyone has gifts, which they just have to take the time to develop."

Articles which have been created by the Hansons range in size from tiny wooden rings and ring boxes, to a piece which Arvin says he will eventually make into a lamp, "after I get through calling it a conversation piece," he adds with a twinkle in his eye.

Featured in the library display are a variety of those works, including baby boxes, bowls, boxes, a vase, a wooden egg, a picture frame, napkin rings and a number of wooden bells.

ARVIN AND GERTRUDE HANSON of Thief River Falls have been chosen as "Artists of the Month" for May by the Thief River Falls community arts council. Arvin creates fine woodworking projects on the turning lathe in his home workshop, often achieving special effects by laminating various woods together as shown on the butter churn which he holds. Gertrude then adds a special touch with her highly individual style of rosemaling, as seen on the sewing box which she holds. Numerous other projects on the shelves in the background give an indication of the variety of handcrafts which they make. Further examples of their work will be exhibited in the display case at Northwest regional library in Thief River Falls through the end of the month.

Get Correct Info When Filing Claims

Over 28 million auto accidents occur each year. Fortunately, says the Automotive Information council (AIC), nearly 85 per cent of these accidents are free of injuries.

However, even in the most minor fender-bender, auto insurance claims have to be filed, and knowing which information to collect could avoid insurance claim problems later on.

Keep a pad of paper and pen in the glove compartment of your car so you'll be prepared to take down the necessary information for an insurance claim should the unthinkable happen.

First item to jot down on the pad is the date of the accident and time it occurred. Ask to see the other driver's license. Copy down the driver's name and address, birthdate and license number. Note the state it was issued in and the expiration date. If the driver isn't the owner of the car, get the owner's name and address.

Ask to see the vehicle registration slip. Note the license plate number listed on the slip, the state the car was registered in and the registration expiration. Take down the make and model year of the car. Compare this information to the car and note the color of the vehicle. If the driver's auto insurance company name and policy number are listed on the vehicle registration, copy that down too, or ask for this information.

If the police were called, note the police officer's name, precinct number and location. If any witnesses are present get their names and addresses too.

Finally, diagram the accident and write a short description of what happened while the details are fresh in your mind, says AIC.

Legacy Of TR's Africa Adventure Still Lives On

by Thomas Harney
Smithsonian News Service

It was the era's largest and most famous African safari, led by Theodore Roosevelt (TR), a man who enjoyed shooting lions as much as blasting away at corrupt corporate power.

Seventy-five years ago, on March 4, TR returned to private life after seven strenuous years in the White House. Less than three weeks later, on March 23, 1909, the 50-year-old dynamo sailed for Africa in chage of a Smithsonian expedition to collect big game animals and other fauna and flora.

American public was always avidly interested in what TR was doing. The African trip was no exception. Thousands came to the dock to shake his hand and cheer as he exclaimed, "Bully!" and "Dee-lighted!" and waved his famous black slouch hat.

Not everyone, though, wished the trust-busting ex-president well. Wall Street magnate J. P. Morgan was quoted as saying, "America hopes every lion will do its duty."

Natural history and hunting were longtime TR passions. As a teenager, he spent hours in the woods near his family home in Oyster Bay, N.Y., gun in hand, collecting specimens—many of which he sent to the Smithsonian.

When TR entered Harvard, he planned to become a natural scientist, but his other major interests led him to a career in politics instead. Still, he continued to hunt and to study the lives of game animals. Indeed, he became so knowledgeable that he was considered one of the foremost field naturalists of his time. As he left the presidency, he saw an opportunity to make a serious contribution to science and, at the same time, have a great adventure.

TR proposed the expedition to Smithsonian secretary Charles Walcott nine months before leaving the White House. "I doubt if the National museum (as the National museum of natural history was then called) would ever again have the chance to get a collection which would be from every standpoint as interesting," he wrote Walcott.

Walcott could hardly resist such an offer, for the Smithsonian had little African biological material in its collections. Moreover, many major museums, including the American museum of natural history in New York City, were organizing expeditions to Africa and elsewhere to acquire big game animals, which were already diminishing in numbers.

The trip did not cost taxpayers a cent. Walcott raised $30,000 from private donors, among them the millionaire Andrew Carnegie. The money was used to outfit the expedition and pay the expenses of three Smithsonian naturalists who accompanied TR.

TR's own expenses, and those of his 20-year-old son, Kermit, who came along as the expedition's official photographer, were to be paid out of a $50,000 advance to TR from the Scribners publishing firm for a series of magazine articles and a book about the expedition. But before six weeks in Africa had passed, Roosevelt had run short of funds and had been obliged to write Carnegie for more money; eventually, another $37,000 was raised.

TR arrived at Mombassa, British East Africa (now the independent Republic of Kenya) on April 23, 1909. Traveling with him were three Smithsonian naturalists: Edgar Mearns, whose assignment was to collect birds; Edmund Heller, who preserved the larger mammals killed; and Alding Loring, who was in charge mainly of small mammal collection. Two highly skilled professional hunters also had been engaged to manage and guide the safari — R. J. Cunninghame and Leslie Tarlton.

Following morning, a special train started off toward the interior, where the safari was waiting. The railroad ran through a game reserve, and TR spent most of the day perched atop a seat built on the locomotive's cow catcher, enthralled by the zebras, giraffes, ostriches and other spectacular creatures that abounded close by the tracks.

At noon the next day, the train pulled into Kapati Plains station. At trackside, drawn up in ranks, was a group the size of a small military expedition: 260 porters plus safari administrators, rifle bearers and others to care for the safari horses and tents.

"Jambo Bwana King Ya Amerik" — "Hello, Mr. King of America" — came the group's deep cheer as TR stepped off the train.

From the Kapati encampment, TR and his party rode to the Kitanga Hills and the nearby ranch of Sir Alfred Pease, a noted British hunter who had invited the former president to be his guest. Accompanied by Sir Alfred, TR rode out at dawn almost every day to hunt.

Although Roosevelt relished hunting, he did not believe in mindless slaughter. At the safari's outset, he gave orders that no one was to shoot an animal unless it were needed as a museum specimen or as food.

TR was eager to get at least one specimen of each of the four most formidable game animals — the lion, the elephant, the buffalo and the rhinoceros. But lions were uppermost on his mind. "If only I can get my lion," he said, "I will be happy." He did not have long to wait.

Riding along a creek late one afternoon, TR heard a commotion in a patch of tall thick brush. Dismounting, he waited, his Winchester 405 "lion medicine" rifle in hand. Suddenly, 30 yards off, a tawny lion galloped out of the bushes. The first bullet was on the mark, and TR brought him down.

This was the first of TR's nine lions. Always dangerous, lions had slain or mauled a long list of hunters in East Africa. But TR was a good shot, and he was lucky. Throughout the trip, he carried in his pocket a gold-mounted rabbit's foot, a gift from boxing champion John L. Sullivan.

After a fortnight's stay at the Pease ranch, the safari went on to Nairobi, which had been settled by the British only a few years earlier. From there, the safari made long treks in the summer and fall to areas where game was abundant.

Safari on the march was a picturesque sight. Porters, balancing 60-pound bundles on their heads or shoulders, chanted and sang as they marched in single file. At or near the head of the line, they carried the American flag, which flew over TR's tent.

TR had gone to Africa a little out of shape. Some of the natives spoke of him as "the man with the big paunch," which was tactfully translated for him as "the man with unerring aim." But in general, safari life was no hardship for TR. His tent was equipped with a tub, and he usually enjoyed a hot bath and a shave before sitting down to dinner after returning from a hunt.

Another of TR's luxuries was a personally selected traveling library of 60 volumes of pocket-sized, pigskin-bound books. "I cannot go anywhere," he once told his sister Corinne, "even into the jungles of Africa, without a book to read." At lunchtime in the field, TR would pull a Shakespearean play or a light novel from his saddlebag and settle down to read.

In the evening, TR wrote detailed entries in his diary, notes that he later used to write his "African Game Trail" articles and, later, a book for Scribners. When there was an important kill or other exciting news, he would dispatch a runner to Nairobi with a communique. The two wire-service reporters covering the safari rewrote these bulletins, which were issued worldwide; newspapers in America carried accounts of TR's escapades almost every day.

In September and October, the safari hunted elephants "in tangled forest and matted jungle" on the slopes of Mount Kenya and Mount Elgon. In late November, the safari broke up. TR, with a smaller party, took a train to Lake Victoria, crossing the lake by steamer to British Uganda. There they hunted the rare white rhino in the Lado region. In late February, they finished the 1,200-mile expedition with a hunt for the eland (a species of antelope) in the Belgian Congo.

TR and Kermit arrived back in the States on June 10, 1910, stopping in Europe along the way to pick up the gold medal and money from Roosevelt's 1905 Nobel Peace Prize. All told, the expedition had sent back to the Smithsonian by steamer 550 large mammals, 3,450 small mammals, 4,000 birds, 1,800 reptiles, 2,000 fish and 5,000 plants.

The collection, says Charles Handley, a national museum of natural history mammalogist, "is still the largest and most comprehensive single research collection of East African flora and fauna ever made, and it is still heavily used by researchers today."

Dozens of the specimens were turned over to taxidermists, who mounted them for all the world to view in the Smithsonian's newly opened museum of natural history. They were considered marvels of taxidermy and still attract crowds at the museum 71 years later. "They should be good for another 75 years," Smithsonian taxidermist Frank Greenwell says.

For TR, the trip turned out to be a marvelous adventure, one that he took great pleasure in recalling. He would sit on the porch at his Long Island home, Sagamore Hill, drinking his coffee, rocking back and forth in his chair, recalling the beauty of the African veldt or the festive celebration that took place in camp after a successful lion hunt. The first words in his book about the safari said it all: "I speak of Africa and golden joys."

ANTIQUE COLLECTORS, browsers, curiosity seekers and other interested persons attended the antique and craft show Saturday and Sunday at the national guard armory in Thief River Falls. A variety of antiques and a number of craft type items were included in the displays.

ROW OF LAMPS was one of the display features at the antique and craft show conducted Saturday and Sunday at the national guard armory in Thief River Falls. Attendance at the two-day show was placed at 1,300 with 24 exhibitors from Valley City, ND, Crookston, Bemidji, Park Rapids and a number of area communities.

4-H Receives Grant For Pedal Power

Young bicycle enthusiasts can participate in a pedal power camp June 10 to 15 at Camp Lincoln, near Nisswa.

MSI Insurance company has awarded $2,100 to the University of Minnesota agricultural extension service 4-H youth development office for the Minnesota pedal power camp. The grant will provide $70 sponsorships to 30 teens interested in attending the camp and learning how to promote safe bicycling.

Interested teens should contact their county 4-H agent or Tim Crampton at the state 4-H office (612) 373-1625.

At the camp, teens ages 14 to 17 will be trained in bicycling techniques and safety rules. They will also learn how to teach others what they've learned. They'll learn how to conduct bike rodeos, rallies, trips, tours, group rides and get tips on organizing bicycle clubs for promoting safe bicycling. Campers will take short bike trips throughout the week plus a round trip to Brainerd.

MSI agents will recruit teens for the camp and support them when they conduct bicycle activities in their home communities following camp.

New 4-H fishing project record is available from the Pennington county office of the University of Minnesota's agricultural extension service.

Fishing project record can help youngsters learn more about fish and waters fish live in. It can also help develop respect for water [illegible] and the need to conserve and manage waters.

Fishing projects covers fish and their life history, safety and regulations, tackle, going fishing and preparing fish once they've been caught.

Another Super Effort

Saturday and Sunday's fifth annual North Country auto showtime at the Pennington county fairgrounds in Thief River Falls is another example of how a relatively few area people with organization and enthusiasm can reach exceptional accomplishment.

The Prairie Schooners street rod club is not a large organization, consisting of perhaps only 30 to 40 families. But unlike most organizations, it has displayed an ability to get a high percentage of its membership to get out and work. The results of that cooperative effort were readily apparent in this weekend's show.

In an atmosphere of competition where it would be easy to touch off disputes and dissatisfaction, the local club members have shown an uncanny ability to maintain the event as a pleasurable experience for exhibitors and spectators alike. There will usually be a disgruntled person from time to time, to be sure, but the North Country showtime operation is about as smooth as such an endeavor can possibly be.

To be perfectly honest, we don't care a whole lot about cars. We don't know anything about the mechanics of automobiles; we are not seduced by chromed engines or velvet upholstery or walnut instrument panels glistening with gauges; our ears aren't tuned to the beauty of rumbling exhausts or multi-tone horns or six-speaker stereo. A car to us is simply a convenient means to get from where we are to where we want to be and back again with as little difficulty along the way as possible. It doesn't have to be a work of art or even frequently washed; just dependable.

But we can appreciate the amount of effort and expense and tender loving care which is lavished on the gleaming mechanical marvels on display here last weekend. And even if we willingly plead ignorance to makes and models and modifications, we enjoy browsing through the exhibit and marveling at the results obtained by those with expertise, enthusiasm and elbow grease. If they are the things that turn some people on, that's great; more power (if that is an apt word selection) to 'em.

We are sure that after each show there is a question raised among the club membership if all the work and time and hassle of holding a show is really worth it. After all, there are other things that people could do that would be a good deal more fun and a lot less demanding. And who really appreciates the effort anyway?

For what it's worth, we would like to encourage those hard-working folks to keep up the good work. They are providing another wholesome attraction which is a definite plus for Thief River Falls. They are providing an outlet for creative activity to be put on display. They are establishing a strong tradition of excellence which stands as an example to other individuals and organizations.

Sure it's worth it, Prairie Schooners members. Keep on truckin'.

Rational Ruling

Following editorial is from the Bemidji Pioneer:

The recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling restricting the activities on which labor unions may spend the fees paid by non-union employees should send shock waves through union ranks, not to mention those politicos who are beholden to Big Labor.

The high court's unanimous decision overturned a lower court ruling by finding that unions may not use "agency fees" to pay for political or organizing efforts, even if the portion used for the union's political activities are rebated to the employee.

Congress had previously authorized the agency-fee system to prevent non-union employees from enjoying the benefits of the collective-bargaining process without paying their fair share. As the lines began to blue between benefits and politics, however, the Supreme Court issued a series of decisions discouraging unions from using these fees to promote political or ideological causes.

Several unions skirted such obstacles by requiring workers to submit written refund requests for their political "contributions." Inasmuch as these requests usually had to be filed during a specific unpublicized time period, the refunds were minimal and a long time in coming. But the Supreme Court's latest ruling will stop that fast shuffle.

Associate Justice Byron R. White's opinion was specific on this point: "By exacting and using full dues, then refunding months later the portion that it was not allowed to exact in the first place, the union effectively charges the employees (improperly) for activities.

"The harm would be reduced were the union to pay interest on the amount refunded," he said. Justice White cautioned that even then it would constitute "an involuntary loan for purposes to which the employee objects."

The court's rational ruling concludes 11 years of litigation on behalf of 201 Western Airlines workers in San Diego. But, in a larger sense, it is a victory for every employee in this nation who chooses to follow his conscience rather than the coercive dicates of a labor union.

Educating For Minnesota's Future

Following editorial is from the Princeton Union-Eagle:

Something over a year ago when Governor Rudy Perpich appointed a commission to study the future of post-secondary education in Minnesota, the state was in a fiscal crisis that endangered the continuation of the most essential services and there were forecasts of substantial decline in post-high school enrollments. There were many who felt, for fiscal good sense as well as quality in education, some of our institutions should be closed.

The 11-member commission has met, listened, traveled, observed and this week completed its report to the governor. It finds that the enrollment projections have been in error. One projection of 1989 post-secondary enrollment made in 1979 has been adjusted upward by 28,000 students this year. Projections were based on the pool of high school graduates. Other factors, such as the growth of non-traditional student enrollment, have rendered the earlier projections unreliable. The commission recommends no closing through recognizing that some decline may take place and some closings may become necessary.

A major position of the commission is that high school training only is inadequate for anyone in today's world and that we should make every effort to increase participation by high school graduates in Minnesota's post-secondary institutions which include the area vocational technical institutes (AVTIs), the state university system, the University of Minnesota, the community college system, the private colleges and universities and the many proprietary schools, and the in-house training programs in business and industry.

In the belief that the economic future of the state depends on the ability to develop an attractive pool of highly trained and skilled workers, the commission suggests review of the policy of high non-resident tuition and making resident tuition rates available for the top students beyond Minnesota and the present reciprocity arrangement area.

Great stress is laid on improving the quality of graduate education and research endeavors at the University of Minnesota which were eroded during the fiscal crisis. It is suggested that cooperation and coordination between institutions would be improved by facilitating efforts on a regional basis in terms of southeastern, southwestern, metro, central, northeastern and northwestern Minnesota.

Both national and local polls indicate a willingness of people to forgo tax reduction in order to improve education. Some would improve quality by making admission more selective and reducing the number of institutions. The commission reaffirms dedication to accessibility as well as quality and diversity.

In summary the commission finds Minnesota's post-secondary education system strong and well administered but needing support that will upgrade the quality of student preparation, will retain and recruit top faculty, will improve research and graduate education, and participation by an increasing number of high school graduates and students from all age groups. The commission study promotes the idea of lifetime learning. If its recommendations were implemented Minnesota would move into the front rank of states building a promising future for its people by determining to maintain the highest standards of quality in post-secondary education and increasing its use by all our people.

U of Minn. Panel Suggests Ways To Attract Students

To become one of the top 10 research institutions in the United States, the University of Minnesota must find ways to attract the best graduate students and faculty, who will be at the heart of tough competition during the coming years.

Recommendations for improving the prospects of the university's graduate school have been made by the task force on the quality of graduate education and research in its report released this week. The 18-member panel made its suggestions in four parts: faculty recruitment and retention; graduate student recruitment and support; a review of programs; and a review of facilities, such as libraries, that are central to graduate education.

Panel is one of five appointed by President C. Peter Magrath to examine various aspects of the university and to recommend ways to improve planning.

With graduate school enrollments leveling off or declining during this decade, the University of Minnesota will face stepped-up competition for top faculty and students. "In trying to attract good graduate students, it's going to become enormously more competitive. . . it's going to become really rough in the late 1980s," said Robert Holt, dean of the graduate school and head of the task force.

"Major research universities have the source of their vitality in graduate education and research," Holt said. "If that is strong, it can have ramifications throughout the institution."

Quality of faculty and graduate students are interdependent components that determine how good an institution will be, Holt said. "When you have a first-class faculty, you have a large number of students who are clamoring to get into that university to study with that faculty," Holt said. "On the other hand, if you have a reputation for having really good graduate students, then it's much easier to attract first-class faculty."

University of Minnesota ranks 15th or 16th among research institutions in the United States, but "the economy and society of the state of Minnesota require a graduate school that ranks in the top 10," Holt said.

Compensation and the quality of research facilities are among the most important keys to attracting the best faculty, said Holt, who stressed the need for the university to be competitive with comparable institutions — both public and private. UCLA, MIT, Yale, Princeton, Stanford and the universities of Michigan, Wisconsin and Illinois are among the institutions with which Minnesota must compete for faculty and students, the report says.

Competition comes not only when the institution is trying to attract newcomers, but also when it is trying to retain its best faculty. That's where the need for revitalization is important. The report recommends research professorships, sabbaticals and awards for faculty research as additional ways to increase faculty satisfaction.

A "cafeteria" of fringe benefits for faculty to choose from — such as university support for home mortgages and tuition grants for the children of faculty — could add an enormous and effective competitive advantage when trying to recruit and retain faculty, the task force report says.

Closer monitoring of tuition rates and student aid to keep Minnesota competitive is also needed. The report calls for "a dramatic increase" in the number and size of fellowships and teaching and research assistantships during the next four or five years.

Other recommendations for attracting top graduate students include setting up a fund to bring prospective students to campus and establishing work-study space within departments for use by graduate students.

Task force based its work on several principles "that must permeate university planning and decision making" if graduate education and research are to be improved. Among those assumptions are that "excellence in some fields cannot survive alongside mediocrity in others" and that at the graduate level, there is no difference between major private and public institutions.

Report makes a distinction between the way the university must run its undergraduate and graduate programs, saying: "Many taxpayers tend to view the public university as a place where their children have special access to a quality, low-cost education. However appropriate this view may be for undergraduate colleges, it is the death knell for a graduate school."

State Fair To Offer $230,000 In Premiums

Minnesota state fair will offer a record $230,000 in premiums to winning livestock exhibitors at the 1984 exposition, August 23 through Labor day, September 3. The state fair's livestock program includes open class competition for cattle, sheep, swine, poultry, dairy goats and horses. Competitive events for Future Farmers of America and 4-H livestock are also scheduled.

A new $300,000 milking parlor will be in operation throughout the fair as part of the open class, FFA and 4-H dairy cattle competition. The glass-enclosed working display, featuring milking equipment provided by the DeLaval company, will be located on the north side of the cattle barn.

Open class cattle and sheep shows will be split, with beef cattle and half the sheep breeds shown August 23 through 26. Dairy cattle and the remaining sheep breeds will be exhibited August 27 through 30.

Minnesota purebred dairy cattle association will conduct their second annual state fair dairy cattle auction September 1 in the cattle barn, near the new milking parlor. Over 60 head of cattle will be offered; cattle to be auctioned will be displayed at the fair August 31 and September 1.

Open class swine competition is scheduled for August 27 through 30. The competition will include the third annual all-breed swine auction August 29 in the swine barn. The auction will be conducted by the Minnesota purebred swine breeders.

Open class poultry competition will be held throughout the fair with chickens exhibited August 23 through 28 and turkeys, rabbits, waterfowl and pigeons shown August 29 through September 3.

State fair's open class dairy show is set for August 31 through September 3.

English and Western horse shows, along with the state championship horse pull, will be featured in the coliseum. English breeds and draft horses will be shown August 23 through 28. Appearing at paid English shows will be four-in-hand coaches. The horse pull is scheduled for August 29 and Western breeds will be shown August 31 through September 3. Coors draft horse hitch will appear at paid Western horse shows August 31 through September 2.

World's largest FFA livestock show will be held August 23 through 26. The beef cattle segment of the show for the first time will include a class for steers.

4-H livestock show is scheduled for August 31 through September 3. The competition will conclude with a market livestock auction September 3, conducted by the Minnesota livestock breeders association.

Well-Traveled Railway Exec Started Here

A Burlington Northern railroad executive who has a fleeting connection with Thief River Falls may hold the record for the most transfers by a railroad employee, according to the "BN News" magazine.

Don Eastland, manager of marketing planning in St. Paul, joined the company in 1955 and had his first job as a freight handler in Thief River Falls. Between 1955 and 1962 he was transferred to 106 different points on the system. He headquartered out of his parents' house in Larimore, ND, and made suitcase moves anywhere in the region whenever a telegrapher went on vacation.

"In those towns. . . there were no hotels," Eastland said. "You had to put your sleeping bag in the corner of the depot and hope there weren't too many mice around."

He was married in 1963 and in the past 20 years has moved only four times. That boosts his move total to 112.

Make that 113 — he and his family are now preparing to move to Fort Worth, TX. "I'm trying to convince them it will be an adventure," he says. "We've never been there before. It's a new experience."

CF Children's Future Better Due To Science

Twenty-five years ago, few children with cystic fibrosis lived beyond the age of four. Today, about half of those children born with cystic fibrosis can expect to live into their twenties. On May 19, area people will raise funds to help fight against the number one genetic killer of children by participating in the Thief River Falls walk or bike-a-thon.

Danie Packard and student chairmen Sandi Seidel, Domita Mack and Lynn Johnson have volunteered to organize this fund-raising event for the Minnesota chapter of the Cystic Fibrosis foundation.

Cystic fibrosis (CF) is an incurable, genetic disorder which affects the breathing and damages the lungs in one of 1,600 American children. Not much is known about CF. Approximately one out of 20 adults is a symptomless carrier of the CF gene, but there is no way to identify a carrier until a child is born with CF. No one knows exactly what causes CF or how it is controlled.

But research has provided hope. Thanks to money raised by benefit events in the past, the average life expectancy for a child with CF has increased from four to 20 years. Research takes money in order for the Minnesota CF research and care centers in Minneapolis and Rochester to continue their search for the answers. A test for identifying carriers is close at hand, but only with public support.

Air Safety Fly-A-Cross Set For May 19

Minnesota aviation groups will team up with the American Red Cross for the first time in the nation as part of an aviation safety and "Fly-A-Cross" program May 19, the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) aeronautics division announced.

Gov. Rudy Perpich, in proclaiming May 14 to 20 aviation week, noted the efforts of aviation groups and the American Red Cross, Minneapolis chapter, in sponsoring the safety seminar.

Open to the public at no charge, the program will be held at the Hennepin technical center, South Campus auditorium, 9200 Flying Cloud Dr., Eden Prairie.

Program begins at 9 a.m. with a two-hour aviation first aid course presented by Larry Tracy, advanced first aid instructor. Using a small airplane cockpit first aid kit, emergency care instructors will demonstrate how pilots can identify and treat a variety of injuries.

Dr. Robert Pozos, associate professor and head of the department of physiology in the school of medicine at the University of Minnesota-Duluth, will discuss "Analysis and Treatment of Hypothermia."

Mgt. Board Implements Waste Reduction Plans

Minnesota waste management board will soon begin implementing new state hazardous waste programs, approved by the recently-completed 1984 Minnesota Legislature.

Included are a $10 million loan program for the development of new commercial hazardous waste processing and collection facilities, a request for proposals for the development of these facilities and a technical and research assistance program for industries which generate hazardous wastes.

The legislature authorized the programs April 24, and allocated $1.1 million in new funding for the programs along with $10 million in revenue bonding authority for facility loans. The legislation will enable the state to begin to meet the goals set by the waste management board in its comprehensive hazardous waste management plan to foster hazardous waste reduction and reduce dependence on land-disposal.

The waste management board is developing program rules and will soon start accepting applications for several types of assistance in hazardous waste management. The programs are designed to help reduce the amounts of hazardous waste requiring land-disposal by providing assistance in several areas.

— $150,000 has been allocated for a technical and research assistance program for hazardous waste generators, to help them reduce and properly manage the generation of hazardous wastes. Information on waste reduction techniques will be assembled, catalogued and disseminated to industries, and could be available as early as this summer.

Services to Hazardous waste generators will include on-site consultation and other "outreach" programs to assist them in evaluating their waste management programs and identifying opportunities for waste reduction and improved waste management. A task force of industry representatives will act as advisors to the program.

— $150,000 has also been allocated for waste reduction grants. These grants, which will be available this fall, will fund studies by hazardous waste generators to determine the feasibility of applying specific methods and technologies to industrial processes to reduce the generation of hazardous wastes. Information obtained through the studies will be made available to all hazardous waste generators through the technical assistance program.

— $350,000 in grants will be available for firms to study the feasibility of developing and operating specific types of commercial hazardous waste treatment and transfer or storage facilities. Grants are limited to $50,000 per study although more than one grant could be awarded for a series of studies of an individual facility.

These grants may be awarded for market assessments, conceptual designs and preliminary engineering, financial planning and business structuring, site analysis and other non-capital facility development procedures to help the developer reach the point of operational capacity.

The deadline for application for facility development grants is Sept. 1, 1984. Individuals or firms applying for a grant will be required to provide 50 per cent matching funds; associations of hazardous waste generating companies will be required to provide only 20 per cent in matching funds.

— $350,000 will be awarded for the development of a statewide hazardous waste transportation and collection service. This program is intended to address the needs of Minnesota's many small-volume generators of hazardous wastes, as well as those businesses with inadequate in-house resources to properly manage wastes.

Matching funds of up to 10 per cent of each grant award will be required of developers applying for grants to develop the collection and transportation service.

— The waste management board will solicit proposals for the development and operation of specific commercial hazardous waste processing and collection facilities and services, including integrated temporary storage and treatment facilities through a newly authorized "request for proposals." The "RFP's" will help to indentify potential hazardous waste facility developers for Minnesota.

Firms responding to the board's request will be given priority for technical, financial and planning assistance from the state, including information on "preferred areas" for hazardous waste processing facilities identified in 1983 by the board in or near 20 Minnesota communities.

The board will issue its request for proposals by June 1, 1984 with proposals due Nov. 1, 1984.

— $10 million in increased state revenue bonding authority was authorized to fund loans to help finance the construction of new hazardous waste processing facilities. Loans will not be restricted to firms presenting proposals to the board under its other programs, but preference will be given to firms who have responded to the RFPs. Loan applications will be certified by the waste management board and administered by the Minnesota department of energy and economic development.

Each loan application will be evaluated based on the feasibility of the proposed technology, the project's market assessment, and the contribution the facility would make toward the goals of the board's hazardous waste management plan, including the overall reduction in the need for hazardous waste disposal in Minnesota. Loan applicants may be required to provide at least 25 per cent of the capital cost of a facility and pay the cost of any land acquisition.

Detailed information on all of these new programs or on other activities of the Waste Management Board is now available from the board offices at 7323 58th Avenue N., Crystal, Minnesota 55428.

Poisons To Be Discussed At Meetings

Annually in Minnesota, about 100,000 children and adults require either poison information or emergency treatment. Seventy to 80 per cent of the poisonings involve children under the age of five.

On Thursday at 7:30 p.m. a program will be held in the community room of the First American bank at Warren and a second program will be held on May 17, at 7:30 in the library of the Marshall county central school at Newfolden.

Topics to be covered include indentification of poisonous materials and prevention methods. Materials will also be available on safe use of farm pesticides.

These meetings are free and open to the public. It is being sponsored by the Marshall county extension office, Marshall county nursing service and the Minnesota poison control system.

Dutch Elm Disease Meets Its Match

Dutch elm disease, the ruthless destroyer of hundreds of thousands of magnificent American elm trees, is meeting its match in a band new species, the American Liberty elm, that is soon to be distributed nationally.

According to its sponsor, the non-profit Elm research institute of Harrisville, NH, this new elm is the result of many years of intensive research at the University of Wisconsin.

While there have been disease resistant elms on the market for several years, they have all been hybrid crosses of Japanese and Asian elms, and the end product nowhere compared with a true American elm in size, shape and contour.

American Liberty elm is the first true, totally American elm to be remarkably Dutch elm disease resistant and to closely resemble its disease-prone relatives in all of the characteristics enumerated above.

Elm research institute is so confident of its new species' disease resistance that it warranties all its trees for ten years. They will restore, at no charge, any of its American Liberty elms that dies of Dutch elm disease with a replacement tree of similar age and size.

Institute has intiated its "Johnny Elmseed" program to find and computerize the exact locations of all mature elms in the entire nation. In return for finding and reporting such a live American elm, the Elm research institute will send one free American Liberty elm seedling to the person reporting its exact street location and owner identification.

Located in a wing of a historic mill in the picture-book town of Harrisville are the propagating greenhouses where Institute personnel are raising the trees from stem cuttings to trees mature enough to be transplanted.

It is the goal of the institute to distribute, through its various programs, some 10,000 viable trees during the first year of the distribution program. Some will be sold at minimal prices and many more will be given away through the institute's varied programs.

Further information on any aspect of these programs may be obtained by writing the Elm Research Institite, Harrisville, NH 03450. Telephone inquires are welcomed during normal business hours at (603) 827-3048.

MSU Honors 6 From TRF Area At Convocation

Six Moorhead state university students from Thief River Falls were given special academic distinction during an honors convocation held May 6 on the MSU campus in Moorhead.

Recognized on MSU's special honors list, with grade point averages between 3.75 and 4.0 were freshman Pamela Rae Finney, daughter of Allen Finney; junior Sharon Mari Krystosek, daughter of Edward G. Krystosek; and junior Gary Alan Ulrich, son of Lawrence Ulrich.

Recognized on MSU's honors list, with grade point averages between 3.5 and 3.74 were sophomore Kathleen Marie Kjos, daughter of Lucille Kjos; senior Craig Lyle Molstad, son of Oliver Molstad; and Jacqueline Kay Ulrich, daughter of Henry Holte.

VOLUNTEER WORKERS who have assisted with the pediatric clinics sponsored by the Zehlian art group of the Thief River Falls women's club were honored at a social event Friday afternoon at the Kathy Winjum home. Among those honored were (left to right) Diane Freeman, Lydia Dahlen, Margaret Race and Juanita Dahl. Serving coffee was Margaret Saetre.

New Camping Facilities Open To Handicapped

Several campgrounds on the Chippewa national forest now have one or more spurs constructed to accomodate physically handicapped forest visitors.

Modifications include "hard-surfaced" trails for wheelchair access around the campsite and to water pumps, toilet buildings and, at some of the campgrounds, to the lakes. Fire grates, picnic tables and toilet buildings are also designed for easy access at certain sites. At the Rabideau CCC camp historic site south of Blackduck, trails have been blacktopped to the well and toilets, and the parking area has been hard-surfaced.

Chippewa campground in the Cass Lake ranger district, new in 1983, has six of the modified spurs; O-Ne-Gum-E campground in the Deer river ranger district has two; and the following campgrounds have one modified site each: Stony Point in the Walker ranger district, and Clubhouse lake in the Marcell ranger district.

This summer, work will be done to modify one spur and the trails at Webster lake campground in the Blackduck ranger district. The Chippewa campground has flush toilets for physically handicapped campers; the other campgrounds have vault toilets.

One weekend during the 1983 season, a group of of three families with physically handicapped individuals camped at the new Chippewa campground, including one family who had never camped before. Both the experienced and novice campers were enthusiastic about the campground and its modified facilities; the experienced campers felt that it was one of the best campgrounds they had ever visited.

Most of the campgrounds in the Chippewa national forest are open from mid-May through Labor day weekend; a few are open later in the fall or year-round, although roads are not plowed. Fees range from $2 to $9 per night for each campsite.

For more information about specific campgrounds, contact district rangers at Chippewa national forest offices in Blackduck, 218-835-4291; Cass Lake, 218-335-2283; Deer River, 218-246-2123; Marcell, 218-832-3161; and Walker, 218-547-1044.

Cooling Home May Not Take Conditioner

Some people think that an air conditioner is a must for continuously comfortable summertime living. John O'Neal is not one of them.

"Here in Minnesota there are times when air conditioning is needed," said O'Neal, an energy specialist who works for the Minnesota department of energy and economic development's energy information center.

"There are days and situations when it is absolutely necessary. But most of the time residents of Minnesota can live very well and comfortably without using an air conditioner. Most people use their air conditioners when they could just as well be cooling their homes with other less expensive but still effective means."

There are two basic steps to staying cool and comfortable on hot days without air conditioning, O'Neal said: manage energy to keep heat out and ventilate properly. O'Neal recommends several steps toward energy management that will help keep heat out of your home. Among them:

+ Close windows early on hot days and open them in the evening to take advantage of cool breezes.

+ Close curtains and shades during the day to reduce solar heat gain. Outdoor awnings, sunscreens or overhangs work even better and can reduce heat gained through windows by as much as 80 per cent.

+ Use kitchen and bathroom exhaust fans while cooking or after bathing to get rid of heat and moisture quickly. High humidity increases your discomfort.

+ Wear light-weight and light-colored clothing. Natural fibers like cotton and linen generally cool better than do synthetics.

+ Cut cooking to a minimum and serve salads and sandwiches. If you want to cook, use as small an appliance as possible: for instance, an electric frying pan instead of the range.

+ Storm windows and insulating glass help keep heat outside, so leave them in place, if possible.

+ Ventilation is very important to keeping your home cool in the summer and it deserves a great deal of attention, O'Neal said.

"Proper ventilation can make a world of difference. Get a fan to help air circulation. Ideally put it in an open west or south window when the day has cooled off and open an east or north window to get a crossdraft in the room you want cooled first. The fan will blow out hot air and pull in cooler air through the open window."

There are many other aspects of energy management and ventilation that can be used, O'Neal said.

"We have a lot od ideas here at the energy information center, more than I've talked about here. Anyone interested in cooling their house without the expense of air conditioning should give us a call and talk to one of our energy specialists.

"We can try to answer questions and send out our publication on summer cooling. It will be well worth the effort and there is no charge," he added.

Energy information center can be reached at 296-5175. Outside the Twin Cities area call, toll free, 1-800-652-9747. Ask for energy.

Flash Flood Awareness Set For May 20-26

Gov. Rudy Perpich has proclaimed flash flood awareness week in Minnesota May 20 to 26. This is the third year the state has called attention to the problems associated with flash floods.

During the week the state department of public safety emergency services division and the Minnesota national weather service office will be focusing attention on the causes of flash floods and their inherent hazards.

In conjunction with the national oceanic and atmospheric administration (NOAA) national weather service the American Red Cross is helping organizations heighten public awareness of flash flood hazards. They hope to dispel the myths about flash flood and to emphasize the correct actions people should take to protect themselves.

Many flash flood deaths happen because warnings are not heeded. The typical flash flood results from continuous rain over a particular area caused by a stalled weather pattern. In Minnesota the potential flash flood season extends through mid-September.

People often ignore flash flood warnings because they cannot actually see the flood waters. They look outside, see no immediate danger, and do not feel threatened. The danger may be developing upstream, out of sight. It is vital that residents know that the warning signals are and heed them if they are activated.

If minor flooding has damaged your property in the past, evacuation may be the safest action in cases of severe or record crest warnings.

To be prepared for evacuation, get familiar with a flood-free evacuation route. If you are driving when a flash flood watch is issued, it is vital that you stay tuned to local weather information. Stay clear of low-lying roads that might be inundated. If a flash flood warning is issued, go immediately to the nearest high ground.

Babbitt Hosts Radio Control Model Pilots

Radio controlled model airplane enthusiasts are being invited to a "Fun Fly" on June 23 and 24, in Babbitt, as part of the annual Peter Mitchell celebration, sponsored by the Babbitt Lions club.

Pvt. Aronson Learns Marine Corps Vehicles

Marine Pvt. Steven W. Aronson, son of Lois Dalager of St. Hilaire, has completed a seven-week motor vehicle operator's course at the marine corps base, Camp Pendleton, CA.

Students received classroom and behind-the-wheel instruction on the operation and capabilities of marine corps vehicles, defensive driving techniques, "rules of the road" and user-level preventive maintenance.

Illegal Test Pipes Impede Clean Air Goal

Illegal substitution of "test pipes" for catalytic converters in late model cars is impeding efforts to improve the air we breathe, according to the American Lung association of Minnesota.

Test pipes, so-called because they were developed for the purpose of testing converter performance, are now being installed on an estimated two to three million cars annually. They are installed on the assumption that the car owner is testing to see if his car is running poorly because of a malfunctioning catalytic converter: the converter is removed and a section of test pipe of the same length as the converter is installed in its place to see if there is any improvement.

Trouble occurs when motorists keep the test pipes in their cars permanently and then use leaded gasoline.

This practice is illegal and the repair garages and mechanics who install the pipes are subject to heavy fines. It is also a disservice to the community in terms of clean air and the public health, according to the American Lung association of Minnesota. Removing the converter increases hydrocarbons, carbon monoxide and nitrogen oxide emissions substantially — anywhere from 300 per cent to 800 per cent depending on the pollutant.

Car owners mistakenly believe that replacement of the converter with a test pipe and using leaded gas will improve performance. Test pipe advertising claims the pipe makes cars run better.

"This is misinformation," Lynne Day, regional program manager for the American Lung association of Minnesota says. "There is more to the air pollution control system on today's automobile than just the catalytic converter. The converter is the key element, but some of the car's other components are fine-tuned to be compatible with the converter and maximize its efficiency. Test pipes can, in fact, be damaging to the car's engine, particularly when used with leaded fuel. In some instances they reduce gas mileage. Leaded gas also reduces oil and spark plug life and corrodes the exhaust system."

Use of test pipes is in violation of the intent of the clean air act, Day says. The environmental protection agency is aware of this trend, and heavy fines are being levied.

"Catalytic converters work," emphasizes Day. "Both carbon monoxide and hydrocarbon emissions have been reduced by more than 85 per cent, and nitrogen oxides are down over 75 per cent. Much of the reduction in automobile pollutants and the decrease in automobile-related air pollution can be attritubed to catalytic converters, but obviously this progress is lost when the converter is removed."

The American Lung Association of Minnesota is offering free information on fuel switching, tampering, and air pollution. For information, write or call the association at: American Lung Association of Minnesota, 614 Portland Avenue, St. Paul, 55102, 1-800-582-5764.

TORNADO INFORMATION

Now that we are in the midst of the tornado season, the fire siren will be used to warn the residents in the city of Thief River Falls of any tornadoes which may be sighted.

A steady blast for five minutes is an alert that a tornado has been sighted. Head for shelter!!

When you hear the steady blast for five minutes, take cover immediately as a tornado is close to the city and could strike. Take a transistor radio with you and stay tuned to KTRF at 1230 or KSNR at 99.3 FM on your radio dial to be kept informed as to what is happening . . . tornado, flash flood, or any natural disaster. KTRF & KSNR will also inform you when the danger is passed and it is safe to come out.

The one minute blast and the one minute wailing tones that are heard the first Wednesday of each month are just to test to see that the siren is working properly.

When a tornado approaches, your immediate action can save your life!

In homes, take shelter in the basement or under heavy furniture in the center area of the house. When in the basement it is a good idea to protect yourself under the stairway or under heavy furniture.

In schools, move quickly (following advance plans) to shelter areas or to an interior hallway on the lowest floor.

In office buildings, go to an interior hallway on the lowest floor or to a designated shelter area. In businesses and stores, move quickly (following advance plans) to shelter areas. Post a lookout if this can be done safely. (Do not go to your parked car.)

Mobile homes are particularly vulnerable to overturning during strong winds and should be evacuated when strong winds are forecast. Damage can be minimized by securing trailers with cables anchored in concrete footings. If there is no shelter nearby, leave the trailer park for low, protected ground. The law enforcement center is available as a shelter during severe weather.

In open country, move away from the tornado's path at a right angle if there is no available shelter. If there is no time, lie flat in the nearest depression with your hands shielding your head. Be alert for flash floods.

During a severe thunderstorm or tornado emergency listen for KTRF broadcasts of the latest national weather service bulletins. During a tornado watch, KTRF alerts listeners with a set of beeps every 70 seconds. When a tornado is sighted, the emergency broadcast signal is sounded by KTRF.

Have a transistor radio with new batteries to take with you if electrical power is lost.

TORNADO SAFETY RULES . . .

1984 Spring Sports State Tourneys Open June 4

During the period Monday, June 4, until Friday, June 15, the Minnesota State High School League will conduct spring state tournaments in five sports for the young men and women throughout the state that qualify for them.

State champion teams will be crowned and individuals will compete for the coveted gold medals during this 12-day period, reports MSHSL Director of Publication and Information who supplied the following capsule report on each of the various state tournaments.

Golf

First to start state tournament play are the boys and girls who qualify for state golf tournaments, which for the ninth straight year will have competition in classes — AA and A — for boys, and for a sixth time for girls.

State Class A golf tournament for boys and girls will be held for a third straight year at the St. Cloud Country Club. Eighteen holes will be played on Monday, June 4, followed by another 18 on Tuesday, June 5. Play begins Monday at noon and commences at 8 a.m. on Tuesday.

Players in the larger Minnesota high schools will participate in the state Class AA golf tournament, which is scheduled for Majestic Oaks golf course in Ham Lake on Wednesday, June 6, and Thursday, June 7. Action on June 6 starts at noon with an 8 a.m. start scheduled for June 7. Like in Class A, 36 holes will be contested.

New golf medalists will be a certainty in both boys and girls divisions of Class AA and A as all gold medal winners from a year ago have graduated.

Top underclassmen returning in boys competition include Kirk Vanstrum, a senior from Mahtomedi, who this year will be competing in Class A after last year finishing third in Class AA. In Class AA, Mike Scheller, a senior from Coon Rapids who finished fourth in 1983, is seriously expected to challenge for top honors this season.

Among the top girls will likely be Lynda Otness, a senior from Farmington who was Class AA runner-up last year. Otness will be competing in Class A this year as Farmington became a Class A school once again this school year. Another player in Class A expected to challenge for top honors is Mary Kuhlman, senior from Montevideo who finished third in Class A in 1983. In Class AA, senior Lori Allen, Hutchinson, fourth in 1983; and junior Katie Hughes, Park-Woodbury, seventh a year ago, are among the better players.

Team champions in 1983 were in Class A Sauk Centre (boys and LeSueur (girls), and in Class AA Mahtomedi (boys and Edina (girls). There are 257 varsity boys teams and 215 varsity girls teams competing in interscholastic golf throughout Minnesota this spring.

Tennis

This year's 56th annual state high school boy's tennis tournament for the second consecutive year will be a one-class tournament as a result in the number of school in Class A sponsoring boys tennis (48). In all, 151 high schools are sponsoring the sport this spring season. Participants involved number nearly 3,000.

In 1984 state tournament will take place Wednesday through Saturday, June 6-9, at the 98th Street Tennis Club in Bloomington. Team, singles and doubles titles will be contested.

Team portion of the tournament is scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday, June 6 and 7. Team quarterfinal matches will begin at noon and 2 p.m. on Wednesday. Semifinal and championship matches will be held on Thursday at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m., respectively.

Singles and doubles play is on tap Friday and Saturday, June 8 and 9. Singles action on Friday begins at 9 a.m. and continues with second and third rounds through most of the afternoon. Saturday's play is devoted to semifinal and championship matches with starting times at 9 a.m. and noon, respectively.

Doubles competition has the same starting time format as singles play with action taking place on various courts.

In all there will be 24 singles participants (top three players from eight separate section meets) and 24 doubles teams (top three teams from eight separate section meets):

All three individuals who won gold medals a year ago have graduated — namely two-time singles titlist Darryl Laddin, Hopkins, and doubles victors Shawn Bresnahan and Dave Nelson, St. Cloud Tech.

Top threats to capture the singles title in 1984 include two players who have reached the finals during the previous two years. Senior Tom Olmscheid, Coon Rapids, and freshman David Wheaton, Minnetonka, appear to be the odds-on favorites this season. Olmscheid lost to Laddin in last year's finals, while Wheaton succumbed to Laddin two years ago as a seventh-grader. Olmscheid reached last year's championship match by way of a 6-4, 6-2 victory over Wheaton.

Track and Field

Largest single sporting event in terms of state tournament participants takes place annually when the state boys and girls Class AA and Class A track and field meet is conducted each spring.

About 1,000 boys and girls representing more than 250 high schools will converge at one site — Bloomington Stadium on Friday and Saturday, June 8 and 9, for the 62nd annual boys running and 13th annual event for girls.

Activity on Friday will be devoted to preliminaries in all but one running event. Some field event finals will also take place on Friday, but most of the individual state champions will be named when competing on Saturday. Saturday's action begins with field events at 11 a.m. followed by the running events at 12:30 p.m. The last event that day is scheduled for 5:10 p.m.

Defending team champions include Northfield (AA) and Austin Pacelli (A) in boys and Minnetonka (AA) and Greenway of Coleraine (A) in girls.

A number of outstanding performers from the 1983 state meet are expected to gain berths once again this year. One standout performer from last year who did not graduate was Burnsville's Jason Bruce, now a senior who a year ago captured both the 200 and 400 meter dash races.

A girl that scintillated last year was Blooming Prairie standout Jeanne Krukeberg, now a sophomore who in 1983 won two events — the 400 and 800 meter events. Krukeberg's time of 2:11.71 in the 800 meter run was a new all-time meet record.

A total of 405 schools registered with the MSHSL to participate in interscholastic track and field this season.

Fast Pitch Softball

Eighth annual MSHSL state girls fast pitch softball tournaments will also take place during the week of June 3.

Scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday, June 5 and 6 for Class AA and Thursday and Friday, June 7 and 8, for Class A, this year's events will be held again at two sites — Dred Scott Fields in Bloomington (AA) and Whitney Fields in St. Cloud (A).

Tuesday's Class AA play will be devoted to quarterfinal and semifinal games with the championship game slated for Wednesday at 1 p.m. Quarterfinal and semifinal games start at 11 a.m. and 1:30 p.m., respectively.

Thursday's Class A play has a similar format with quarterfinal games and semifinals taking place between 11 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. The Class A title game is scheduled to start on Friday at 1 p.m.

Eight region champions will advance to both the Class AA and Class A state tournaments.

State tournament team pairings in Class AA are as follows: Upper bracket — Region 2AA vs. Region 6AA and Region 1AA vs. Region 3AA; Lower bracket — Region 7AA vs. Region 5AA and Region 8AA vs. Region 4AA.

In Class A the state pairings look like this: Upper bracket — Region 3A vs. Region 7A and Region 5A vs. Region 1A; Lower bracket — Region 8A vs. Region 2A and Region 4A vs. Region 6A.

Defending state champions are Hill-Murray in Class AA and La Crescent in Class A.

More than 3,400 girls representing 240 high schools are participating in girls fast pitch softball during this spring season.

Baseball

Last of the five spring sports to name state champions is in the sport of baseball.

Now in its 38th year as an activity of the MSHSL, baseball for a ninth straight year will have its state final tournament conducted in two classes — AA and A.

Class AA event will be held first during the week of June 10. On Tuesday and Wednesday, June 12 and 13, the tourney will be conducted for a second straight year at St. Paul's Municipal Stadium, located on Snelling and Kasota, across from old Midway Stadium.

Quarterfinal games will begin at 10 a.m. and run through 9 p.m. on Tuesday. Semifinal action on Wednesday starts at 10 a.m. The state title game will start at 7 p.m. that evening.

Format is the same in terms of games and times for the Class A tournament, which returns to St. Cloud's Municipal Stadium on Thursday, June 14 and Friday, June 15.

State tournament team pairings in Class AA are as follows: Upper bracket — Region 4AA vs. Region 7AA and Region 3AA vs. Region 8AA. Lower bracket — Region 1AA vs. Region 2AA and Region 5AA vs. Region 6AA.

In Class A the state tournament pairings are as follows: Upper bracket — Region 3A vs. Region 7A and Region 2A vs. Region 8A. Lower bracket — Region 4A vs. Region 6A and Region 1A vs. Region 5A.

Defending state champions are Edina in Class AA and Staples in Class A.

More than 10,000 youngsters representing 346 high schools are participating in the interscholastic baseball program this spring season.

Tournament Attendance

Attendance at the five spring sport state tournaments is again expected to exceed 20,000 persons.

Past four years the state track and field championships has surpassed state baseball tournaments for most persons attending those two state tournament events. Last year a recordsetting 9,762 people witnessed the state track and field meet. Attendance at the baseball tournaments totaled 7,799. Softball, meanwhile, had a paid count of 3,235.

There is no admission charge for golf and boys tennis tournaments.

Youth Firearm Safety Classes Start Tuesday

Pennington county sportsmen's club will be sponsoring a youth firearms safety class in the basement of city auditorium, with registration starting at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, May 15, and additional training sessions offered from 7 to 9 p.m. May 15, 16, 17, 23 and 24.

Class topics will include orientation, game laws, hunter ethics, types of firearms, bowhunting, care of game, black powder hunting, first aid and survival, and conservation. In addition, a field trip will be scheduled sometime following completion of the class, to give the students an opportunity to demonstrate their safety skills during actual shooting.

Students will be given a test following the May 24 session, which, if successfully completed, will enable them to obtain a Minnesota firearms safety certificate. This certificate is required to be in possession of any youth between 12 and 15 years old while hunting. It is also a requirement for purchase of a Minnesota big game license. Class will be open to any youth who will be at least 12 years old by hunting season this fall.

Registration fee of $4 must be paid Tuesday morning. Money is sent to the state and covers cost of the student workbook, ammunition for the field trip and a shoulder patch and certificate which will be awarded to the student on satisfactory completion of the course.

Noting that the class if for both boys and girls, Irving Swanson, course coordinator, commented, "even those young people who do not hunt but live in a household that contains firearms can benefit from knowledge of their safe handling."

TRF Outlasts Ada 7-4, 22-11

Five hours of wind-swept high school baseball Thursday produced 27 walks, 40 base hits, 44 runs and a Thief River Falls sweep over Ada.

Improving their record to 7-1, the Prowlers beat the Vikings 7-4 and 22-11. They visit Bemidji Thursday for a 4:30 p.m. game, then drive to Roseau Saturday where they'll play the Rams at 12-noon, then take on Lake of the Woods at 3 p.m.

Thief River Falls spotted Ada a 2-0 headstart in the top of the first inning of the opener, took a 4-2 lead, then finally snapped a 4-4 tie by scoring the final three runs of a 7-4 victory.

An RBI double by Todd Ortloff and a run-scoring single by Ryan Bakke scored first inning Thief River Falls runs for a 2-2 tie. A two-run double to right-center by Bob Huot made it 4-2 in the second, but Ada's David Rund hit an 0-2 pitch over the right field fence for a two-run home run and a 2-2 tie in the top of the third.

Thief River Falls got the game-winner in the bottom of the inning on a sacrifice fly by Ryan Drees, then tacked on two more in the fourth as Ortloff and Drees added to their RBI totals.

It was a long drawn-out affair that was actually decided in the second inning when Thief River Falls put together a string of five consecutive singles in scoring seven runs and grabbing an 8-0 lead.

But despite numerous opportunities, the Prowlers were never able to end the game on the 10-run rule and it labored on, and on, and on . . .

— DNR Hotline —

Pheasant Cover

A shortage of federal funds needed to preserve vital nesting cover and wetlands, has caused the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources to decide to use pheasant stamp money to retain key tracts of habitat on private land that were previously enrolled in the Federal Waterbank Program (FWBP).

Roger Holmes, DNR Wildlife Chief, said a portion of the DNR's pheasant habitat program funds will be used to preserve tracts of existing dense nesting cover in many of Minnesota's better pheasant counties.

"After the severe winter we have just experienced, secure nesting cover is critical to rebuilding our pheasant population," he declared.

He said the shortage of safe and secure nesting cover is the greatest single obstacle to long term improvement in the pheasant population.

"The Federal Waterbank Program lands are essential towards our goal of producing improved fall pheasant number," said Holmes. "Since 1972, waterbank 10-year lease and cost share contracts have improved nesting cover on 61,000 acres of privately owned cropland while also preserving crucial pheasant winter cover on 22,000 acres of wetlands. (Waterbank uplands and wetlands are leased at maximum yearly rates of $55 and $10 respectively.)

"Although Waterbank's primary objective is to preserve and enhance key waterfowl producing areas while also reducing runoff, soil erosion, and new cropland acreage, the benefits for pheasants and Hungarian partridge have been substantial. We believe that Waterbank lands have the potential to produce 200,000 pheasants and 60,000 Hungarian partridge annually. Deer, fox, and many nongame species have also been greatly benefitted."

In 1983 the Federal Office of Management and Budget recommended no funding for fiscal year 1984. Congressional support, however, resulted in an $8.8 million appropriation.

This year the Minnesota state office of the United States Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) requested $2.7 million from the $8.8 million national program budget, an amount judged sufficient to maintain the program at existing levels in Minnesota.

Because of the large number of contracts slated for renewal in fiscal year 1984 — and required upgraded cost share rates each five year period of the 10 year agreements — states such as Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota, eventually received only 40-60 per cent of their needs.

Minnesota received $1.6 million, sufficient to recontract only 110 of 306 agreements available for renewal. This funding level also eliminates opportunities to bring new landowners into the program.

Holmes emphasized that privately owned tracts of nesting cover on waterbank lands support and expand the wildlife production potential of the publicly owned wildlife lands.

"The greater the landscape diversity maintained by adjacent Waterbank parcels, state wildlife management areas and federal waterfowl production areas, the greater the nesting success on these areas due to lessened impacts of nest predators," he explained.

"When we compare the limited funding of $8.8 million for "Waterbank" to the $12 billion for federal farm programs to idle land and curtail crop production, that do little for wildlife or soil conservation, we feel that conservation is very short changed in U.S. agriculture policies.

"It's unfortunate that state pheasant habitat funds must be used to preserve a portion of this very important federal wildlife and soil and water resource program, and that those funds cannot be used to create more critical habitat such as winter shelterbelts, food plots and nesting cover."

He said pheasant habitat funds will be used to reimburse certain landowners in the Federal Waterbank Program for up to 60 per cent of the FWBP cropland lease rates for a one year grassland preservation period.

Neither woodlands nor wetlands now included in Waterbank will qualify for payments under the pheasant habitat stamp program this year. Waterbank landowners no longer receiving wetland rental payments may qualify for Minnesota's wetlands tax credit and exemption program and are, therefore, encouraged to contact their local county assessors to establish credit and exemption eligibility.

"Not all of the 200 plus landowners dropped from Waterbank can be enrolled this year because of pheasant stamp fund limitations," said Holmes. "Key Waterbank nesting cover owners will be contacted by DNR area wildlife managers as soon as possible.

"All Minnesotans interested in waterfowl, pheasant, nongame, wetlands, and soil resources — as well as fair prices for farm commodities — must work together to raise Waterbank funding to the $30 million appropriation ceiling established by Congress," concluded Holmes.

Novice Archer Wins Shooting Sports Event

4-H shooting sports archery competition was held on Saturday after a training and practice session. Taking first place was Toni Bryl, a parent from Highlanding who had never shot before.

Second place went to Jared Kainz of Mavie, third place to Chad Finke of Happy Acres and fourth place to Jerry Parnow of Kratka. Others who participated included Collin Bryl of Highlanding, Oscar Radniecki of Steiner, Kevin Sorter of Silverton, Tim Parnow of Kratka, Adam and Cory Bugge of Happy Acres, Lynn Berard and Chris Larson of City View.

The shoot was held at the archery club with Dana Klos instructing the 4-Hers. He taught them the proper stance for shooting, names for the parts of bows and arrows, exhibited different types of bows and arrows and stressed safety in handling a bow.

Archery is one of the areas that a 4-H member may work in when enrolled in the shooting sports project.

Fishing Contest Sponsored By St. Paul Paper

Saturday, May 12, marked the opening of the 32nd annual St. Paul Pioneer Press and Dispatch fishing contest.

Once again the focus is on family fishing fun in the heart of one of the world's finest fishing areas, with $27,000 worth of merchandise prizes to add to the enjoyment of the catch, according to contest officials.

During the 16 weekly contests which continue through Labor Day, September 3, the newspapers will award over 200 merchandise prizes. Every fish entered will be eligible at the close of the contest for the super sweepstakes drawing, which will award the biggest single prize of all — A complete fishing package consisting of an Alumacraft T14SF boat, a Mariner 25-hp outboard motor and a Spartan Classic trailer.

Also, every week, two drawings will be made from all entries received during that particular week, one of which will be only for kids 15 years old or younger. The winners will each be awarded the sportsman prize, a PLANO tackle box plus a Fish 'N' Hat from Stuffit Studios and various fishing merchandise.

Six grand prizes, Mariner 4 h.p. outboard motors, will be awarded by drawing of a person in each of the classifications — muskie, northern, walleye, crappie, sunfish and bass. This drawing will be made from all of the first and second prize winning entries over the entire contest.

Weekly first prize packages include a Roger Preuss Wildlife of America collector print, one-year subscription to Outdoor Outlines, Rapala Fish 'n' Fillet knife and "How to Clean a Mess of Fish" book from Normark and a Shakespeare Omni spinning reel. Second prize packages include a Lunker Ledger & Personal Anglers Guide. In addition, both first and second prize packages include a Shakespeare Sigma line, Orbex Bar Buoy and Boatbuff, the Original DataSport Fish & Game Forecaster, Blue Fox tackle, Lakemaps, gift certificate and Water Gremlin sinker selection.

Over 1,500 resorts, bait shops, boat landings and sport shops will receive official entry blanks supplied by the St. Paul Pioneer Press and Dispatch which will be made available to anyone who asks for one. The entry blanks — which must be used — list all the rules on the back of each blank. Official announcement of the prize winners is made each week on the sports pages of the St. Paul Sunday Pioneer Press.

To be eligible, each fish entered must be legally caught in Minnesota, its boundary waters or any of the 24 western Wisconsin counties listed on the back of each entry blank. Individuals may enter as often as they wish, but only one entry per fish. No more than one member of an immediate family will be eligible for any first or second prize. Additional winning-size fish will win honorable mention awards and maintain their chance at the grand prizes and the super sweepstakes prize package.

Winners of the grand prizes and the super sweepstakes prize package will be published on September 16 in the St. Paul Sunday Pioneer Press.

University Of MN. Tackles Worst Epilepsy Cases

by Ralph Heussner
University News Service

Ten years ago, the University of Minnesota launched a unique program for the diagnosis and treatment of epilepsy. It began with a Promethean goal: The complete control of all types of epileptic seizures.

Idea was unconventional and, according to some in the medical field, unattainable. Yet, about 80 per cent of all persons with epilepsy are now seizure-free and another 15 per cent have some control.

University-based Minnesota comprehensive epilepsy program (CEP) was one of six regional centers established by the national institutes of health in 1974 to study and treat patients with intractable epilepsy.

"These patients had generally been written off by doctors who felt there was nothing more to be done to help them. But we figured that if we could help that group, then the lessons we learned would be very useful in cases that were not so difficult," said Dr. Robert J. Gumnit, a neurology professor in the medical school and director of the Minnesota CEP.

Today, Gumnit and his colleagues are still confident that ultimately everyone with epilepsy will be seizure-free, including the five per cent who now have no control. Optimism is based on improved diagnostic methods, new anticonvulsant drugs and refined surgical techniques.

"Although we can't say every patient has total control yet, we are able to say that we're doing an awful lot of good," Gumnit said. "In 1984, we are in a position to help people we couldn't help just a few years ago. By 1989, we'll be helping people we can't help in 1984."

What, exactly, is epilepsy? The illness is defined by continuous seizures that result from an "electrical storm" inside the brain. There are generally two types of epilepsy: partial and general, depending on the extent of the misguided electricity in the brain.

Human brain has millions of nerve cells, called neurons, working in delicate balance to control our thoughts and actions. Each neuron transmits a tiny impulse of electrical current produced by the interaction of chemicals inside the cell. Each electrical impulse sends a message through the brain and nervous system, instructing the body to perform a particular function.

In epilepsy, those impulses go awry because of a temporary buildup of excessive electrical charges. As a result, the brain loses control over muscles, senses, consciousness and thoughts. The loss of control is manifested in muscle convulsions, unusual behavior and lapse of consciousness.

Case of epilepsy is unknown in about half of all cases. But scientists do know that the disorder can result from tissue damage from infection, lead or mercury poisoning, tumors, strokes and brain injuries. In cases where there apparently is no tissue damage, some scientists speculate seizures may result from an unknown abnormality of the chemistry of the brain.

University hospitals was the first in the nation to create a nursing ward especially for the care of people with epilepsy. But Station 49 bears little resemblance to a traditional hospital ward. The 11-bed unit has carpeting, a living-recreational room, a kitchen and a common dining area. Patients often prepare their own meals and plan their own evening activities.

"We concentrate on making a precise diagnosis. First to determine that the patient does have seizures and, second, what kind," Gumnit said. "This requires an intensive look at what is going on in the brain."

Evaluation begins by reducing medication and depriving the patient of one night's sleep. When the brain is irritated, tired and low on medication, the true nature of the illness is revealed.

"We sometimes try to recreate a situation in which seizures will occur and then record them. We ask the patient to do whatever seems to provoke a seizure, such as jogging or sleeping," said nurse-clinician Sue Whalen.

Patient is monitored 24 hours a day. In radiotelemetry, the patient is able to move freely through Station 49 with electrodes attached to the scalp that send EEG — electroencephalograph — signals to the remote monitoring station where technicians can record brain activities, even minor seizures. During a seizure, the EEG shows bursts of energy coming either unusually fast or unusually slow. In the more severe cases, patients experience as many as 200 seizures a day.

Seizures are also videotaped, providing both a closeup and a full view of the seizure. Because of the intermittent nature of seizures, continuous videotaping and radiotelemetry give doctors a more exact understanding of the severity and kinds of seizures the patient is experiencing.

At the end of the patient's 10 to 12 day in-hospital evaluation, the medical team confers. Surprisingly, they find that about 20 per cent of patients have normal EEGs, meaning there is no epilepsy; another source such as emotional strain is causing the seizures. The majority of people with confirmed cases of epilepsy are discharged after their seizures have been controlled by drugs.

"We find that many patients who come to us with a lot of seizures can be helped with the same medicines that they're on," Gumnit said. "But we dose them differently, and make some other adjustments."

Development of new anticonvulsant drugs has been painstakingly slow, partly because of the nature of the disorder. "Epilepsy is an episodic event," Gumnit said. "It's not like you can give an injection, watch what happens and see how the medication works." Months of observation may be necessary.

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS

Q: I served in Vietman and believe I was affected by exposure to Agent Orange. Can the Veterans Administration help me?

A: Yes. VA is authorized to provide certain health care services to any Vietnam veteran who may have been exposed to Agent Orange. Also, VA has a continuing program for examining Vietnam veterans concerned about possible health effects. Findings of these examinations are entered into the Agent Orange Registry.

Q: My husband, a veteran, died 18 months ago and I purchased a headstone at that time. Can I still apply for reimbursement of the headstone from the Veterans Administration?

A: Yes. A claim for payment must be received by VA within two years after permanent burial or creamation, or after date of purchase of headstone or services for adding the veteran's identifying information on an existing headstone, whichever date is later.

Q: Can a veteran who has donated his remains to science still be eligible for a headstone or marker?

A: Yes. The Veterans Administration will furnish, when requested, an appropriate memorial headstone or marker for the purpose of commemorating the veteran.

Q: What, if any, is the advantage in waiving some or all of military retired pay in favor of Veterans Administration compensation for which a retiree may be eligible?

A: The chief financial advantage is that VA compensation is tax-exempt while retired pay is not — if it is for length of service rather than disability.

Q: May a veteran who receives a monthly check from the Veterans Administration for his service-connected disabilities be granted an additional allowance for dependents?

A: Veterans whose service-connected disabilities are rated at 30 per cent or more are entitled to additional allowances for dependents.

Q — Does the issuance of a Veterans Administration certificate of eligility guarantee approval of a GI home loan?

A — No. In addition to being declared eligible for a VA-guaranteed home loan based on his or her period of service, the veteran must apply for a loan from a bank or other lender and meet the qualifications of that lender.

Q — I bought a home recently with a Veterans Administration home loan guarantee. I have now discovered some defects which the seller refused to repair. Can the VA help me?

A — The VA cannot compel a seller to remedy defects or to fulfill a contract on a preexisting home. However, there is a one-year warranty on a newly-constructed home.

Q — Does the Veterans Administration maintain a listing of repossessed homes for sale?

A — Yes. Interested persons should contact their nearest VA regional office to obtain a listing of repossessed homes for sale. Also, you may contact a qualified real estate broker of your choice for information about VA repossessed homes.

Q — Are there any programs under which my dependents can use my Veterans Administration educational benefits?

A — Yes. "The Department of Defense Authorization Act of 1981" included two educational assistance incentive programs to encourage enlistments and reenlistments in the Armed Forces. Both programs contain provisions for certain participants to transfer entitlement to a spouse or child if the veteran or serviceperson enlisted or reenlisted after September 30, 1980, and before October 1, 1981.

Q — I am applying for food stamps. Will the Veterans Administration release information to the local food stamp office, without my consent, if requested?

A — Yes. As part of routine uses of VA records systems, we will release data to federal and state agencies when those agencies require such information in connection with issuance of a grant or other benefit.

Q — Can a service-connected disability rating by the Veterans Administration ever be changed?

A — Yes. It may be increased or decreased in accordance with medical findings of changes in the affected condition. However, once a condition has been rated at 10 per cent or more disabling for 20 continuous years, the rating is protected by law and may not be changed to a lower rate.

Q — Under the Privacy Act of 1974, may the monthly rate of Veterans Administration compensation, pension or education benefits received by a veteran be released to a third party without the veteran's consent?

A — Yes.

Q — Is there a minimum amount of time that a person must serve in the military to qualify for Veterans Administration benefits?

A — Generally, yes. Persons who enlisted the first time on or after September 8, 1980, must complete at least two years of continuous active duty or the full period for which he or she was called to active duty, to qualify for VA benefits. For officers, the two-year requirement applies on or after October 17, 1981. For veterans who enlisted before September 8, 1980, the time limit usually depends on the benefit. Exceptions are made for veterans discharged because of a service-connected disability.

Q — What are the eligibility requirements for receiving Veterans Administration compensation benefits?

A — To be eligible to receive VA compensation, a veteran must have a disability which was incurred in or aggravated by military service, and rated as being 10 per cent or more by the VA. The veteran must also have a discharge other than dishonorable.

Q — What are the requirements for Veterans Administration pension benefits?

A — To be entitled to VA pension benefits, a veteran must have had at least 90 days of wartime service, be considered permanently and totally disabled and incapable of engaging in substantially gainful employment, and have income which falls below specified income limitations. Veterans age 65 or older need not meet the total disability requirement.

DEED Has Tips On Insulation For Basements

Before spring remodeling work begins, the Minnesota department of energy and economic development (DEED) recommends that some serious thought be given to insulating the basement.

There are several practical reasons why basement insulation should be undertaken before a basement is finished, said Chris Gilchrist, DEED energy specialist.

"Insulating basement walls will increase the comfort level of your whole house and not just the basement area," Gilchrist said. "It's well worth doing and it will be a lot easier to do if done before the basement interior is finished."

One way to visualize the impact of an insulated basement is to compare the walls to windows. It's a comparison that isn't as unusual as it may appear.

"A window with an attached storm is rated at only about R-2. That's the same as an uninsulated eight-inch foundation block wall that is above grade. You can easily imagine the loss of heat if you walled over a window without first adding insulation. It's the same with above grade basement walls.

"Even below grade, the best effective insulation value you can hope for in an uninsulated basement is R-5.

"Heating costs for an average 1,100 square foot home heated with natural gas can be lowered by $100 to $200 a year by adding R-11 insulation to the foundation walls. It would take five to 10 years for the insulation to pay for itself but the comfort level of the entire home would be improved from the outset," Gilchrist said. Insulation can be done either inside or outside. Each method has advantages and disadvantages.

"Insulating on the outside has the distinct advantage of allowing better waterproofing of the wall. It means there will be no loss of living space and that the water lines will be better protected. If the basement has already been finished, it may be the only practical alternative. However, it also requires some extensive digging around the foundation.

"Interior insulating work can be done in any weather and won't require any digging and disruption of existing landscaping. But there will be some loss of living space and some provision must be made for water pipes so that there will be no freezing problem."

There are many decisions that should be made before a basement improvement project is started, Gilchrist said. An excellent place to get help with those decisions is the DEED energy information center. Give the energy specialists there a call, ask them questions about how to best handle your situation and don't forget to request the publications dealing with basement insulation.

COUNTY BOARD PROCEEDINGS

May 14, 1984
Official Proceedings
Board of County Commissioners
Pennington County, Minnesota
March 13, 1984

Pursuant to adjournment, the Pennington County Board of Commissioners met in the Commissioners' room of the Courthouse in Thief River Falls on Tuesday, March 13, 1984 at 10:00 a.m. Members present: Hoffman, Koop, Stenberg, Tasa & Grabanski.

Ed Jenson appeared before the Board to discuss the ditch drainage assessment on County Ditch No. 70. He has a special assessment of $10-acre on his 10 acres in North Township while others with ag land had special assessments of only $3-acre. The County Board will check with the ditch viewers that were appointed to review CD No. 70 last summer for their reasoning on the assessments.

Ardith Johnson introduced Mary Janiewicz from the Minnesota Historical Society. She has been working with the Historical Society transferring documents which may contain historical facts to the Historical Society.

Jerry Sandstrom presented a slide presentation and pamphlets recently finished that will help get the City of Thief River Falls designated a "Star City." He also discussed his trip to the trade show in the Twin Cities.

Moved by Commissioner Stenberg, seconded by Commissioner Hoffman and unanimously carried to allow $7.25 per hour with no fringe benefits for Connie Manke as part-time help in the Recorder's Office.

It was mentioned that there would be a meeting of City and County Officials on March 23 at 7:30 p.m. in the City Auditorium to listen to a proposal on an alternative method of disposing of solid waste by the Nordhagen family.

After considerable discussion on the various options and maintenance agreements, the Board was of the option that the bid with the five year buy-back option was the most beneficial to the County. Commissioner Hoffman moved that the County accept the bid of Ziegler, Inc. for the Caterpillar 140G with the 5 year buy-back option for a bid price of $90,249.00 as the most responsible and best bid. Commissioner Koop introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

WHEREAS, H.F. 865, as proposed by Representative Karen Clark, places certain restrictions on the spraying operation of Pennington County, other governmental units and licensed applicators that would require notices every 100 yards around the perimeter of the area to be sprayed, in addition to certain mailed notices to residents of an affected area, and possible published notice, and

WHEREAS, the notice requires a great deal of detail as to what is contained in the pesticide being applied, who is doing the spraying, who is responsible and several other printed details, with the legislation further requiring each governmental unit to be responsible for following all of the regulations being set forth in the bill whether they apply the spray themselves or have it done for them.

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, by the Pennington County Board of Commissioners that they oppose H.F. 865 in its present form because they feel that the required notices are redundant and much too restrictive, causing unnecessary expenditure of local governmental funds, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that copies of this resolution be forwarded to Senator LeRoy Stumpf and Representative Wally Sparby, asking for their support in opposing H.F. 865 and any Senate companion bill.

The foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Hoffman and upon vote, unanimously adopted.

Vacation Home Rental Clouds Tax Picture

Before investing in vacation property, you need to know about the pitfalls of this kind of investment. According to the Minnesota Society of CPAs, you should be familiar with tax rules that govern what deductions you are entitled to on rental property.

If you are a vacation home landlord, tax deductions you claim for utility payments, depreciation and costs for maintenance and repairs are tied to the amount of time you and your family spend in the home. When personal use of the property amounts to the greater of 14 days annually or 10 per cent of the days it was rented out, you must follow an IRS formula that allocates those expenses between personal and rental use. Your deductions for mortgage interest and real estate taxes, however, are not affected when your personal use triggers the formula. Those are itemized deductions that you are entitled to anyway.

Here's how to calculate your deductions under the formula. Multiply the number of days the property was rented out by the total expenses for utility payments, depreciation and costs for maintenance and repairs. Divide that by the number of days the property is rented out and used personally.

Here's how the formula works when utility payments, depreciation and costs for maintenance and repairs total $10,000. If the property is rented out for 60 days and your personal use amounts to three days, this is the way you would figure what to deduct from your rental income. Divide the 60 days of rental use by 63 days of rental and personal use. Multiply that by $10,000 and you get a $9,523.81 tax deduction.

You may be able to spend more than 14 days in your vacation home if you are there to make repairs. An IRS ruling allows you to make repairs without affecting the 14 day limitation if you work full-time on the repairs. But you should be prepared to prove the business nature of the stay.

If you do use your vacation home more than the greater of 14 days a year or 10 per cent of the rental use, there are complex rules on what you may deduct. In this case, rental expense deductions may not be greater than the income you receive from rent.

In other words, if your expenses for property taxes, mortgage interest, repairs, utilities and depreciation are $6,000, but you receive only $4,000 in rental income, you can deduct no expenses in excess of the $4,000 in rental income. In addition, the rental expenses are deducted in a specific order, according to IRS regulations. First, the mortgage interest and real estate tax is deducted, then maintenance, utilities and other operating expenses. Depreciation must be the last item you deduct.

Those buying a vacation home, planning to rent it out for the first 10 or 15 years of the mortgage and move into it upon retirement, are permitted to deduct all expenses associated with the property during the period they make no personal use of it.

If you are buying a vacation rental property and are planning to depend on rental income to cover the mortgage payments, you are entering into an investment with risks. If you buy a property near a ski resort, for instance, will you be able to keep making mortgage payments if a lack of snow keeps potential renters away?

In other words, you must be able to make the mortgage payments, even if you have no rental income to help you. When mortgage lenders evaluate your application for a mortgage on a vacation home, they will check to see that your income is large enough to make the payments on a second home without any income from renting it out.

If you do have difficulty renting out your property, keep in mind that the IRS now permits you to take rental property deductions even if your tenants are family members. But to get those tax benefits, you must charge your relatives fair market value rents.

You do not have to report any rental income if you rent out your vacation home less than 15 days a year. And although you may not deduct any of the usual expenses associated with rental property, you may always deduct the real estate taxes and mortgage interest you pay.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Thomas Edison, Candle-Stick Makers and Politicians

A recent "It's Your Business" program, the U.S. Chamber's syndicated television show, focused on the "Future of Conservatism."

I was joined by Representative Jack Kemp of New York in arguing that the low-tax, low-inflation economic policies of the past three years have successfully generated five million new jobs, increased the real income of Americans after a decade of decline, and restored America's faith in herself and her future. Kemp and I both predicted that the American people would repeat their 1980 mandate for pro-growth economic policies on November 6, 1984, by sending more conservatives to Congress.

The producers of the program earned their paychecks by finding two unreconstructed liberals to argue for higher taxes, for more government, and for the idea that big government is the friend of the taxpayers. Arguing that the American people would reject the economic policies that brought us the recovery and real growth were Senator Howard Metzenbaum (D-Ohio) and Joseph Rauh, a liberal activist.

The test of a good debater is his ability to argue forcefully for an untenable position, and Metzenbaum and Rauh acquitted themselves admirable. The central reality of the tax-cut-inspired economic boom, however, made their job difficult.

To make the point that government too often hinders economic growth and stifles individual initiative and opportunity I suggested that if Thomas Edison were to invent the light bulb today, the evening news would lead off with Dan Rather somberly announcing that "gloom and despair hit the candlestick industry today." I went on to suggest that the next morning we would find Metzenbaum introducing legislation to tax electricity, and Rauh would begin the campaign to subsidize the candlestick industry.

I am indebted to Richard DeVos, co-founder of the Amway Corporation, who presented that scenario in a recent speech. In a few words, it succinctly states three problems that plague our efforts to continue the present economic recovery.

First, it is only too believable that the news media would treat a breakthrough such as the invention of the light bulb not as a liberating force for progress but as a "problem." We have seen the press coverage of the economic recovery focus not on the tremendous increase in employment but on remaining pockets of unemployment. And polls show that many Americans believe that inflation — which has dropped from the double-digit levels of 1979 and 1980 — has worsened. The news media is simply not doing a credible job if so many people can be so misinformed about an issue as critical as inflation.

Second, my suggestion that Metzenbaum would immediately move to tax electricity is, sadly, all too close to his reaction to increasing energy costs in the 1970s. Oil prices were rising and Metzenbaum's response was to raise taxes on oil. New technologies and new inventions create jobs and wealth. They are to be welcomed as unadulterated good news, not beaten into the ground with taxes and ham-handed regulations. If Thomas Edison had faced the assults of official Washington — the reams of red tape and thousand-page tax laws — I fear he would have spent more time puttering in the garden and less time giving us the tremendous benefits of his great mind. How many potential Thomas Edisons are there today who have decided that it simply isn't worth the hassle?

Third, the idea that Rauh would push for massive subsidies to the threatened candlestick industry is taken from the speeches of liberal politicians who continue to push for subsidies for industries and companies challenged by economic change. In an efficient economy, resources, both capital and labor, must be free to move from old industries to new ones, not locked into place by politicians living in the past. Even in France, the socialist government of Mitterand is moving to reduce the $1 billion subsidy that maintains an inefficient steel industry. It is not easy. For while the jobs "protected" by such a massive subsidy are visible, the jobs and opportunities destroyed by taking a billion dollars out of the productive sector of the French economy are never seen on the nightly news.

The American economy is growing today because it is freer than it was four years ago. Taxes are down, the regulatory burden has been lightened, and new firms and industries face a healthier environment. The American people can sense this change, and I believe they will ratify the mandate of 1980 in November. It should be a very good year for candidates who understand that the government must get out of the way of economic growth and allow progress to continue.

MN. Hazardous Waste Situation Is Summarized

by Robert Dunn
Chairman, Minnesota
Waste Management Board

During the 1984 legislative session, state lawmakers took some important actions that will dramatically alter — and enhance — the waste management board's role in helping to solve Minnesota's hazardous waste problem.

The most widely-discussed legislative action on hazardous waste this year was the decision to suspend, at least until 1986, the board's search for an environmentally suitable site for a hazardous waste disposal facility. No further analyses will be conducted on the four "candidate" sites for a disposal facility — in Aitkin, Carver, Marshall, and Scott counties — unless the legislature, during the 1986 session, directs the board to resume the site selection process.

Although the suspension of the disposal siting process received many headlines, the most significant legislative action toward solving the state's hazardous waste problem was the approval of new programs the board had recommended to encourage alternatives to hazardous waste disposal.

During the last four years, at the hundreds of public meetings the board has conducted throughout the state, Minnesotans have consistently and overwhelmingly endorsed the need for business and industry to reduce hazardous waste generation, and to recycle, treat or incinerate those wastes that continue to be produced. In its draft hazardous waste management plan, developed with the assistance of citizens, the board recommended to the 1984 legislature that it authorize and fund new programs to accomplish these goals.

The legislature agreed with the board and approved the following new programs:

— A technical and research assistance program to provide information and "in-plant" consultation to small or medium-sized businesses that generate hazardous wastes. The program will help such firms to implement waste reduction programs and improve their hazardous waste management capabilities. The University of Minnesota has proposed to administer the program.

— The technical and research assistance program will be supplemented by a $150,000 grant program in which the board will award funds to firms proposing to study innovative methods for reducing hazardous wastes at the source of generation. Information from the completed studies will be disseminated through the technical assistance program.

— The board will become actively involved in helping to establish hazardous waste recycling and treatment facilities, a statewide collection and transportation network for hazardous wastes, and possibly a hazardous waste incinerator, by requesting specific facility proposals from private firms and awarding grants for their development. A total of $700,000 has been allotted for this program.

— The legislature also increased the bonding authority of the state department of energy and economic development by $10 million. This money will be earmarked for low interest loans to help developers construct hazardous waste processing facilities. The board will approve loan applications to ensure the funds are awarded to projects consistent with Minnesota's overall hazardous waste management needs.

In addition to these programs, the legislature also directed the board to perform a detailed study on the question of whether Minnesota needs a hazardous waste disposal facility.

When the legislature created the board in 1980 and required it to site a disposal facility to securely contain treated residues from hazardous waste processing facilities, it was generally assumed that Minnesota must have its own disposal facility. The legislature, in fact, determined this need by mandating that the board "provide for the establishment" of at least one disposal facility.

However, in light of information contained in the board's comprehensive state plan that indicated Minnesota businesses may not generate enough wastes to make a privately-owned disposal facility economically viable, the 1984 legislature re-evaluated this assumption and directed the board to take a much closer look at the need for a disposal facility.

The report will estimate the amounts of waste residue that will require disposal following the anticipated construction of new commercial, hazardous waste processing facilities in Minnesota. The possibility of long-term reliance on disposal facilities in other states will be evaluated, as well as the market conditions and possible state subsidies necessary to make such a facility economically viable in Minnesota.

The report will be reviewed by the legislature in 1986. Should the legislature direct the board to resume the site selection process, detailed environmental analyses would be conducted on the remaining candidate sites, with a final site to be selected in 1988.

For further information on the state government's hazardous waste management efforts, write the board at 7323 58th Ave. No., Crystal, MN 55428; or call toll-free 1-800-652-9747.

Set 'Big Day' For Audubon Society May 19

Spring "Big Day" of the Agassiz Audubon society has been scheduled for Saturday, May 19, with Sunday, May 20, scheduled as a rain make-up day.

Activity will begin at 4 a.m. when people interested in observing prairie chickens booming will leave the Country Kitchen at Crookston to reach the blind before daylight. The group will leave promptly at 4 a.m.

An alternate trip to the sharptail grouse dancing grounds on the Pembina Trail reserve will also be available. Persons interested in reserving the sharptail observation blind are asked to call Tom Feiro at 281-5515. Other species of wildlife are also likely to be seen from the blinds. Warm clothing is advised because of the necessity to remain inactive while in the blinds during the chill of early morning.

About 8 a.m. the group will leave the blinds and return to Country Kitchen for breakfast. At 9:30 the tour moves to the area of the Crookston sewage lagoons where shorebirds and waterfowl are usually plentiful.

About 11 a.m. a tour will be conducted of the University of Minnesota natural history area — an 80-acre area including cottonwoods, marshes and restored prairie. Activity there is expected to take a couple of hours.

People may join the tour at any time (except while in the observation blinds) and leave at their convenience. Lunch, drinking water, binoculars, cameras and field guides are suggested take-along items.

Parnows At 4H Leadership Forum In D.C.

"If you weren't patriotic before, you certainly were after the trip," was Donna Parnow's comment after a week spent with her husband Richard in Washington, DC.

Donna is an adult leader of the Kratka 4-H club and Richard is a Pennington county extension committee member. They attended the 4-H leaders forum held in Washington, DC, and upon their return presented a slide show at the May meeting of the 4-H leaders council.

The Parnows attended meetings focusing on how to get and organize 4-H volunteers and how to raise money for 4-H programs. Along with 4-H training, the Parnows were able to meet with Minnesota Senators Rudy Boschwitz and Dave Durenburger, tour the Gettysburg Civil War Battlefields, visit the city's monuments and the Kennedy burial sites, and make friends with 4-H leaders from other areas of the country.

The Parnow's trip to Washington, DC, was paid for by the Pennington county 4-H leaders council. "This sponsorship strengthens the leadership system in the county 4-H program by spreading leadership ideas to area clubs," states Polly Prunuske, Pennington county extension agent.

Susan Waale Takes Part In MSU Exchange

Students at Moorhead state university (MSU) can study desert ecology in Nevada, marine biology in Oregon, wilderness survival in Utah or southern politics in Alabama. They can learn about geothermal research at the University of Idaho or study forestry and wood science at North Carolina State.

Thirteen MSU students will attend out-of-state schools next year under the National student exchange program, a cooperative of 40 universities and colleges. It offers a system for students in those schools to attend other member institutions without paying non-resident tuition rates.

Susan Waale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hal Waale of Thief River Falls is participating in the exchange during her spring quarter at MSU. She is a 1983 graduate of Lincoln high school.

MSU has belonged to the exchange for 11 years and is its only member school in Minnesota. The program is designed to offer students a variety of cultural, educational and geographic experiences with the added benefit of allowing them to take advantage of specialized academic programs at other schools.

For information about the program, contact Lois Selberg, NSE coordinator, at the MSU academic affairs office, (218) 236-2762. The only requirement is a 2.5 grade point average. It's open to students in their sophomore or junior years.

County Fair Reports To Be Given Tonight

Committee chairman reports will be presented Monday at 8 p.m. when the Pennington county fair association meets in the courthouse meeting room in Thief River Falls.

According to fair board president Oliver (Skip) Swanson, reports are to be presented by Norris Thune, grandstand committee; Arlen Ellingson, grounds; Bernie Huot, arena; Donna Harder, activities; LaVerne Hamre, barn; Terry Nelson, advertising and promotion; Fred Dallmann, personnel; and Norma Hanson, senior citizen day.

Swanson said that the association will be expected to make a final decision on construction of a 72x100 pole barn for housing of livestock during the annual fair. Such a building would permit use of the curling building for displays moved from the sports arena. If constructed west of the present sheep and poultry building, it would also provide for a show ring between the two buildings.

All members of the association are encouraged to attend the meeting and voice their opinions and ideas while the projects are being organized.

Council On Aging Moves Forward . . .

New Senior Center Has $369,000 Goal

Pennington county council on aging has taken on the responsibility for directing a $369,000 project to provide a new senior community center in Thief River Falls. The council took the action at its May meeting in the city auditorium meeting room.

In addition to adopting a motion to accept the responsibility for directing the project, the council members approved the purchase of a 100x140-foot lot located northeast of the intersection of Horace avenue and Fourth street. The property is now owned by the Gene Belto family and Northern state bank.

Estimated costs in the project include $45,000 for purchase of the lot; $24,000 for architect's fees; and $300,000 for construction of a brick building having 6,000 square feet of space.

According to Harry Oen of the council on aging's publicity committee, plans would be to have the building equipped for use to conduct the senior meals and meals on wheels programs. It is believed this would increase participation in the programs which are now handled through Northwestern hospital services. Space constraints at the hospital presently limit the number of senior meals which can be served.

It is also expected that the Northwest senior federation would have office space in the center, and that the senior activities craft shop would also have a place in the new building.

Oen said the majority of the group voting on site selection felt that the corner lot close to the downtown area and parking space would be a choice location.

He also noted that the city council and county board have passed resolutions of support and that those groups, along with the council on aging, feel that much of the cost of the building should be raised by direct solicitation. "That way," he said, "the ones in favor of the project will supply the main support. It is felt the center will be a community center with senior citizens having priority for use.

The center would be operated by the council on aging, with the governing group expanded to include representation from the city council and county board.

Several committees have been organized for various activity regarding the project. Joining Oen on the publicity and local solicitations committee are Mayor Bob Carlson, Blanche Larson, Albert Koop and Harry Simons.

Serving on the building committee are Morris Howick, Jon Metusalem, Gerhard Quam, Merle Lindberg, Otto Stenberg, Ambrose Wysoski, Doris Kaushagen and Alice Brubakken, all of Thief River Falls, and Pat Rood and Linda Reitmeier of Crookston.

Grants committee includes Howick, Jack Quinlivan, Terry Courneya and Terry Olson of Thief River Falls and Dr. David Brown of Goodridge.

In other action Monday, the council on aging heard from Norma Hanson of Goodridge, member of the Pennington county fair board, about plans for senior citizen day at the 1984 county fair. She then asked for other suggestions to help in making the effort successful.

Main feature of the day will be naming of the outstanding senior citizens from Pennington county. Morris Howick, outstanding 1983 senior citizen, head the committee to select the 1984 recipient. Winners of the recognition will be further recognized at the Minnesota state fair and winter shows.

Koop Omnibus Hearing Held In Dist. Court

Omnibus hearing for Myles Koop of Thief River Falls was conducted Monday afternoon in Pennington county district court with Judge Russell A. Anderson presiding. Koop is charged with attempted first degree murder, first degree aggravated assault, second degree aggravated assault and second degree assault.

The charges result from an altercation involving the defendant, his former wife and two other persons in the Northwestern hospital parking lot in Thief River Falls last winter. Koop has been held at the Pennington county law enforcement center since his arrest for allegedly attacking the three people with a tire iron.

The Omnibus hearing considered items of evidence which would be used by either the prosecution or defense in the defendant's trial. Attorney George M. Manning, representing the defendant, presented a number of requests including the motion that the case be dismissed for lack of probable cause. He also stated he believed the first degree assault charge should be reduced to third degree assault due to the relative degree of seriousness of injury.

He also asked for hospital and medical doctor's records of injuries of the alleged victims, and for the defendant to undergo a second interview with Dr. Carl Schwartz, a psychiatrist in the Twin Cities area. Manning also requested an order prohibiting the Koops' 10-year-old son from giving trial testimony.

The prosecution, represented by Janet Newberg, special assistant from the Minnesota attorney general's odfice, noted that it would enter in evidence five No. 4 buck shotgun shells which were found in the defendant's jacket pocket after his clothing had been taken from him following arrest.

Also presented as an exhibit by the prosecution was a statement made by Wally

Bank Employee At St. Hilaire Admits Theft

Charges are pending in the Pennington county attorney's office against an employee of the St. Hilaire office of the Plummer state bank who has admitted theft of $12,600 in bank funds.

Pennington county sheriff's department reports that Merle Jeame, president of the Plummer state bank, reported a shortage of bank funds last Tuesday. Investigation included questioning of employees at which time the theft was admitted.

According to the sheriff's department, none of the theft over a period of more than a year involved any customer accounts.

RLF Man Has Burns From TRF Explosion

William Steve Anderson, 38, of rural Red Lake Falls, is listed in fair condition at Northwestern hospital services this afternoon following an explosion shortly after 2:30 p.m. Tuesday. Hospital officials say Anderson suffered painful burns on several areas of his body.

Anderson was reportedly operating a cutting torch outside Olson Auto Repair at 616 Davis av. N. when a spark from the torch apparently flew into a container of used or waste oil and caused an explosion.

CITY CLERK Gerald Wigness, left, notes that his job requires him to act as a coordinator between various departments of the city which range from public service areas such as streets and sanitation, to business enterprises such as the municipal liquor dispensary. Responsible for preparing agendas for meetings of the city council, he tries to ensure that there are "no surprises." Upcoming business is discussed here with City Planner Jack Quinlivan in front of a map of the city. President Ronald Reagan has declared May 13 through 19 as Municipal Clerk's Week.

School Elections Provide Variety

Voter turn-outs varied from quite good to quite low as annual school elections were held throughout the area Tuesday evening. Several write-in candidates were elected where filings had not filled ballots and a few new faces will be on boards when the new school year starts.

At Plummer, where no candidates had filed for the election, one incumbent was reelected and eight people received a dozen or more write-in votes with 199 ballots being cast. Voters also voted 96 to 87 in favor of retaining the name Pershing high school instead of Plummer high school.

Incumbent Jerry Gerardy was reelected on a write-in with 107 votes. Elected as a new board member was John Helley Sr. with 62 votes. Others in the running were Merlin Carlson, 53; incumbent Jerry Freitag, 42; Joyce Jolly, 34; Arlean Anderson, 26; Madonna Lallier, 26; and Art Hamrum, 12.

At Goodridge the two incumbents were reelected although only one had filed. With 109 total votes cast, Norma Hanson received 66 votes as the candidate who had filed and Richard Parnow received 60 write-in votes to be reelected. David Paulson received 41 write-in votes and there were 16 others who received write-in votes in the election.

At Grygla there were 268 ballots cast in the election, including polling places at Skime and Gatzke. James Holte, who had filed for reelection, received 249 votes including 194 in Grygla, 52 in Gatzke and three in Skime. Elected as a new board member was Sue Schuler with 166 votes, including 131 at Grygla, 32 at Gatzke and three at Skime. Gerald Holthusen, who had also filed for election, trailed with 111 votes, including 75 at Grygla, 32 at Gatzke and four at Skime. Donna McLean received two write-in votes and Phyllis Wikert, an appointed incumbent who did not seek reelection, received one.

Oklee school district had a good turnout of 283 voters despite the heavy activity of spring field work. There were five candicates who had filed for two positions on the board, including incumbent Richard Rustan. Dr. Harold Lindquist, a veteran member of the board, did not seek reelection.

David Bachand proved the top vote-getter with 207 votes and Rustan was in second place with 169. Other candidates and their vote totals were Robert Melby, 81; Richard Mathson, 65; and Dwight Carlson, 32.

Although there were five candidates on the ballot at Newfolden, there were no contests since there were five terms expiring and all incumbents had filed for reelection. Terms of Donna Graham, David Bakke and Doyle Harstad expired on the regular schedule and Roger Anderson and Doreen Amundson had been appointed to vacancies at mid-year. The vacancies were created when board members Robert Dahl and Daniel Olson, both of whom are bus drivers for the district, resigned due to potential conflict of interest because their bus driver salaries from the district exceeded $5,000 a year.

TAKING A STROLL along a portion of flooded pasture, these Canada geese seem right at home in their surroundings. Five of the big birds apparently took a liking to the area which is immediately adjacent to a farm yard (the farmers asked that they not be identified) and spent a good deal of their time loafing on part of the lawn. In the past several days since this Times photo was taken, the brids seem to have dispersed somewhat. One goose (or perhaps gander) remains in the flooded pasture area constantly. Two other brids — or perhaps two other pair of birds — come and go from the yard at intervals, indicating they may be nesting in the area. "It's been fun having wild birds like that come right up on the lawn," the farmer's wife said. While geese are common in the area of wildlife refuges northeast of Thief River Falls, these birds are staying south of the city.

Municipal Clerk's Week Is Observed

Recognizing the municipal clerk as "the oldest of public servants and a critical part of efficient and responsive local government," President Ronald Reagan has proclaimed the week of May 13 through 19 as Municipal Clerk's Week, asking that citizens observe the week with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

Since no specific activities were planned for the observation locally, we decided to interview Thief River Falls city clerk Gerald Wigness to see if we could shed some light on just what the duties of that office entail.

Although Jerry is no stranger to being in the public eye, he says he prefers to remain "rather low key" and agreed to an interview only on condition that the article would include the other people who make the clerk's office run. "I may have the title of city clerk, but I can't emphasize enough the importance of the people who work in this office." Wigness adds that "by and large, I think that the people who work for the city are conscientious, and I'm pleased with the quality of people I work with."

Mutual respect between the clerk and other city employees is almost a requirement for the job, since the clerk serves as a central figure in any city government. According to the League of Minnesota Cities handbook for Minnesota cities, the clerk faces a wide variety of duties and responsibilities. "Not only does the clerk execute many of the city's governmental functions, but he or she is usually expected to supervise the daily administration of city business, such as keeping records, writing letters, keeping accounts and very often seeing that council decisions are carried out. In addition, the clerk is expected to know 'how we did this the last time' because standard procedures often are not familiar to other members of the council."

Among the duties imposed on the clerk by statute is the position of executive officer for the council. This requires keeping records of all council proceedings and maintaining the ordinance book; handling all correspondence on behalf of the council; drawing up agendas and other working papers used in meetings; and executing assignments given by the council, as well as for administrative boards such as the utilities commission.

Lincoln Addition Recommended

Facilities advisory committee presented recommendations on an addition to Lincoln senior high school when the Thief River Falls board of education met Monday evening at the school district service center.

Clyde Christensen, committee chairman, recommended remodeling of the present Lincoln building, demolition of the 1910 and 1915 sections of the complex, and construction of a two-story addition to the southwest. Basic cost of the project was placed at approximately $5,760,000.

Options presented by the committee included construction of a third story shell on the new addition for an additional $384,000 for potential future expansion, or completion of a third floor and remodeling of the 1956 (vocational) wing to accommodate industrial arts programs. Total cost of the project with the latter option is projected at $7,958,000.

School board chairman Harry Sjulson thanked chairman Christensen and the facilities advisory committee members for their effort in studying alternatives and presenting recommendations.

Discussion was also held concerning space needs for the 1984-85 school year. A special meeting has been set for Wednesday, May 23, at 7 a.m. to discuss these needs.

Malberg And Wigness Vows Spoken At Zion

Patricia Louise Malberg and Steven Craig Wigness, both of this city, exchanged marriage vows on Saturday, April 14, at 4:30 p.m., at Zion Lutheran church, Thief River Falls.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Kermit Malberg and Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Wigness, also of this city.

Rev. Richard Larson officiated at the double ring ceremony witnessed by approximately 325 relatives and friends. Organist was Ida Nordvall, a friend of the groom. She played "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring," for the processional, and "Ode to Joy," as the recessional. During the ceremony, Vi Barr sang, "God, a Woman and a Man", and "The Lord's Prayer". Denise Hanson, with Sue Barrett as flutist, sang "Gift of Love". The instrumental prelude, "Divertimento No. 1 (Ronda)" by Mozart was provided by Helen and Kia Anderson and Jan Klopp, friends of the bride.

Forming the chancel setting were spiral candelabra with palms and ivory ribbon bows and streamers. On the altar and at the base were arrangements of palm branches devoid of ornamentation.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her father and given in marriage by her parents. She was attired in a floor-length, long-sleeved ivory lace gown over ivory taffeta, styled with a fitted bodice with a high wedding band neckline. A wide insertion of embroidered, scalloped lace, corresponding with the lace which encircled the hemline, graced the straight skirt, gathered at the natural waistline. Pearl buttons gave back interest. Her wide-brimmed hat of matching lace, was decorated with ribbon and fresh flowers by Julie Lendobeja. She carried a colonial bouquet of white iris and starburst mums, accented with Sonja roses, yellow daisies and peach and yellow tulips.

Deanna Melander of this city attended her sister as matron of honor. Other attendants were Jody Brennan Olsen, Highland Park, Ill., Nancy Bergos, Blythe, Calif.; Barb Murphy, Tucson, Ariz., and Jean Bye, Grand Forks, N.D., friends of the couple.

Their gowns, styled like the bride, were in tea-length style with a narrow, mini-flounce surrounding the skirt. To add color, the gowns were worn over peach underdresses. They carried colonial bouquets of white starburst mums, light blue iris, yellow daisy mums and peach mini carnations.

Serving as flower girls were Hayden and Cameron Roach, Lake Forest, Ill., friends of the couple. Like the bride's attendants, they wore ivory lace gowns over peach, with a deep flounce edging their tea-length skirts. Their bouquets were similar to those carried by the bridesmaids.

Kirt Hultgren, Grand Forks, N.D., attended the groom as best man. Groomsmen were Mike Wginess, brother of the groom; Mike McGauvran, Grand Forks, N.D., Mark Wiebolt, Minneapolis, and Lester Sutton, Chicago, Ill., friends of the couple. Ushers were John Goulet, East Grand Forks, and Mike Sweeney, Fargo, N.D., also friends of the couple.

The groom wore gray striped trousers, medium gray cut-way jacket, white winged-collar shirt and gray striped ascot. His attendants and the fathers wore similar attire, with the exception of their jackets, which were regular length. Their boutonnieres were miniature white carnations tipped in peach, and accented with orange star flowers.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Malberg wore a light blue street length dress featuring a flared skirt and a fitted bodice styled with long chiffon sleeves and a sherr diagonally-tiered bodice. Mrs. Wigness wore a red pleated, long-sleeved, street-length dress with black accents at the waistline, high neckline and on the sleeves. Their corsages were Phalaenopis orchids with ivory ribbon.

Honor guests were Edith Malberg, Yuma, Ariz., grandmother of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Porter Wigness, Fortuna, N.D., and Mr. and Mrs. Manvell Wralstad, Grafton, N.D., grandparents of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Noreen, Mr. and Mrs. George Erickson, godparents of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Arden Wigness and Phil Wralstad, godparents of the groom; Beth Isaacson and Julie McGauvran, Grand Forks, Joan Roach, Lake Forest, Ill., and Julie Lendobeja, the bride's personal attendants; and Evie Johnson and Tiny Jorstad, the mothers' helpers.

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents hosted a reception and dance at the Elks club. Music for dancing was provided by "Spirit" band. Hosts and hostesses at the reception were Mr. and Mrs. Doug Williams, brother-in-law and sister of the groom, and Mr. and Mrs. "Red" Monroe, friends of the bride. Kari Myrold, Minneapolis, registered the guests.

Centering the serving table was a four tiered wedding cake, iced in off-white and decorated with ivory lilies of the valley. The two upper octogan tiers were separated from the round tiers by Roman pillars and ceramic figurines. Topping the cake was a filigreed heart with double wedding bells and silk pastel flowers. On either side of the cake were pastel mints made by the bride's great aunt, Mrs. Clayton Edwards of Garden City, S.D.

Cutting and serving the cake were Doris Larson of Grand Forks, and Hilde Hamre. Carol Moser and Gladys Narverud poured the coffee. Waitresses were Kim Lofberg, Kristie Wigness, Teresa Nelson, Jennifer Olson, Shelley Defreece and Sara Gronvold.

Gift bearers were Quincy and Paul Lofberg and Timmy Nelson. The rice packets were distributed by Angie Teie and Jennifer Vigen. At the punch bowl were Barb Holland, Grand Forks, and Karla Koch, Bismarck, N.D. Paula Hanson was the candid photographer.

Out of state guests were from California, Texas, North and South Dakota, Arizona and Illinois.

After the rehearsal, the evening prior to the wedding, the groom's parents hosted a groom's dinner at Lon's for the immediate families and the wedding party.

Following a wedding trip to Northeastern Minnesota, Duluth, the North Shore drive and Wisconsin, the couple is now at home in Thief River Falls at 723 South St. Paul. Both are graduates of Lincoln high school and the University of North Dakota. The bride is employed as special education instructor at Northrop school; and the groom is employed by The Windmill in Grand Forks, N.D. Photo Alice Hofstad, Plummer

Awareness Week Is Marked By Campanula Club

At a meeting of the Campanula garden club held Wednesday at the Bernice Knutson apartment, members voted to observe the Historical Society Awareness week, May 13-19.

To correspond with the proposal made in a letter from the society, members decided to bring flowers to the local newspaper. Ruth Holmes volunteered to make the delivery on May 14.

President Ruth Holmes presided at the meeting and led the group in reading the garden club creed and the May poem by Flora Mercil. In answering roll call using nature's calendar for May, one member stated that her garden was planted and vegetables were growing. Others reported the blossoming of tulips, grade hyacinths, blue and purple iris, and daffodils.

Two lessons were studied. Bernice Knutson reported on the plant of the Bible. She selected the Vine, or the grape as it is known today. To add to the study, Geneva Overum reported on the vineyards she had seen when she toured the Holy Land in 1972. The monthly topic was given by Miss Overum. She gave information on the Sacred tree, the Uggdrase, or the ash tree.

During the business session, members discussed planting the plots at the Pennington county court house. Marie Fischer, Viola Koglin and Ruth Holmes were appointed to select and buy the plants and to decide the day of planting. The regular reports were given by secretary Elearnor Tornes, treasurer Olga Johnson, and the Good Cheer chairman Bernice Knutson. Members signed a card to be sent to Ellen Peterson.

During the social hour, lunch was served by the hostess. May baskets, containing plants, seeds and bulbs, were exchanged. The meeting concluded with a plant exchange.

Nine members attended the meeting as did Mrs. Herman Christopherson, a social member.

City Clerk's Week Noted Across U.S.

In addition, the clerk handles most of the details involved in conducting city elections; maintains all financial records; prepares financial reports; enforces the budget; keeps track of monthly payroll deductions for city employees; joins with the mayor in executing all legal papers in behalf of the city; files numerous official documents; sees that legal notices are published; certifies fire and police department statements; and issues various licenses and permits.

Wigness notes that the duties of the city clerk are much the same regardless of the size of the city involved, expressing admiration for the clerks in many smaller community surrounding communities. "The duties are about the same, there is just more going on in a bigger city."

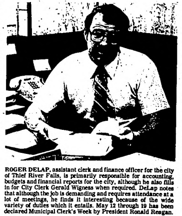
Even though he estimates that he puts in between 45 and 50 hours a week on the job, he is quick to credit the office staff for reducing that workload. "They really do a super job," he comments.

Assistant Clerk and finance officer Roger Delap takes care of primary accounting, budgets and financial work. That work involves not only helping various department heads in the development of their budgets, but preparing overall city budgets and financial statements for different projects. Both men note that the work involves attending a lot of meetings, both of city council and various committees.

"Primarily, the job involves public service, but it also provides a unique aspect of dealing with various enterprise departments such as the liquor store or the utilities department, which have to be handled much like any other business which makes a profit," says Roger.

Although both are paid employees, they also note that politics are an important part of the job, since they must work closely with both the public and elected city officials.

Preparation for council and committee meetings is one of the biggest parts of the clerk's job, since it involves seeing that the council has the necessary information it needs to make decisions.



ROGER DELAP, assistant clerk and finance officer for the city of Thief River Falls, is primarily responsible for accounting, budgets and financial reports for the city, although he also fills in for City Clerk Gerald Wigness when required. DeLap notes that although the job is demanding and requires attendance at a lot of meetings, he finds it interesting because of the wide variety of duties which it entails. May 12 through 19 has been declared Municipal Clerk's Week by President Ronald Reagan.

Jerry notes that he tries to research any subject which is to be brought before the council in advance, commenting "I try to see that they don't have any surprises dropped on them." Notes of all the meetings are taken in shorthand, and must be transcribed into minutes following the meetings.

Much of the routine work such as typing of minutes and letters if handled by the secretarial staff. This includes Amber Engstrom, steno-secretary and word processor operator, who types up council agendas, minutes, resolutions, discussions of committee meetings, union contracts, audit reports, salary schedules, routine correspondence and takes dictation. She has been employed in the office for eight and a half years.

Dione Lund is in charge of payrolls and personnel, a position which involves processing time cards and payroll for an average of 150 employees from 16 departments. Her duties include keeping track of time cards, sick leave, vacation and personal leave days, federal, state and social security taxes, health and life insurance, retirement, daily cash flow balances, making deposits and payments, processing checks, and typing numerous reports and claims. She has worked for the office for seven and a half years.

Newest addition to the staff is secretary-receptionist Lisa Wagner, who just started full time on May 1. Her duties include answering the telephone, waiting on customers, handling accounts receivable and accounts payable, typing, issuing city licenses and auditorium rental, and conducting special assessment searches.

Asked if there was any area about the job that he disliked, Wigness says he always has liked the work, and never felt he made a mistake when he left teaching. "If there is one thing that bothers me it would be people who taken an adversary position when they come into the council meeting. . .'sort of an 'us versus them' attitude. After all, we're all living in the same community."

Women Ignore Monthly Breast Self-Examination

Most American women continue to ignore the importance of breast self-examination (BSE) for early detection of breast cancer, even though they believe it has value in controlling breast cancer, according to a survey conducted by the Gallup organization for the American institute for cancer research.

Two-thirds of American women (63 per cent) do not perform monthly breast self-examination, despite the fact that 95 per cent report they have heard of it. Eighty-eight per cent of women agree there is a lot of value in early detection of breast cancer, and 81 per cent report they have practiced breast self-examination at least once, the survey found. Only 30 per cent of women report they have practiced self-examination at least once a month during the past year, which is the recommended frequency.

In response to these findings, the American institute for cancer research has this month launched a public education campaign designed to encourage and remind women to perform regular breast self-examination. AICR has developed a universal symbol — a stylized woman with one hand held up as a reminder — and slogan — "Keep In Tough With Yourself" — and will promote this symbol widely.

"There is a gap between women's awareness of breast cancer, treatment and their willingness to participate in early detection practices," according to the American institute for cancer research. "Clearly, the mass of public education materials have not bridged the gap between awareness and action, and we must develop more effective ways to change women's behavior. The most effective means of detecting breast cancer is self-examination, and women still aren't doing it."

"It's just something I don't think about doing," was the reason given most frequently by women (63 per cent) who have heard of self-examination but who perform it less frequently than once a month. Other major reasons cited by this group include: "I don't think I could detect a problem." (56 per cent); "I intend to and I forget." (55 per cent); "I see a doctor frequently and the doctor does it." (52 per cent).

Women who have never practiced breast self-examination gave significantly different reasons for their behavior. Three-quarters (74 per cent) of them said "I don't think I could detect a problem" as opposed to half (56 per cent) of the women who report some self-examination practice. They are also much more likely to say "My doctor never told me I should."

Age, the survey reveals, also plays a part in women's attitudes toward breast self-examination, with women under 29 and over 50 almost twice as likely as women 30 to 49 to have never practiced breast BSE. Among those who did breast self-examination, there was no significant difference in age groups in frequency of the exam. Older women, however, are more likely to respond "I think only a doctor should do it," and "I'm not that concerned about breast cancer." The risk of developing breast cancer increases with age.

Paradoxically, respondents to the survey overstate the likelihood that they will develop breast cancer. Thirty-two per cent believed it likely they will develop breast cancer, a much higher percentage than the national projection of nine per cent.

A woman's doctor is most likely to be her source of information on breast self-examination. According to the survey, 77 per cent of the women who have practiced BSE in the last year learned about it from their doctors. Forty-five per cent of the women who said they have never done a self-examination did not mention a doctor as a source of information on it.

The current Gallup survey results are based on a nationally representative sample of 1,029 women age 18 and over. The survey was conducted by in-person, in-home interviews using only female interviewers. Interviewing was conducted between September 16-19 and October 7-10. Survey results reported for the sample as a whole are subject to sampling error of plus or minus four per cent.

Individuals may request free sets of stickers carrying the universal reminder symbol "Keep in Touch with Yourself" by writing to BSE Campaign c-o AICR, Washington, D.C. 20069.

Beef Industry Major Force In Ag Economy

The cattle industry has been a major force in American agriculture for nearly 150 years. Today, with approximately 115 million head of cattle, the United States is the world's largest producer of beef. Total U.S. bill for processing, handling and transportation of meat products in 1981 was $5.3 billion.

The beef industry generates the largest single portion of farm cash receipts, accounting for nearly a 25 per cent share in an average year. Over 22 billion pounds of beef are produced yearly.

Changes in production costs, which are affected by economic policy, resource availability and consumer preference, are forcing production practices to respond to these changes. Pricing information, high and volatile interest rates and rising energy costs have contributed to increasing production costs for producers.

Increases in production costs are closely tied to price inflation for cattle producers as for other farm producers. Farm input prices increased 238 per cent from 1962 to 1982 compared to a 209 per cent increase in the consumer price index. Farm value share of the retail cost in 1982 was 50 per cent, an increase from 49 per cent in 1981, which was the lowest since 1960.

There are approximately 1.6 million cattle operations in the U.S. today and 70,892 feedlots. There are 6,600 federally-inspected meat plants in the U.S. Total cash receipts for cattle and calves amount to $29.9 billion.

America exports $373.2 million of beef and veal each year, about one per cent of annual production.

Sales of hides and skins, mostly from American cattle, are worth $769 million a year on the world market. In dollar value, beef, tallow and hides represent about four per cent of all U.S. agricultural exports, the equivalent of about $9 for every person living in this country.

Other major cattle-producing countries are Brazil, 100 million head; Europe, combined total of 75 million; Argentina, 70 million; and Australia, 35 million.

Approximately 87 per cent of all beef is served in a fresh form and 13 per cent is processed. Corned beef, salami, hot dogs and luncheon meats are among America's favorite fast foods. While Americans are eating somewhat less beef than they have in the past, the demand for beef is still high. About $1.5 billion or seven per cent of all beef and veal sold in the U.S. every year is imported.

Travel Dollars Help Benefit Entire State

Travel expenditures contribute nearly $2.5 billion annually to Minnesota's economy. That translates into $188 million in state revenues through corporate and individual income taxes and sales, gas and liquor taxes. Tourism is considered one of the largest industries in the state.

The economic benefits of the tourism industry extend directly and indirectly to the entire population. Not only do the familiar tourist businesses such as hotels, motels, resorts, campgrounds and ski lodges benefit, but a host of other businesses derive a significant amount of their revenue from the traveling public, be it pleasure or business travel. These businesses include taxi and limousine service, gas stations, camper and trailer dealers, car rental firms, retail stores, restaurants and recreational services and cultural organizations such as amusement parks, movies, theaters, museums and sports facilities.

Travel industry experts predict 1984 to be a travel boom year. Even during the worst of the recession in 1982 when the unemployment rate was rising, employment in the tourism industry increased by 1.6 per cent nationally over the previous year. As consumers become more sure about their income, they feel more confident about taking trips.

Subsequently, more money is pumped into the economy directly at the local level. In Minnesota, the tourism industry is responsible for creating 108,000 full-time jobs and over 15,000 part-time or season jobs.

Minnesota tourist-related building activity creates a ripple or multiplier effect with dollars added to the economy through guest room, food, beverages, entertainment and miscellaneous expenditures. Lodging receipts were up 11.2 per cent in the first three quarters of 1983 over the same period the previous year.

Economic activity is expected to further increase as efforts to promote Minnesota as a year-round vacation area become more competitive. "The traditional 14 week span in the summer has been extended," according to Hank Todd, director of the Minnesota office of tourism. "In our marketing and advertising, we are positioning Minnesota as a fall and winter vacation destination offering both indoor and outdoor activities."

Travel inquires from January-April on winter vacation opportunities have increased 6.3 per cent over last year.

Minnesota's tourism marketing is also taking aim at the increasingly lucrative meeting and convention trade. Approximately 14 per cent of travel is business related. A recent survey conducted by a car rental firm in conjunction with the office of tourism found that 82 per cent of those responding had vacationed somewhere they had been attracted to while on a business trip. Business travelers contribute to the Minnesota economy while on their business trips, and become potential vacations for return visits.

Besides becoming more aggressive in business travel marketing, Minnesota's tourism industry is carving a niche in international pleasure travel. With the emphasis on world trade by Governor Perpich, international business travel is expected to increase substantially. "It is a high-growth market," Todd said, "and we plan to be ready to showcase why they need to explore Minnesota."

Small Business Leading Force In U.S. Employment

Small businesses are the leading force in job creation during both economic recession and recovery, and thus help spur business upswings and help moderate downturns, President's Reagan's annual report on the state of small business showed.

In the report, sent to Congress in March, the President noted that "1983 was an excellent year for the economy in general and especially for small business:"

— Business bankruptcies declined 14.8 per cent during the year. In the second half of 1983, bankruptcies declined 30 per cent compared to the 1982 report.

— Small business income, as measured by proprietorships and partnerships, grew 18 per cent. In contrast, wage and salary income rose only 6.1 per cent. In 1981-82, wage and salary income had increased more than small business income.

— A record 600,000 new business incorporations, again just about all by small firms, were recorded last year, a sign that more and more Americans are going into business for themselves. The previous record incorporations total of 580,000 was set in 1981.

The President said, "We are succeeding in establishing economic conditions which recognize and promote the vital role small business performs in our economy. And small business has responded with record business formation, employment and activity. . ."

"The reason for the success of small business in 1983 is no mystery. The economy reflects the growing confidence of private sector decision makers to invest capital and take risks. Business decisions can be made more confidently with an inflation rate of four per cent instead of 12 per cent. Small business, which relies more heavily on borrowed capital, is better off with prime interest rates at 11 per cent rather than 21 per cent."

Report, prepared by the U.S. Small Business administration's office of advocacy, said that the nation's 14 million small businesses employ 47.8 per cent of the private workforce, contribute 42 per cent of national sales and 38 per cent of the gross national product.

Report, using data from other federal agencies and from SBA's own small business data base, said, "All of the 984,000 net new jobs generated in the American economy during 1981 and 1982 came from independent small businesses. . . . Small businesses produced a total of 2,650,000 new jobs, more than offsetting the 1,666,000 jobs lost by large businesses.

"These jobs were in small firms in both traditional and non-traditional small business industries, particularly finance and services. The service sector accounted for about half the employment increase."

Small businesses also are leading the way in employment gains during the recovery. "Employment in the small business-dominated industries tracked by the Bureau of Labor Statistics on a monthly basis grew 2.6 per cent from September 1982 thru September 1983," the report said. "Employment in large business-dominated industries in the same industrial sectors grew 1.2 per cent during the same period."

Industries surveyed include construction, transportation, communications, utilities, wholesale and retail trade, services, finance, insurance and real estate.

"The small business sector often has served as the forerunner of change for the U.S. economy," the report said.

"For example, between 1958-77, — a period of expansion for all major American industries — the number of jobs in small business-dominated industries grew more than in large business-dominated industries. During that time, small firms showed an ability to adjust to changing conditions in many industries while they gained a sizeable share of jobs in the rapidly-expanding service industries. This trend of a growing share of small business jobs in the service industries is expected to continue through the remainder of this decade."

The President said, "We intend to act on upcoming issues to ensure that our Nation's policies continue to be favorable to small business. . . We must preserve the enacted individual tax cuts and tax indexing, and implement policies against unfair competition with the private sector from the government or other tax-advantaged sectors of the economy. . . The procurement process must continue to be simplified and made more accessable to small firms, especially in the area of spare parts."

In addition to leading in overall job creation, the report noted that small firms furnish two out of three workers with their first jobs.

"Many of these first-time positions are in the service sector," the report said, "the traditional doorway to the job market for the young, minority and unskilled workers. Service industries now employ about 20 million workers, approximately the same number of workers as in the manufacturing sector.

"Small firms permit many workers such as women and older people to accomodate their work schedules to their personal demand and preferences."

American small business sector shows a strong ability to adapt and grow in times of both economic stress and prosperity," the report said. "Small businesses remain a major source of jobs for a wide-cross-section of workers: the young, the old and the part-time.

"As the American economy goes through structural changes, small firms are exhibiting the imagination and flexibility needed to adapt to those changes and are providing jobs for many of those workers being displaced."

THE VAN-DELLS will be appearing Sunday, May 27, at the Meadowbrook ballroom west of Middle River under sponsorship of the band "Imagine". The group will present two 90-minute shows with the first at 8 p.m. and "Imagine" will play from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Members of "Imagine" include Scott Peters, Viking; Craig Swenson, Newfolden; Randy Larson, Gatzke; Curt Vandermeer, Grygla; and Dennis Byklum, Fourtown. The Van-Dells have been described by Dick Clark on a nationwide radio show as "the group that has kept music of the 1960's alive". The group is now in its 10th season and includes four vocalists and a back-up band. It has performed in clubs from Florida to Nevada, including Harrah's hotel and casino in Lake Tahoe and Reno and at many fairs, including state fairs in Kentucky and Ohio.

Stewardship Of Soil Given New Emphasis

Soil Stewardship week will be May 27 through June 3, and especially during this week we take time to think about the resources that the Lord has given us to use and protect," states Ralph Rundell, soil conservation technician with the Marshall-Beltrami soil and water conservation district.

"To give account of our stewardship of the resources of soil and water, we need to think of the many ways we use or mis-use these resources," he added. "The dictionary defines stewardship as to manage or to administer. It does not say to own but to manage. We may have title to a farm but it is only ours to use while we are here.

"Did you see the soil change owners on Tuesday, May 8? It was not by selling, but blowing from one farm to another! This doesn't seem to be good stewardship to me. If we were called to make an accounting of our stewardship on a windy day, how would we explain the dust storms? Would we have an excuse or would we admit that the way we farm our land and treat our soils has a direct bearing on erosion?," he asks.

Soil stewardship week is a reminder that we need to protect the soil and water resources for future generations. This year's theme, "Conservation: A Common Commitment," should remind us all that the soil and water resource is what our great land is all about and built on. If we protect and improve these resources, they will continue to produce abundantly for us and for our children. If we mis-use and mistreat these resources, they will deteriorate in production and increase in costs for us and the future generations.

"Let us remember our stewardship and work together to make a better future," Rundell concluded.

Deb Matero Selected For New Program

Deborah Matero of Thief River Falls is one of 30 Minnesota people selected to participate in a new program developed by the University of Minnesota agricultural extension service to provide training and experience in leadership skills.

The "Minnesota Emerging Leadership Project" provides a variety of activities designed to develop skills in communication and understanding of local, state, national and world affairs.

During the next two years participants will attend seminars on University of Minnesota campuses throughout the state. Special sessions will feature on-site tours and studies of business and government to discover first-hand the procedures, problems and opportunities in Minnesota.

The first two sessions were held in the Twin Cities, one in February and one in April. Harlan Cleveland of the Humphrey institute for public affairs was key-note speaker for the February meeting, devoted to an overview of different kinds of leadership needed in Minnesota. The April meeting included remarks by George Latimer, mayor of St. Paul and head of the state's task force on tax reform issues. Participants also visited with state legislators, agency heads and former governors Albert Quie and Harold Stassen during the April session.

Future meetings will be held in Crookston, Duluth and elsewhere in the state. These will focus on issues such as agricultural policy urban development, rural development, natural resource issues, education and human services.

Thomas Halbach, project director, says the Minnesota project is unique because it includes people from throughout the state and from a wide range of employment backgrounds. Halbach stressed that the goal of the project is to return skilled leaders to their communities where they can share their knowledge and experience.

Set Goals Before Stock Investment

If you think you'd enjoy the risk associated with playing the stock market, you're not alone. According to a recent study by the New York stock exchange, more than 42 million Americans — more than ever — now own stocks or mutual funds. This includes five million first time investors who put money into the market from July of 1982 to July of 1983 when it was "bullish."

Before you decide to join the ranks of the bulls or the bears, says the Minnesota society of CPAs, be sure you have a clear financial goal for the future. You should also understand the tax implications of investing in the stock market.

Some understanding of how the stock market works may help. Wall street is a narrow passage that cuts through New York City's financial district in lower Manhattan. "The Street" is a nickname which obscures the presence of other stock markets which are scattered around the nation. The New York stock exchange and the American stock exchange are the biggest. In addition, there are regional exhanges in Philadelphia, Chicago, Boston, Los Angeles and Cincinnati. Finally, the National Association of Securities Dealer Automated Quotation system functions as an electronic auction place instantly available to plugged-in terminals. Investors purchase shares of companies on these markets and the companies translate investor money into plants and expanded operations.

Can you make money in the market? Yes. Studies show that small investors, freed from the constraints on institutional money managers who must make conservative stock picks, often outperform those institutional money managers.

Stock analysts say that the most common error made by small investors stems from a failure to set firm goals when they purchase stock. Before picking a stock, it is important to know what you want from it. Generally, you pay more for a blue chip stock — That is a stock of a larger company with a prolonged record of steady growth. But it is a less risky investment, and, because of that, its dividends are unlikely to spurt ahead. Blue chips can provide a steady income from dividends, but remember, income tax will be due on all but the first $100 of these earnings.

On the other hand, you may be looking for a more speculative stock on the chance that it will advance in price. The key is setting a goal, the price at which you would take your prifit without getting greedy. In this type of investing, it's critical to understand how capital gains or losses would affect your taxes.

When you know what your goals are, you have a clearer idea of the type of stock to buy. Now, focus on picking the stock likely to achieve these objectives. If some hard information persuades you that an industry is expanding, you may want to look into other companies in that same industry.

One way to compare companies is by looking at their price-earnings ratios. The "P-E" which is listed in most newspapers with stock tables, tells you the price of a share of stock divided by earnings per share. For example, a stock selling for $50 a share and earning $5 a share is said to have a P-E of 10. Stocks with lower P-Es generate higher long-term results. For research, write the company for its annual report which tells you something about its financial condition and management philosophy.

To help you understand financial statements, write the American Institute of CPAs, 1211 Avenue of the Americas, New York, NY 10036, for the booklet, "What Else Can Financial Statements Tell You?"

Aspirin Most Valuable Drug For Arthritis

Despite its easy availability, aspirin is still the most valuable drug in the treatment of arthritis, according to the arthritis foundation.

Although one family in three is affected by arthritis, just about every family has aspirin somewhere around the house. The arthritis foundation has some tips for keeping this popular medicine.

— Always keep the aspirin bottle tightly closed.

— Do not keep aspirin in the bathroom medicine cabinet. The moisture there causes aspirin to lose its effectiveness.

— Throw out aspirin that smells like vinegar. It's too old to do much good.

— Keep aspirin out of reach of children.

During May the arthritis foundation has a special message on aspirin that may be heard by calling the foundation's toll-free number, 1-800-552-1278. A new leaflet on aspirin and related medications is available free to callers.

One For The Road Can Be One Too Many

A clear mind, excellent reflexes and good vision are essential for a safe alert driver. And, under the best of circumstances, alcohol clouds the mind, delays reaction and blurs vision.

Based on those facts, the Minnesota safety council recommends that "none for the road" is the best slogan for anyone who has to drive home. That way, you can avoid having one drink too many — which can occur even after just one drink.

National transportation safety board study shows a driver's likelihood of causing an accident increases measurably at only .04 per cent blood alcohol. At .06 it is about four times as great. At .08 it is about six times as great. And at .10 (the level at which most states charge a person with driving while intoxicated) it's about eight times as great. Thus, even without considering the driver's physical and emotional condition, his or her driving ability is adversely affected by a single drink.

Another factor to consider is the length of time since alcoholic beverages were consumed. Ethyl alcohol is absorbed immediately into the bloodstream and retained in various organs of the body in proportion ot the amount of water they contain. Because the brain has a high concentration of blood, which is 90 per cent water, the effect on the central nervous system is apparent within minutes after alcohol is consumed.

While alcohol is absorbed rapidly, it is slow to leave the body. Once in the bloodstream, alcohol must be broken down by the liver and oxidized or converted into water and carbon dioxide. And the liver is able to convert only about a half ounce of alcohol per hour, Because the rate at which the body absorbs alcohol is so much higher than the rate at which it is oxidized, the cumulative effect can leave a person intoxicated after only a very short time.

Other variables include how tired a driver is, how much he or she has eaten, his or her emotional state, whether he or she is on medication, etc. Additionally, even under similar conditions the same amount of alcohol may have a different effect on the same driver the next time he or she drinks.

So it stands to reason that all drinkers are "problem drinkers" once they're on the highway. That's why the Minnesota safety council asks you to remember next time to have "none for the road."

Bond Investing Affects Your Financial Plan

Should you invest in corporate or municipal bonds? Before you decide, says the Minnesota society of CPAs, you should understand how this kind of investment will affect your tax and total financial situation.

A bond is an I.O.U. from a corporation or municipality. Bonds are issued to raise capital to build plants, buy machinery and maintain and business. If you lend your money to a corporation by buying its bonds, the corporation promises to pay you back with interest.

Typically, bonds are sold in $1,000 units. So, if you buy a $1,000 bond and it pays 10 per cent annual interest, you'll receive $100 a year until the bond matures. Interest is usually paid out twice a year. At maturity, you receive the $1,000 original investment — also called the "face value."

Bonds provide a relatively secure return on your investment. However, inflation and changes in interest rates can make your investment less attractive. After investing in a $1,000 bond that pay 10 per cent interest, for instance, the interest rates on other investments may rise. If new bonds are issued at a 15 per cent interest rate — $150 a year, your $100 return is no longer attractive, and the value of your bond decreases if you want to sell it.

Conversely, your bond may become more valuable if interest rates fall below the 10 per cent rate of return. The bond you paid $1,000 for will be worth more on this "secondary" market — where bonds are traded — when interest rates decline.

Interplay between interest rates and bond prices is measured by the bond's current yield. To find the current yield, divide a bond's annual interest rate by its current price. For example, take a bond issued at $1,000 and paying 15 per cent interest. Say interest rates rise, making the bond's 15 per cent rate less attractive and forcing down the price of the bond should you want to sell it.

Then, if the bond's price slips to $950 on the secondary market, you would compute the current yield by dividing the annual $150 interest payment by the current market value of $950. In this case, the current yield would be 15.8 per cent. As you can see, when prevailing interest rates rise, the current yields on existing bonds also rise.

Rate of return on a bond is not the only factor to consider when you are looking for the right bond to buy. Bonds are rated by independent financial services, such as Standard and Poor's and Moody's. The rating indicates the bond issuer's capacity to pay investors interest and repay the principal when the bond matures. Generally, the higher rated bonds pay less in interest because the risk of default is lower. You will find that a bond rated AAA offers a yield two or three percentage points lower than those rated BBB, because AAA is less risky.

One type of bond, which has been issued with increasing frequency in recent years, is the municipal bond. These bonds are issued by state and local governments or their agencies, not corporations. Interest on municipal bonds is exempt from federal taxes and is usually exempt from state and local income taxes in the areas in which they are issued. Because these bonds are tax-exempt, a municipality can offer an interest rate that is lower than that of a corporate bond. The lower interest rate may be offset by receiving interest income that is tax free.

Your effective yield depends on your tax bracket. If you are in the 44 per cent tax bracket, the yield on a 10 per cent tax exempt investment is equivalent to a taxable yield of 17.86 per cent. A rule of thumb is that those in the 40 per cent or-higher tax bracket should be able to benefit by investing in municipal bond rather than a corporate bond.

Consult your tax advisor before making this sort of tax advantaged investment.

Buyers May Register New Tire Purchases

New tire purchasers across the country are being urged to take advantage of a new law allowing consumers to register new tire purchases directly with tire manufacturers in case a tire recall notice is ever issued.

In a Washington press conference, the National Tire Dealers and Retreaders association in coooperation with the National Highway Traffic Safety administration launched a national campaign urging consumers to use the new system of voluntary tire registration. In 1983, more than 130 million new passenger tires were sold in the U.S. replacement market.

Other groups urging use of voluntary tire registration include: American Automobile association (AAA), American Farm Bureau federation, National Grange, service station dealers of America, and Rubber manufacturers association.

Under the new law, the independent tire retailer must give new tire purchasers a postcard form containing the tire registration numbers. Tire purchasers then, add their addresses on the form (already pre-addressed to the manufacturer), add postage and mail it.

If a tire recall occurs, the manufacturers would use the registration information to notify tire owners.

Council on Aging Essay Contest Winner Named

(Editor's Note: Pennington county council on aging has conducted its annual essay contest on grandparents for sixth graders in Thief River Falls schools. First, second and third place winners were selected and the first place essay by Loretta Mostrom is published today. Second and third place winners will be published in subsequent issues of the Times.)

by Loretta Mostrom

My Grandmother's name is June Van Der Veen, and she was born at Kenora, Canada. She is 67 years old. My Grandpa's name if Martin Van Der Veen and he was born in Raymond, Minnesota. He is 69 years old. My grandparents got married in Sioux Falls, S.D. They they moved to Minnesota after having two kids. They moved to Glenwood, Minnesota and had my mom and her brothers and sister. They had a large dairy farm there.

When we'd come and visit them there, my brother and I would swing from a tire on an apple tree and play with the dog, Schmitty. Often I would walk with Grandma in the budges along the road picking apple blossoms. Since they were called apple blossoms, I thought they were edible, but I learned with a little help from Grandma that that wasn't so. I also got to see Grandpa milk the cows. He offered to let my try, but cows weren't my thing, just to "pet" is all, I said.

Their farm house was big, but it had to be with five kids. There was three rooms upstairs not counting closets and a bathroom. Once I was running water in the sink in the upstairs bathroom, but I couldn't turn it off. It was rising higher and higher and I was afriad to pull the plug, but Grandma came to my rescue. I thought I would drown!

Now they live by Sauk Centre, Minnesota in a quiet place on the Sauk river. They have a big deck and lots of bird feeders. Grandpa fishes alot there. Grandma just reads, watches birds, cleans, or sometimes she fishes with Grandpa. When we come there Grandpa takes us out to fish, Grandma always makes something special for us.

Once I stayed a whole month there while my Mom, Dad and brother were in Rochester. My brother was at the Mayo Clinic. I would fish with Grandpa and feed the birds for Grandma. We even went to the circus and I got to ride an elephant alone around the circus ring a couple times. That was great fun.

I've learned sayings and lessons from them too. Like "If you don't have anything nice to say, don't say anything at all", and others like that. They've told me about their childhood too. Their transportation was horse and buggy, and they went to a small country school. On Sundays they would go to two services that day, and sit on a chair and read the Bible for the rest of the day, because they believed, "Work on Sunday, pay for it Monday".

Their parents were terribly strict, too. If you did something bad, you were sent to bed even if it was the middle of the day. There was no arguing with your parents, or complaining about supper, or out came THE BELT. They had never encountered it, but awful stories got around.

When I think of how they had it back then and how we have it now, I feel ashamed. Because if ways and rules were still the same I'd have a sore butt and be in bed VERY often. You gotta hand it to them for the way they grew up.

My Grandparents have taken trips all over together. They've been to Iowa; Topeka, Kansas; Missouri; Illinois; Disneyworld, Florida; Disneyland, California; Idaho; Arizona; Alaska; Pennsylvania and Mexico. Grandma and Grandpa picked shells at the Gulf of Mexico. They've been to the west coast and Kathmandu, Nepal, all in five retirement years. I've never taken any of those trips with them, but they sure had fun.

I can always tell ahead of time when they're around because I can smell Grandpa's cigars, and Grandma's secret perfume. She always wears it. I love my Grandparents and they love me. They'll always be with me forever.

Be Aware Of Changes In Medicare Plan

Everyone, not just older Americans, needs to be aware of recent changes in the way the government pays hospitals for treatment of medicare patients. Not only do these changes pose a critical challenge to the hospital industry, but they also affect patients of all ages throughout the country.

A year ago President Reagan signed into law a new plan for medicare reimbursement that represents a major effort on the part of the federal government — the largest purchaser of health care in this country — to reduce the rate of increase in health care costs. Under the plan hospitals are paid a flat rate for each medicare inpatient, depending on the patient's diagnosis and treatment. Predictions are that other third party payors will follow suit. Already Blue Cross-Blue Shield has initiated a fixed-rate reimbursement system through its aware program.

How does Medicare's plan work?

Carol Jewett, DRG planning and reimbursement director at United hospitals, St. Paul, explains that patients are classified into "disgnosis-related groups," called DRG's, according to their specific illness and treatment. The DRG system takes the more than 12,000 known diseases and categorizes them into 468 groups.

A value is assigned to each group. Each value is an estimate of the average cost of the average patient in each diagnostic group. "The hospitals are paid a pre-established rate per inpatient, regardless of the number of diagnostic tests, days spent in the hospital or other variables," Jewett says.

If the hospital can keep costs for care under the pre-established (fixed) rate, it can keep the difference. If the rate is exceeded, the hospital must absorb the loss. The system is called prospective payment and differs from the traditional system that reimbursed hospitals for what it cost them to take care of the individual patients with certain limits.

What are DRGs expected to accomplish?

DRG system was started by the government as a mechanism for holding medicare hospital payments within given budget limits. According to Jewett, the system is an attempt to get rid of what the government sees as an "open checkbook" that has sent hospital costs steadily upward. The system standardizes the price paid for services across institutions in all geographic areas.

How will hospital care be affected?

At United hospitals and other hospitals, managers and physicians are working together to insure there will be no change in the standard of patient care. "We are analyzing carefully the way services are provided to patients, the productivity of employees and the hospital's day-to-day operations," Jewett explains. "We are changing what we can to contain costs and working with our physicians to review the quantity and location of care wherever possible and yet maintain its high quality."

Some patient worry that the new system may mean they will be discharged from the hospital too soon after an illness or surgery. Doctors at United say no one will be discharged before the appropriate time. In some cases, they are supplementing inpatient care with home care and other appropriate services available in the community. If the DRG length of stay isn't adequate for a particular patient, the hospital absorbs the additional cost.

How can the community help?

As hospital officials, physicians and employees work to contain costs, they appeal to each individual in the community to make wise choices in using health services. Because of the third-party payment system, few people pay directly for health care and are sheltered from its direct costs. But we do have more choices than we think, Jewett says. Outpatient treatment, outpatient surgery and home care are examples of alternatives that may be appropriate and that minimize use of expensive inpatient services.

Of course, some of the most critical choices we all make with respect to health care are the way we handle stress, the foods we eat, the fitness programs we follow and the lifestyle patterns we develop. Each of these choices can help keep people out of hospital beds.

But in order to make the new system work, all of us — hospitals, doctors and patients — must understand the government's clear message that is already being repeated by other payors, Jewett says. "The rate of increase in health care expenditures must be reduced if we are to protect the very foundation of our health care system. Only a concerted effort by all of us can make that happen."

Rudy Boschwitz

reports to Minnesota

John Q. Farmer had always considered himself a good customer of his ag lender. He was not rich by any means, but he kept a pretty good credit rating, took no chances in operating his farm, and had expanded the operation somewhat in recent years.

But when John tried to renew his operating loan, he discovered things had changed. As the recession made making ends meet a little more difficult, John's debt load had increased. Prices were down, costs were up and John had been forced to substitute borrowed capital for earnings to tide himself over. Consequently, he's been unable to make full repayments of his loans.

Farming is never easy, John figured, and he's weather this just as he and his father before him had weathered many other problems.

But this time things were different. Seemingly out of nowhere — at least to John — the lender (or maybe those regulating the lender) had decided it was time to revalue his assets (machinery and land) to better reflect their current market value. The value of his land, which had been bid up and up through the '70s, was suddenly worth about one-third less. And his machinery, reflecting the generally tight times in agriculture, had depreciated markedly. So, in one fell swoop, John, on paper, became a "classified" borrower, or, one whose liabilities come too close to the assets to satisfy government bank examiners.

In order to protect their depositors, banks are allowed to carry only a limited number of classified loans. If too many loans become classified, the lender must correct the situation quickly. This could lead to the lender requesting immediate repayment of John's short-term loans.

This could leave John in a heck of a bind. He could try to find another lender, such as the Farmers Home Administration, to provide financing. It can be very difficult to make such a switch quickly, though. Thus, he would be faced with the specter of selling off some land or machinery to lessen his liabilities, or even worse — facing foreclosure.

As the economic circumstances of farmers have become more difficult, situations such as this one have become more common. In John's case, there were no bad guys, only people doing what regulations require. But John loses, nonetheless.

John, as most any farmer, is caught up in an ever-changing economic environment that he neither created nor controls. Today's farmer is faced with a marketplace so complex that it would mystify those of just a generation or two before.

Just consider the fact that the dollar is so strong on world markets. Years ago, that fact would have been about as meaningful to farmers as the proverbial price of tea in China. But today is a different matter. If the dollar is worth a lot, which it is, that means our agricultural commodities cost more than they should for foreign countries wishing to buy them. So they buy less and we are left with large stocks which drive down prices.

Combine that with traditional domestic influences on the price of commodities (like weather), and add to that the increasing cost of raising crops, the cost of borrowing money to finance the operation, and the deflation of land values, and it adds up to something of a problem for the ag credit industry.

That's why I've supported efforts in the Senate for a task force to study the changing environment of agriculture credit. And those efforts have succeeded. The Senate has passed a resolution that the President should appoint a task force on credit problems facing agricultural producers and related businesses, and should come up with suggestions of what to do about them.

Specifically, the Task Force will:

— Identify and describe components of the existing agricultural credit system;

— Identify and describe the credit needs of agricultural producers and related businesses.

— Evaluate the ability of the existing agricultural credit system to meet the credit needs of agricultural producers; and — Develop specific policy and legislative solutions to any identified problems.

The task force will consist of a balanced membership of no less than 15 people representing all major segments of agriculture, including farmers, suppliers, marketers and lenders. It is to report back to the president and to Congress no later then Jan. 1, 1985.

If you have any comments or anything you would like to say about what the task force should be focusing on, please write to my office. We'll be happy to pass them on.

Less Anesthesia Is Needed For A Prepared Child

Children who are not emotionally prepared for an operation may require more anesthesia, according to Christine S. Zambricki, a certified registered nurse anesthetist (CRNA).

Zambricki is administrative director of nurse anesthesiology at Mount Carmel Mercy hospital in Detroit and an associate professor at Mercy college in Detroit.

She said psychological preparation affects the child's sense of well being. That results in the need to administer less anesthesia, which decreases the risk of anesthetic complications, she said.

"It is surprising how many parents do not tell their kids why they are at the hospital," she said, then offered tips for parents on how to prepare their children.

"First, it is advisable to tell the child what will happen in simple, easily understood terms. Then be sure to tell the anesthetist what you told the child.

"Let the anesthetist know about nicknames, special interests or favorite toys so that he or she can develop a rapport with the child before the procedure," she said.

Often, a pre-surgical tour of the facility is arranged so that the child can become more familiar with the surroundings, Zambricki said. Toddlers often gain from playing with doctor kits.

"We urge parents not to use the term 'put to sleep' with their youngsters," she said. "Sometimes the children are fearful that they won't wake up, especially if they've experienced the death of a favorite pet or a grandparent.

"An alternative is simply to tell the child what the operation is and that he won't be able to feel the procedure," Zambricki said.

Mothers should be as knowledgable as possible about the child's medical history, noting any allergies to blankets, paper or medications, Zambricki said. If the child is developing a cold, the surgery might be postponed.

"We also like to determine the child's exercise tolerance — does he or she rest more often than playmates during active play or seem to be short of breath," Zambricki said.

"This, along with other information, helps us to assess the child's overall condition. We also need to know the child's height and weight, because we use these figures to calculate the amount of anesthetic to administer.

"In the case of infants and children, we need to know about any new or loose teeth. Often our procedures involve instrumentation that presses on the teeth. If we know about new ones, there is less risk of causing later discomfort to the child.

"We also need to know about other family members who may have experienced prolonged reactions to anesthesia.

"We're particularly concerned about malignant hyperthermia in children. This high-risk condition is hereditary and causes rapid increases in body temperature under anesthesia," Zambricki said.

Preparing a child for surgery is much like preparing an adult. Nothing should be taken by mouth for at least eight hours before the procedure, Zambricki said.

"This means withholding vitamins, medication — unless specified by the physician or the anesthetist — and especially chewing gum," she said.

"The problem is not that the anesthetic produces regurgitation of the stomach contents. Rather, the body loses its reflex actions under anesthesia, so that stomach contents are not kept in place as they normally would be.

"We're concerned that the acid from the stomach will reflux up the esophagus and enter the lungs, where it causes significant problems," Zambricki said.

"With children, you must be vigilant. Sometimes they don't know the importance of not drinking or eating anything. Also, grandparents who come for a pre-surgical visit should understand the nothing-by-mouth request and not bring tempting snacks," she said.

"For small infants, we recommend feeding them not less than four hours prior to surgery. The eight-hour limit for older children is much too long for infants who tend to dehydrate quickly. Unless the procedure is an emergency, we will usually postpone the surgery for these little ones," she said.

Caring for the child who has undergone a surgical procedure usually means trying to keep them quiet so that their bodies have a chance to heal, Zambricki said.

"Children may be sleepy for up to 12 hours after surgery. So there is little to be concerned about if you take them home from the recovery room and they sleep for half the day. "More active ones need to be protected, however, until the anesthetic is completely worn off, since their equilibrium, coordination and judgment may be impaired.

"Parents should seek hospitals where they can be in the recovery room with their children. The sight of a parent's face is usually the one thing kids recall when asked about the surgical experience. "It's comforting and psychologically beneficial to the healing process," Zambricki said.

Following a pattern first established in the mid-1970's, officials have announced that the site of the Section 8 high school hockey tournament will continue to rotate on a yearly basis between Thief River Falls and East Grand Forks in 1985 and 1986.

East Grand Forks will be the site of the 1985 tournament, with the games returning to Thief River Falls in 1986.

Beginning in 1977, the tournament site has alternated between the two communities each year. The system has proven to be highly successful, and officials voted to maintain the rotation pattern between Thief River Falls and East Grand Forks--rather than experiment with a more southern site such as Moorhead that has been suggested in some circles.

A new tournament seeding procedure was also approved that pretty much erases the importance of the regular season Section 8 standings. Basic concept will remain the same, with the coaches seeding the top four teams directly into the Section 8 tournament quarterfinals while the others break into sub-sectional match-ups. But instead of the positions in the standings determining those pairings, additional seeding voting will form the match-ups, a system to be repeated once again at the conclusion of the sub-section games.

Prowlers Face Important Game

Thief River Falls' dreams of landing one of the top two seeded spots for the upcoming North Sub-Region 8AA high school baseball tournament will be on the line Thursday in a 4:30 p.m. game against Bemidji on the Bemidji State University diamond.

Top two teams in the six-team playoff format will receive first round byes when post-season play gets underway at Moorhead Tuesday, May 29. Champion will be named Thursday, May 31.

Coaches will vote on seeding positions based upon regular season performances against one another. To date within the North Sub-Region 8AA match-ups, Moorhead is 4-1, Bemidji and Detroit Lakes 2-1, Thief River Falls 1-2, Fergus Falls and Park Rapids both 0-2.

Moorhead appears to be headed to a No. 1 finish. The Spuds' lone loss in the standings was a 4-2 decision to Thief River Falls, and the Prowlers played the Spuds on even terms again last Saturday before surrendering four unearned runs in the sixth inning to lose a 4-0 game. Thief River Falls would like to combine a Thursday win over Bemidji with the Prowlers' strong showings against Moorhead this spring to convince the voters they should be the tournament's No. 2 seed. Bemidji edged Thief River Falls 5-4 in eight innings in the first meeting between the two rivals earlier this season.

Moorhead and Bemidji are the only North Sub-Region 8AA teams on the 1984 Thief River Falls schedule, so the Prowlers must come up with a win Thursday for a split with both of them, then compile a good enough overall record to draw the voters' attention. They're 7-3 right now. After the Bemidji game Thief River Falls has two games left with Roseau and single meetings with Lake of the Woods and Bagley.

Bemidji is also 7-3. Last Thursday the Lumberjacks committed eight errors in a 9-8 loss to Roseau. On Friday the tables were turned as Bemidji capitalized on seven Crookston errors in a 12-2 victory, reversing an earlier 12-9 loss to the Pirates. The Lumberjacks pounded out 16 hits in an 18-3 Monday victory at International Falls.

A win over Bemidji Thursday would likely put Thief River Falls in competition with Detroit Lakes for that No. 2 spot. The Lakers beat Park Rapids 9-3 and Fergus Falls 7-1 in their first two North Sub-Region 8AA starts and won the Mid-State Conference title with a perfect 4-0 record to move into the state Class A rankings. But they had a six-game winning streak snapped in a 4-0 loss to Moorhead Thursday as sophomore righthander Bob George tossed a two-hit shutout for the Spuds.

Detroit Lakes still must face Fergus Falls, Moorhead and Bemidji in games that will determine the Lakers' post-season seeding position.

Miscellaneous

+ Don Magnusson, who impressed Thief River Falls basketball fans with a number of impressive performances in the Lincoln gym this past winter, has been named Valedictorian of the Argyle graduating class of 1984. He appeared here with the Eagles in a regular season game, at the first Thief River Falls Christmas Classic Invitational and in the District 32 tournament playoffs.

+ Goalie Don Johnson was named the most valuable player on the 1983-84 Roseau hockey team at the Rams' recent awards banquet. Brian Amundson and David Drown were named co-winners of the most improved player award.

+Mike Hastings and Mark Lyczewski of Crookston have indicated they will play college hockey at North Dakota State University next season. The NDSU hockey club is coached by Dave Morinville, a member of the 1972-73 Northland Community College hockey team who resigned as head hockey coach at Fargo North to take over the Bison program. NDSU has lined up a 1984-85 schedule that will include Bemidji State, Concorida, St. Thomas, Bethel, Mankato State and the University of Minnesota-Crookston.

DIFFERENT RUNNING styles were exhibited as an estimated 130 participants started the recent Falls Clinic-sponsored Thief River Falls foot races. There was a 10-kilometer (6.1 mile) race and a two-mile Fun Run conducted simultaneously, with runners in both events going through the downtown area, through residential areas and across the dam, where the two-mile Fun Run participants crossed the finish line behind the hospital while the 10-K runners headed for Oakland Park before returning to the finishing line. While results were reported in the Monday paper following the Saturday, May 5, race, photos that were to accompany the article were spoiled by a light leak on the negatives. Race officials, after having their photos processed, supplied these shots this week.

Prowlers Lose Twice In Moorhead Event . . .

TRF, Bemidji Meet For Second Time Thursday

A key North Sub-Region 8AA high school baseball showdown at Bemidji Thursday highlits this week's Thief River Falls baseball schedule. The Prowlers and Lumberjacks will tangle at 4:30 p.m.

Bemidji beat Thief River Falls 5-4 in an extra-inning game played here earlier this spring, and the Prowlers need a win over the Lumberjacks to keep their hopes alive of receiving one of the top two post-season seeding positions in North Sub-Region 8AA tournament play later this month.

Thief River Falls will also be in action Saturday with a pair of games against two different opponents at Roseau. The Prowlers will play the Rams at 12-noon that day, then face Lake of the Woods at 3 p.m.

After losing a pair of games in the four-team Moorhead Invitational Saturday, Thief River Falls carries a 7-3 season record. The Prowlers lost a closely-fought 4-0 first-round decision to the host Spuds, then fell to Minot, N.D. 11-4 in the third place game.

Moorhead then surprised state-ranked Grand Rapids 10-6 in the championship game by hitting five home runs. The Indians had blanked Minot 10-0 in the first round.

TRF . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . 0

In a game that was a lot closer than the final 4-0 score might indicate, Thief River Falls came out a frustrated loser to Moorhead, a team the Prowlers beat 4-2 earlier this season.

Only scoring came in the bottom of the sixth inning when Moorhead pushed four unearned runs across the plate. Until then it had been a scoreless duel featuring just a single base hit — a scratch infield single for the Spuds in the second inning.

Junior lefthander Ryan Drees came out of it the tough-luck loser, pitching a two-hitter.

In the Moorhead sixth, there were three Thief River Falls errors and two wild pitches, plus a two-run home run. Three of the five walks Drees gave up came after the homer, but he got out of further trouble with a pop-up to end the inning.

Thief River Falls got just one hit off Moorhead pitcher Darrin Kramer — a two-out double in the seventh by Rick Spong to spoil Kramer's no-hit bid.

"It was just a fine high school baseball game until the sixth inning," pointed out disappointed Thief River Falls coach Charlie Cornell.

Northwomen End Season At 2-14 Mark

Northland Community College fast pitch softball team ended its 1984 season with a 2-14 record, finishing with a pair of forfeit wins over Rainy River on Friday.

Rainy River canceled out on a scheduled doubleheader that afternoon in Thief River Falls, and also dropped out of a scheduled four-team tournament at the University of Minnesota-Crookston Saturday to erase what was supposed to be the final outing of the spring for Northland.

Earlier in the week the Northwomen saw their season-long losing streak reach 14 with Northwest Division doubleheader losses to Fergus Falls and UMC.

Playing at home Wednesday vs. Fergus Falls, Northland lost by 27-6 and 28-7 scores. The Spartans out-hit the Northwomen 18-7 in the opener and 24-6 in the night-cap. Northland made matters worse by collecting 10 of the game's 11 errors in the first game and 11 more in the second game.

In what turned out to be the 1984 season finale Thursday at Crookston, the Northwomen lost by 18-8 and 19-7 scores, surrendering 22 hits in the first game and 20 more in the second game.

Rams Edge EGF, TRF To Win Monday Track Meet

Host Roseau edged challengers East Grand Forks and Thief River Falls Monday to win championship honors at the 15-team Lions Invitational high school track meet for girls.

Roseau, after out-scoring Thief River Falls 14-1 in the next-to-the-last race of the day — the 3200-meter run, finished the meet with 86½ points, followed by East Grand Forks with 74, Thief River Falls 73, Warren-Alvarado 64, Hallock 56, Bousejour, Man. 51, Kennedy 21, Walker 24½, Stephen 15, Warroad 8, Lake of the Woods 7, Blackduck 4, Tri-County 4 and Marshall County Central 0.

"It was a real dog fight," reported Thief River Falls coach Tom Schafer in describing the heated first place battle. And despite the Prowlers' failure to overtake the Rams and the Green Wave, Schafer said he was more than happy with their efforts. "We had some real good times by our girls," he reported.

Especially impressive were the first place finishes by the Prowlers in the 1600 and 3200 meter relay races. Stacie Kruta, Bobbi Thompson, Cindy Kruta and Michelle Puetz ran the 1600 in 4:19.3, while Cindy Kruta, Peggy Cruz, Paula Wilkens and Georgia Howard ran the 3200 in 10:25.5.

Last Thursday the Prowlers ran in a four-team meet at Crookston — the Northwest Invitational, featuring teams from the old Northwest Conference affiliation.

Bemidji won that meet with 74 points, followed by Crookston with 61, Thief River Falls 59½ and East Grand Forks 45½.

Most times Thursday were inflated because of the extremely windy conditions.

There are two regular season meets left on the 1984 Thief River Falls schedule, with the Prowlers competing Friday at East Grand Forks at 4:15 p.m. and Monday at Roseau at 5 p.m.

Bemidji out-scored Detroit Lakes and Thief River Falls Monday in a McDonald's North Country Invitational high school track meet at Bemidji that was reduced to a triangular with a couple of last-minute team defections.

Host Bemidji won it with 119 points, followed by Detroit Lakes with 102 and Thief River Falls 50.

Northmen To Host Raiders, Spartans

Four home games — two doubleheaders — against Minnesota Community College Conference Northwest Division rivals Brainerd and Fergus Falls this week will close out the 1984 Northland baseball schedule.

Coach Chet Engelman's Northmen were scheduled to host Brainerd today (Wednesday) before entertaining Fergus Falls Saturday. Both twinbills have 12-noon starting times on the Northland diamond — located behind the school.

Brainerd is the current Northwest Division leader with a 7-1 record, followed by Fergus Falls at 5-3, University of Minnesota-Crookston 3-5 and Northland 1-7.

While Brainerd visits Northland, UMC goes to Fergus Falls in the second half of today's Northwest Division schedule. UMC and Brainerd are scheduled to meet Saturday as the Northmen face the Spartans, coached by former Minnesota Twins and Los Angeles Dodgers major league pitcher Dave Goltz.

At stake for Brainerd and Fergus Falls is a berth in the 1984 Minnesota Community College Conference state baseball tournament, scheduled to be played Saturday, May 26, at the site of the southwest Division champion.

Northland's overall record fell to 1-11 over the weekend when the Northmen, playing without Kevin Sanders, lost four games in a Saturday-Sunday nonconference series at Hibbing. Sanders, the team's best pitcher and top hitter, missed the trip because of a committment to the family farm.

Hibbing won 14-4 and 17-7 Saturday, then added 16-4 and 6-0 wins Sunday.

Fish Handling Is Subject Of Book

by Lynette Lamb
University of Minnesota
News Service

A lot of Minnesotans do two things with fish that drive Jeff Gunderson crazy: They refuse to eat perfectly good fish like carp and eelpout, and they treat the day's catch miserably, destroying its quality before the boat ever docks.

In an effort to eliminate both of these common blunders, Gunderson, an assistant professor and Sea Grant extension agent at the University of Minnesota-Duluth, has written a book called "Fixin' Fish: A Guide to Handling, Buying, Preserving and Preparing Fish."

Published in March by University of Minnesota Press, this slim paperback contains within its covers all the information anybody who fishes in the Upper Midwest should ever need to know about those topics as well as information on common fish parasites.

Underutilization of certain fish has been a particular concern of the Sea Grant Extension Program in Minnesota, because it represents waste of resource, Gunderson said. "The two reasons fish like eelpout (burbot), suckers and carp are overlooked are that they're ugly and that they're inconvenient to prepare," he said. "It has nothing to do with their taste — they're good."

There isn't much even a dedicated Sea Grant agent like Gunderson can do about the ugliness factor, but there's a lot he can do about the preparation problem. In "Fixin' Fish" Gunderson explains how to fillet, score, flake and grind fish, such as the eelpout, that contains y-bones — the floating, forked bones not attached to the backbone or skeleton, which cannot be removed with normal filleting techniques.

Knowing how to debone these fish may break down some of the resistance to eating them, but Gunderson is realistic enough to admit that Midwestern fish prejudice runs deep. "Eelpout is the only freshwater member of the cod family and is a nice, firm, white fish with a good flavor," said Gunderson. "But it is so ugly that I know macho fishermen who will cut their line rather than bring an eelpout on the boat. There's some strange kind of myth or mystery about it."

Mishandling fish — especially during the crucial period between catching it and cleaning it — is the other most common failing among people who fish. "I've always been an avid fisherman myself," said Gunders, "but it wasn't until I became an extension agent and started looking up this stuff myself that I realized how many things fishermen commonly do wrong."

Leaving fish on a stringer to bounce around in the bottom of a boat all day is the single biggest handling mistake made in fishing, Gunderson

Tips Bring 27 Arrests

Minnesota conservation officers made 27 arrests during April with tips provided by the public through the Turn In Poachers program.

Program offers cash rewards to persons who provide information to the DNR Enforcement Division that results in an arrest. The TIP program also protects the identity of informants.

A special toll-free telephone number has been set up for persons who want to report violations under the TIP program: 1-800-651-9093.

Ten of the arrests in April were for violations of the laws regulating trapping, and 11 of the arrests were made in northwestern Minnesota.

Rewards are paid out by TIP Inc., a non-profit citizens group. TIP president Robert Larson of Wayzata said rewards amounting to $2,100 were paid out last month, bringing the total for the year to date to $7,075.

He noted that of the 27 arrests in April, only 11 tipsters sought rewards.

Department enforcement officials said two of the April, arrests involved wanton waste of deer that had been taken legally during the fall hunting season but allowed to hang until the meat spoiled.

A TIP caller informed the DNR that he knew where three deer had been hanging since the close of the season at a location in Marshall county.

Following the arrest, a local newspaper carried pictures of the confiscated deer and a notice asking the public to report any similar violation to conservation officers.

Department then received another call with information about two more deer in the Thief River Falls area. Officers found these deer also and made another arrest.

Those arrested pled guilty to charges of wanton waste of wildlife. One of the men was fined $400 and lost his big game hunting privileges for three years. The other man was fined $300 with $200 suspended.

Birds of Prey Exhibit

An exhibit of 18 hawks, eagles and other birds of prey has been scheduled for showing in Minnesota state parks this summer. The birds are mounted to show their identification marks and special adaptations as birds of prey.

Taxidermy work was done by Carrol Henderson, supervisor of the Department of Natural Resources nongame wildlife program. Specimens in the display are birds that were found dead in the wild and turned over to the Department of Natural Resources and the Raptor Research and Rehabilitation Program at the University of Minnesota.

Approximate dates of the exhibit at the various state parks are listed below; however, individual parks should be contacted for specific days and times the display will be shown:

Fort Snelling State Park, May 18-28; Sibley State Park, May 31-July 1; Blue Mounds State Park, May 31-July 1; Itasca State Park, July 6-22; Lake Carlos State Park, July 5-22; Mille Lacs Kathio, August 10-20; Minnesota state fair, August 21-Sept. 3; Helmer Myre State Park, Sept. 7-16; Whitewater State Park, October 6-20.

Report Broken Ramps

Department of Natural Resources has asked Minnesota boaters to report any broken ramps they find at public access sites. Officials said the past winter produced unusually severe ice movement on many state lakes, buckling concrete launch ramps or forcing them out of the water.

They said the DNR is making an effort to repair the damage to access sites as rapidly as possible and hopes to have most of them fixed before the period of peak use this summer.

Boaters who discover damaged ramps or other problems at access sites are asked to contact the nearest DNR office with information on the location of the site and the nature of the damage.

Fish Shipment Law

Regulations covering the transportation of fish are now the same for non-resident anglers as resident state fishermen, the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources reports.

(Shipping weight regulations and limits for non-residents shipping by common carrier remain in effect.)

A bill eliminating the differences in the regulations was submitted to the recent legislature, passed and signed into law.

New law also eliminated the "fish packers license". Non-residents now are no longer required to have their dressed-filleted fish prepared for shipment by a licensed packer.

STRAIGHT TALK

Albert D. Hattis, Associate Professor of Business and Holder of the Schwan Endowed Chair for Free Enterprise, Southwest State University, Marshall

Driving along a highway, I found my top rated German diesel car in trouble, again. Every instrument panel light was red. A farmer came to my rescue. Within 15 minutes he determined the cause of the car problems and what should be done. One of the problems was a cracked bracket which held a compressor, alternator and two pumps. It had been replaced repeatedly, with new brackets from the German car engineers.

This farmer took the old cracked bracket, reinforced it with a weld that involved an old nail, added one bolt, and there have been no cracked brackets in almost two years. Since each cracked bracket involved repair costs in the hundreds of dollars, including towing, this American "technologist" was a big help to me.

Walking along a corridor at Southwest state university, I heard a strange voice saying, "The temperature is twenty three degrees." I tracked that synthesized voice to a talking outside temperature thermometer developed by a young college student, Nick Hoover, for a blind friend.

I asked Nick if there were any more significant new ideas under development by his fellow SSU technology students, and he quickly rattled off a list of products. He took me to a classroom where students convert their ideas into practical operational models. Their instructor, Gerald Kangas, has worked in the real world. He not only understands and talks technology, but he has the ability to create ideas and solutions with his two hands, and he encourages his students.

Illustrating the practical nature of these ideas, one young man, Alan Fuhrman, has constructed a simple weather alarm. Tuned to a 24-hour-per day federal weather service, it gives an alarm when an emergency alert is announced, so that you do not have to listen to a radio continuously to be safe.

In that same classroom were funcational models of electronic gadgets including clocks, remote control switches, scoreboards, and items too complex to discuss. All of this inventive creativity is taking place at a small university that few of you even knew existed.

Calls to other schools around the country proved to me that young engineering students, nationally, are loaded with concepts and taking the opportunity to work up ideas in their classrooms. One college teacher told me his students were manufacturing a complete car with a new engine that could be twice as fuel efficient as anything he understand auto makers have available today.

Many of us have looked at the statistics and been worried about our national creativity, which is critical in producing jobs and making up competitive. The number of patents issued per million population fell from 225 in 1970 to 189 in 1980. If you use billions of dollars of gross national product in deflated dollars, the number of patents issued dropped from 54 in 1970 to 26 in 1980.

Beyond the raw figures, we see all our videotape recorders, regardless of the American brand name, along with radio, TV sets, stereos, portable phones and more as products of foreign technology and production.

I believe the ideas and talent exist here at home. I think we must encourage technological development of practical and impractical products here in the United States. To do this, we must reward achievement with snigicant incentives. A national campaign to encourage both in-company and outside technologists with realistic royalty programs is a necessity. What incentive does an inside engineer have to be extra-productive when he has already signed away all rights under a waiver of invention form required at the time he was employed. These incentives, giving inventors a "piece of the action," must be based on restoration of those rights with fair profit sharing program.

From what I have discovered about our creativity, at my school and around the country, I believe that we have the technical capability and the talent to make the 1990's a period of booming employment and real prosperity, based on the development of useful new products. The first step must be encouragement of those with talent and ideas to prepare themselves with the right educational training. The second step involves the development of meaningful incentives for those whose new product ideas pay off.

That's Straight Talk!

I recently discussed prejudice, judging people without giving them a chance, as individuals, to prove themselves. One young high school sophomore, who started me off on this subject, reviewed that first column and said, "Sure, I understand prejudice, that it exists and is harmful, but I don't understand how and why it starts."

That's a good point! While developing a remedy for prejudice, giving everyone a chance to prove themselves, we haven't examined how the germ of prejudice develops and thrives.

In that original column, the American engineer of Japanese extraction was having trouble buying a home near his company's new office. The area hadn't ever had a non-caucasian resident. That's why Bob's effort to locate there raised many concerns: (1) What would this do to property values? (2) Will this create the impression that existing homeowners are less successful because anyone can move in? (3) The Japanese caused Pearl Harbor and many atrocities in World War II, so can Bob, who looks Japanese, be trusted? (4) Will some Asiatic religion further "goof up" our kids? (5) The Japanese are undercutting our businesses, causing a loss of jobs and paycuts, so isn't Bob partially responsible?

No one realized that Bob was a second generation born-in-the-USA American, a World War II hero, an Episcopalian, with typical American male traits, good and bad, whose family prosperity was tied to the success of American business.

The list of questions about Bob wasn't complete. Some who questioned Bob were looking for reasons to blame others for their own failings, which probably helped create rumors and gossip about "Japs" and flamed the prejudice against Bob. Examination of the prejudice involving Bob points up a concern about money, the impact on how we view ourselves if we let "everyone" in, and much more.

In that original column, Thomas Edison, one of our most productive scientist-inventors, would not have been able to get a job as a research engineer in a lab because his resume showed he had only three months of formal education. Those running such labs would have rejected his application because accepting Edison for what he was and might do would bring into doubt the value of their own credentials and make them and others lose respect for those credentials. This might not be true, but it may be what they perceived. Once, again, there is prejudice based on the impact of how we and others view ourselves if a fellow like Tom can be successful. One engineer commented to me, "If one of these practical engineers proves himself, it will mean to many that anyone coming off the street can achieve what we have worked so hard to accomplish and diminish our standing."

The prejudice that affected Mary Ellen, the well education secretary to a medical school dean, who was a superior but unofficial administrator and never got a promotion, is another story. Many people, both men and women, believe that women are wives and mothers who belong in their homes, with a job just a temporary occupation. Because some women have been trained, promoted, and then quit for "family-startup" or to move with a transferred husband, there is also a concern about wasted time and money. That still doesn't make it fair for those women whose objective is higher self esteem from job success.

You also can find prejudice developing from the search for a scapegoat when we fail or experience bad luck. Rather than face, "I just didn't have what it took," or "There was bad timing," many look for someone to blame, including business, bankers, farmers, lawyers, Jews, Catholics, the establishment, immigrants and foreigners, and any handy target.

Once prejudice germs spread, rumors twist and enlarge the infection so that even the individual who started the "story" may not recognize it.

We return to the answer to this prejudice disease, which is a willingness by each of us to give every person we meet a chance to prove themselves, as individuals.

Why should we be concerned about prejudice? Because, but for the grace of God, the target of this hate who doesn't get a "fair shake" could be you, me or our families!

That's Straight Talk!

DESERT BATTLEGROUND was encountered by members of Company B of the national guard in Thief River Falls and Crookston when they participated in special training exercises recently. The three-week training at Ft. Irwin, CA, replaced the regular summer encampment at Camp Ripley. An article and commentary, with additional photos supplied by the Minnesota national guard in St. Paul, will be published in Monday's edition of the Times. About 35 members of the Thief River Falls and Crookston units returned last Friday, about 90 last Tuesday and about a dozen the previous weekend.

County Board Proceedings

May 16, 1984
Official Proceedings
Board of County Commissioners
March 27, 1984

Pursuant to adjournment the Pennington County Board of Commissioners met in the Commissioners' room in the Courthouse in Thief River Falls at 10:00 a.m. on Tuesday, March 27, 1984. Members present: Hoffman, Koop, Tasa, Stenberg & Grabanski.

Soil Conservation Service mentioned that the annual banquet will be tonight and the soil survey presentation will be on Friday, March 30, 1984, at 1:00 p.m. at Northland College.

Engineer Olson stated we had received the permits from the Red Lake Watershed for bridge replacements. Moved by Commissioner Koop, seconded by Commissioner Hoffman to advertise the bids for bridge replacements to be let at 2:00 p.m. on April 24, 1984, for the following:

Bridge No. LO 229 — CSAH No. 4 — County Ditch No. 68; Bridge No. LO 258 — County Road No. 59 — County Ditch No. 68; Bridge No. LO 261 — County Road No. 61 and County Ditch No. 68.

Motion unanimously carried.

Discussed the selling of the old overhead garage door from the Bray Shed. We will need to advertise for bids which will be opened on April 10th.

Gordy Forester, DNR Area Wildlife Manager, was in to discuss buying land in SW¼ and SE¼ of Section 18, Mayfield Township. Department of Natural Resources would like to purchase this plus some other surrounding land. Auditor Olson had a letter from the Mayfield Township approving the sale of this land to the DNR with the condition that Tilmer Johnson be willing to sell his adjacent land in Section 19 and that the DNR be willing to buy that piece also. Mr. Forester said he had talked to the landowners in this area and would eventually like to buy land in Section 13 and 24 also. The DNR could not buy all of it at this time. Board requested Mr. Forester to send a description of all the land that would be included before they make a motion to approve this sale.

Charlie Rodekuhr and Sam Bratelli were in to discuss CD No. 70 and the reason for assessing $10 acre on the smaller tracts. The viewers were asked to take another look at these original benefit amounts.

Ardith Johnson, Clerk of Court, presented her financial report for 1983 which was submitted to the Court Administrator. Ardith also mentioned that she needs to do some record destruction and thought the County should consider purchasing a paper shredder for use by the entire Courthouse. The Board took this under advisement.

Moved by Commissioner Hoffman, seconded by Commissioner Koop to reappoint Richard Parnow representing the 2nd and 4th District and Janice Olson, representing the 3rd District to a three year term on the County Extension Committee, expiring December 31, 1986. Motion unanimously carried.

The Board discussed the meeting held March 26 with other County Commissioners involved with the Red Lake Watershed District. The following resolution was introduced by Commissioner Koop and moved for adoption:

WHEREAS, Pennington County Board of Commissioners does appoint a Board member to the Red Lake Watershed Board and,

WHEREAS, the Red Lake Watershed does have power to levy taxes against property owners in Pennington County,

BE IT RESOLVED that the Pennington County Board of Commissioners does ask the Red Lake Watershed Board to request the State Auditor's staff to do a compliance audit of 1983 and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the Red Lake Watershed Board publish the minutes of their meetings in at least one official county newspaper.

The foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Stenberg and upon vote, declared unanimously adopted.

Moved by Commissioner Stenberg, seconded by Commissioner Grabanski to accept the minutes of the meetings held January 24, February 14 and February 28 as mailed with the correction on the February 28 minutes. The motion to appoint Dale Svendsgaard to Inter County Nursing Service should read 'to replace Clarence Peterson instead of Norman Peterson.' Motion unanimously carred.

Rick Nordhagen, Roger Borgan, Shirley Borgan, Steven Nordhagen, principals in Future Fuels, Inc., appeared before the Board to talk about their alternative to sanitary land fills. Their prospective new business would create 28-33 new jobs and would market paper-cubes recycled from garbage. Asked for County support in the form of a resolution to be presented to the State. Commissioner Grabanski introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

WHEREAS, the Nordhagen family is forming an organization to be known as Future Fuels, Inc. and said firm is planning a recycling process which will serve as an alternative to the traditional landfill system for the disposal of solid waste; and

WHEREAS, Future Fuels, Inc. has requested the support of the County of Pennington for the project that they plan to undertake; and

WHEREAS, the County Board believes the development of such a project to be in the public interest because it will:

A. Provide employment of up to 30 persons.
B. Benefit the environment.
C. Provide a low cost source of fuel.
D. Aid substantially in solving the County's future solid waste disposal needs.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by the County Board of Pennington County, Minnesota, that the County Board is in support of the alternative energy development project proposed by the firm of Future Fuels, Inc. Thief River Falls, MN.

The foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Stenberg and upon vote, unanimously adopted.

County Recorder Prestegaard appeared before the Board to discuss getting a partial reimbursement for expenses incurred when he attended NACO convention in 1982. He also thought all employees should get treated equally when it comes to salary adjustments. The Board decided to reimburse Recorder Prestegaard $400 towards his expenses in attending the 1982 convention.

Moved by Commissioner Koop, seconded by Commissioner Stenberg to approve the abatements and additions as follows:

Gelene Lundeen — 3.4 Acres in SW¼ Sec. 24, Highlanding — Wrong School District. Should be School District No. 627.

Orlan Stolaas — Lot 1 Section 34, Highlanding Township — Wrong School District. Should be School District No. 561.

Motion unanimously carried.

Moved by Commissioner Stenberg, seconded by Commissioner Grabanski to reappoint Joyce Fox to the Welfare Board for a term ending July 1, 1986. Motion unanimously carried.

Commissioner Hoffman left the meeting at 3:00 p.m. to travel to the Twin Cities.

Auditor Olson read a letter from Terry Courneya requesting that Kim Swanson be allowed Health Coverage under the County's Group Policy. The premium would be paid entirely by Kim. Kim works 3 days a week in the County Extension Office. Board denied this request on the grounds that only full-time employees were eligible to join the County Health Group.

Moved by Commissioner Grabanski, seconded by Commissioner Koop to raise the charge for tax searches to $2.00 for the coming year. Motion unanimously carried.

Moved by Commissioner Grabanski, seconded by Commissioner Koop to have the County Engineer and County Auditor advertise for the seasons supply of culverts with bids to be opened at 2:15 p.m. April 24, 1984. Motion unanimously carried.

Commissioner Grabanski left the meeting at 4:00 p.m.

Moved by Commissioner Koop, seconded by Commissioner Stenberg to approve Oscar Nerhus's application No. 84-1135 for a permit to dig wildlife ponds in the N½NW¼ Section 24 Twp. 153 Rge. 39. Motion unanimously carried.

Moved by Commissioner Stenberg, seconded by Commissioner Koop to adjourn to convene at 10:00 a.m. on Tuesday, April 10, 1984. Motion unanimously carried.

Official Proceedings
Board of County Commissioners
Tuesday, April 10, 1984

Pursuant to adjournment the Pennington County Board of Commissioners met in the Commissioners' room of the Courthouse in Thief River Falls on Tuesday, April 10, 1984, at 10:00 a.m. Members present: Hoffman, Koop, Stenberg, Tasa and Grabanski.

Verner Arveson was in to discuss the watershed matters. Lowell Enerson has been hired to replace Oliver Dahle. Verner had a discussion with the Board about their concerns on things taking place at the watershed offices.

John Eidelbes and a group of farmers discussed with the County Board the petition for cleaning part of County Ditch No. 75 which they have given to the County Engineer. The County Board will look at this ditch on road inspection with the County Engineer.

Moved by Commissioner Hoffman, seconded by Commissioner Koop to set road, ditch and culvert inspection for April 9, 1984, at 10:00 a.m. Motion unanimously carried.

Rosanne Nelson appeared before the Board to discuss with them their decision not to grant her salary adjustment request. No action taken.

County Appraiser DeHaan was in with an abatement for Mitchell Evenson. Mr. Evenson had lost his homestead qualification when he moved to North Dakota. The Board denied the request to reinstate homestead.

County Attorney Olin discussed the mediations for the Law Enforcement Union. Mediator set to be in Thief River Falls at 10:30 April 12, 1984.

County Auditor Olson advised the Board that Pennington County had received $24,856.32 refund from our Workman's Compensation insurance for 1983. This amounted to about 91 per cent of our premium paid. The Board inquired about putting Oakland Park Nursing Home in our policy.

The Board convened at 2:00 to open bids for the overhead garage door that was replaced on the Bray shed as duly advertised and called for. The following bids were opened and read aloud: Roger Kriel — $101.50.

Moved by Commissioner Hoffman, seconded by Commissioner Grabanski to accept the bid of Roger Kriel as the best bid for the overhead garage door. Motion unanimously carried.

County Engineer Olson reviewed the petition he has received to clean 2½ miles of County Ditch No. 33. Petition is on file with County Engineer. Engineer will survey the ditch first to find where problems are. Petitions also asked for a culvert replacement for a culvert which they feel is too small. Board will inspect this culvert when they make road inspections on April 9.

Stewart-Walker does not have final plans for 1st Street Bridge from Erickson Engineering as of this date.

Discussion was held on problems of Easements on CD No. 44. Also discussed JD No. 25-3. Terry Anderson has requested blading and snowplowing for Reiner Township for approximately 8 miles. Discussed placing signs marking blacktops (State Aid Roads). Board approved this request. Discussed switching State Aid No. 18 with County Road No. 63.

The Board discussed the request of Clarence Dietz to enroll in the retiree sub-group for health insurance. The Board denied this request as this policy was not in effect at the time of his retirement.

Official Proceedings
Board of County Commissioners
Tuesday, April 24, 1984

Pursuant to adjournment, the Pennington County Board of Commissioners met in the Commissioners' room of the Courthouse in Thief River Falls on Tuesday, April 24, 1984, at 10:00 a.m. Members present: Hoffman, Koop, Tasa, Stenberg & Grabanski.

D.J. Hanson, Court Administrator from Bemidji, appeared before the Board to introduce himself and explain his position. He supervises Clerks of Court.

Don Grabanski read a letter from Deb Matero, Ass.t County Extension Agent, requesting an appropriation of $150.00 for "Friends of MEED" (Minnesota Environmental Education Board) to attend a conference for Emerging Groundwater Issues in Northern Minnesota conference to be held at Northland Community College on June 13, 1984. After considerable discussion, moved by Commissioner Grabanski, seconded by Commissioner Stenberg to appropriate $150.00 as requested. Motion unanimously carried. Extension Agent Terry Courneya will also check into this more thorough.

Myles Olson, Olaf Olson and County Engineer Olson were in to discuss ditches and ditch assessments. The Olson's would like some cleaning done in SW¼ Section 15 and SE¼ Section 16 in Hickory Township. Also requested some help in cleaning a private ditch, which is not a county ditch and over which the County Board has no authority. Board took the request under advisement.

Merle & Terry Lundeen presented a petition to the Board for cleaning of CD No. 53. Petition was given to the County Engineer for action.

Terry Courneya was before the Board to give a status report on Soil Survey Computerization Programs. Original cost was thought to be close to $8,000 but actual cost amounted to $4,096 because of MEED participation to offset the salary. Assessor DeHaan will also have use of these programs as to crop equalivency. Terry Courneya was instructed to order the computer software for this program at a cost of $446.00.

Terry Courneya also discussed the sharing of resources with Marshall County. 35 per cent of Terry's time is spent with Marshall County residents. Board suggested we set up a meeting with the Marshall County Board of Commissioners to discuss sharing the office personnel based here in Pennington County. The County Auditor was requested to set this meeting up after spring field work is completed.

Bob Fitzgerald, representative of the Brakemen from the Soo Line Railroad, appeared before the Board requesting the Board to go on record of supporting a resolution to retain cabooses on the trains which travel through Thief River Falls. Commissioner Koop introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

WHEREAS, the Soo Line Railroad is presently planning to remove cabooses from several of their trains, including those used in Pennington County;

WHEREAS, the use of cabooses serves as a safety device in that conductors-brakeman working in the caboose are more capable of observing potential fires and other safety problems than the Engineer several cars in front of the train;

WHEREAS, the Pennington County Board of Commissioners feel that the safety factor of having cabooses far outweighs any possible reason to remove the caboose.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that the Pennington County Board of Commissioners go on record as opposing the elimination of cabooses on all Soo Line trains used in Pennington County or elsewhere.

The foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Grabanski and upon vote, declared unanimously adopted.

A delegation from the Senior Citizens consisting of Merle Lindberg, Jon Melusalem, Harry Oen, Harry Simons, Blanche Larson and Morris Howick, met with the Board to discuss the new senior citizen's center being considered. Spokesman Oen advised the Board of various sites available and the cost involved in each of these sites.

After considerable discussion, Commissioner Stenberg moved, seconded by Commissioner Koop that the Pennington County Board of Commissioners support the efforts of the Pennington County Council on Aging to build a senior citizen's center in Thief River Falls and that they will provide some financial assistance for this project. Motion unanimously carried.

At 2:00 the Board convened to open bids as advertised and called for bridge replacements under projects filed for bidding under the following numbers: SAP 57-598-10, SAP 57-603-02, SAP 57-598-11. The following bids were opened and read aloud: Lian Construction, Grygla $78,706.16; Eagle Contracting, Ramer $79,494.80; Landwehr Heavy Moving, St. Cloud $80,287.50; Charles Hedeen, Thief River Falls $81,100.00; Midwest Contracting, Marshall $82,693.00.

Moved by Commissioner Koop, seconded by Commissioner Hoffman that the bid of Lian Construction, Grygla, in the amount of $78,706.16 be accepted as the best and lowest bid for bridge replacement and the Chairman and Auditor are hereby authorized and instructed to enter into contract with said low bidder. Motion declared unanimously carried.

At 2:15 p.m. the Board convened to open bids for the year's culvert supply as duly advertised and called for. The following bids were opened and read aloud: H.V. Johnston Culvert, Circle Pines $11,309.20; St. Regis Culvert Operation, Shakopee $12,346.02; ARMCO, Inc. Oak Brook, Il $16,241.45.

Moved by Commissioner Hoffman, seconded by Commissioner Grabanski that all bids received for culvert supply be rejected. Motion unanimously carried.

Discussion was held on the First Street bridge. Stewart & Walker's plans are due on the 19th of April but had not been completed by Erickson Engineering, the consulting firm who were finalizing the plans for Stewart & Walker. The plans will be going in this week as they are needed for funding. Roy Hanson, MN DOT representative, advised the county engineer that this project could not be funded under current funding.

Sheriff Richards appeared before the Board to discuss the "911" Emergency Line. He has received an estimate from Northwestern Bell of a cost of $1,061.90 with a portion of the monthly fee being paid by the State. Sheriff Richards also advised the Board there had been some lawsuits involving the 911 system. Sheriff Richards discussed the custodial service for the Law Enforcement building. The City pays $4,152.67 per six-months which both the Sheriff and Chief of Police Froschheiser feel is an overcharge for the time spent in the building, which on some days amounts to only 3-4 hours. Sheriff Richards and Chief Froschheiser want to get an adequate amount of work from the custodian for the wages paid.

Discussion was held on the Tobin Law Office billings for Indian Affairs. Attorney Olin was instructed to send a letter to the Attorney General on this matter.

Minutes for the meeting held March 13 and March 27 were read and approved.

Commissioner Stenberg moved, with Commissioner Hoffman seconding that Wayne Olson be reappointed County Engineer for a term of 4 years commencing May 1, 1984, at a salary of $32,000. for the year May 1, 1984 through April 30, 1985. Motion unanimously carried.

County Engineer discussed County Road 65A which does not show on the State Map as a State Aid road. State says there is no resolution designating it as a County Aid Road. This will be inspected on road inspection in May.

Department of Natural Resources and Federal Emergency Management Agency notified the Board of a meeting to be held on May 22, 1984, at 9:00 a.m. on updating the Flood Plain Zone Map.

Moved by Commissioner Koop, seconded by Commissioner Hoffman to adopt the agreement presented by the Engineer for blading and snowplowing township roads. Motion unanimously carried.

Board was advised that the Woodland Construction building was up for auction on April 30, 1984. Discussion was held with little favorable comment.

Discussion was held on easements being placed on cleaning petitions for ditches. County Engineer will see that easements good for each individual cleaning project are placed on the cleaning petitions.

Discussion was held on permits for moving trailers. This permit will apply to farmers as well as commercial movers.

Moved by Commissioner Hoffman, seconded by Commissioner Stenberg to request the State to establish CR 78 & 63 as State Aid Road No. 18 and to switch CR 64 & 77 back to county road status. Motion carried with Commissioner Koop voting nay.

Moved by Commissioner Koop, seconded by Commissioner Hoffman to adjourn the meeting to reconvene at 10:00 Tuesday, May 8, 1984. Motion unanimously carried.

Fish Handling Subject Of Book

said. "People would never think of throwing a t-bone steak into the bottom of a dirty, oily boat and leaving it there all morning, but that's what they do to fish," Gunderson said. "And fish are actually more delicate than most other meats. They bruise easily and become rancid." Gunderson figures that one of the reasons the walleye is such a popular fish in Minnesota is that it is very lean, so it still tastes pretty good in spite of mistreatment.

To keep fish — fatty and lean — tasting fresh, Gunderson recommends immediately hitting them on the head, cutting the tail to allow proper bleeding — which discourages rancidity — and icing them. Crushed ice is best, he said, and should be placed over the fish where meltwater can wash bacteria away and below the fish where it can keep the fish from wallowing in its own blood and slime.

Two other fish crusades of Gunderson's are to keep people from wasting parasite-infested fish and to promote cooking methods other than frying.

There is quite a variety of parasites found in Upper Midwestern fish, Gunderson said, but only the broad fish tapeworm is toxic to humans, and even that can be killed by heating the fish flesh to 140 degrees or freezing it for 48 hours at 0 degrees. "I've known people who have tossed whole coolers of fish because of harmless parasites that can easily be removed," Gunderson said. "The fish are still good and it's a real waste to dump them." Because of this waste and the many calls he has received on the subject, Gunderson devotes an entire chapter of his book to the subject of parasites.

Cooking methods are not as crucial a Sea Grant concern, but they are of special interest to Gunderson. "People in Minnesota think that frying is the only way to prepare fish," said Gunderson. "They'll pan fry it, beer batter fry it or deep fry it, but they'll always fry it." Because fish is such a low-fat, low-calorie source of protein, Gunderson believes that to always serve it fried is to defeat one of the purposes of eating it. In his book he not only explains such common preparation methods as baking, broiling and poaching, he also devotes chapters to drying, smoking, pickling, canning and salting fish and even explains how to make fish jerky and caviar.

Probably the most unusual preparation method Gunderson promotes, however, is the grinding of fish to use like hamburger in dishes such as chili, lasagna and casseroles. "Most people in this part of the country have a one-track mind in fish preparation, but you can't eat it every day if you'll only eat it fried," Gunderson said. At the lecture-demonstrations he gives, Gunderson tries to take along some fish chili for audience members to sample; most are surprised at how good it is, he said.

"Fixin' Fish" grew out of these demonstrations, which Gunderson arranges through county extension agents and gives throughout Minnesota. "I like to get people into the demonstrations on one interest they have — often it's smoking fish — and then try to teach them about other stuff like handling or freezing, which they don't even know they're doing wrong," Gunderson said.

Although there is a lot of misinformation among people who fish, one of Gunderson's favorites is the story of the man who told him he'd heard that a person would starve to death trying to live on burbot and suckers because they had no nutritional value. Said Gunderson, "You wonder sometimes how these stories get started."

Deadline For Disaster Loan This Friday

District office of the Small Business administration (SBA), announced today that May 18 is the last day small businesses in several Minnesota counties may file for economic injury disaster loan (EIDL) assistance.

Pennington and Red Lake counties qualified due to excessive rains and heat during the summer months of 1983 and wind damage on August 25, 1983, which delayed planting and harvesting of most crops."

Non-farm small business concerns may make application for assistance from SBA under the economic injury disaster loan program if, as a direct result of the incident, economic injury was sustained. These loans are limited to small businesses only as defined by SBA using the standard industrial classification code, and are made only to provide relief from economic injury caused directly by this disaster.

According to director Moreno, "SBA cannot authorize refinancing of long-term debts nor provide working capital which was needed prior to the disaster. Businesses must be able to furnish balance sheets and operating statements so that SBA may compare results proceeding the disaster with those since and during the disaster period. No assistance is available to a business which is able to obtain credit elsewhere."

Disaster assistance to businesses is limited to a maximum of $500,000 for each SBA declaration, however, the actual amount of the loan will be based upon the actual economic injury. The maturity of those loans will depend upon the ability of the business to repay the loan but not to exceed 30 years. The interest rate will be four per cent.

To obtain application or additional information, contact the SBA Disaster Assistance Office, 75 Spring Street SW, Atlanta, Georgia 30303, or call toll free 1-800-554-3455. Office hours for the Atlanta disaster office are 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., EDT, Monday through Friday. Applications mailed must be postmarked on or before May 18, 1984, the deadline for filing.

Matt Carlson Fund Arranged By Classmates

Classmates of Matt Carlson, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Carlson of Thief River Falls, have been invited to contribute toward a unique treatment procedure Carlson has undertaken following an automobile accident in December of 1980. Matt is a graduate of Lincoln high school here.

In a letter to classmates, Jeri Lundin explains that Carlson was left partially paralyzed by the accident which fractured vertebrae in his neck. He has undergone extensive therapy and rehabilitation but is confined to a wheelchair and is now studying in the computer field at the University of Minnesota in St. Paul.

"Throughout the past three and one-half years, Matt has never faltered nor given up hope that he may not lead the rest of his life from a wheelchair," the letter to classmates states.

"With hope came an opportunity for Matt that was impossible to turn down. This past March, Matt and his parents journeyed to New York City for a surgical procedure that may increase his chances for improved dexterity and movement throughout his body. The surgery is still experimental but has had profound results in many patients and is already proving to give results for Matt as well."

The letter invites classmates and others to make contributions to a fund to assist the Carlsons with costs of surgery and continued rehabilitation. Donations will be accepted from anyone and may be sent to Jeri Lundin, 305 18th Avenue SE, Apt. D, Minot, ND 58701.

FDA Clarifies Instructions On Diabetes Drugs

"The American Diabetes association is pleased that the food and drug administration has clarified the product warning labeling instructions to be used for oral anti-diabetes drugs," according to Casey Ryan, M.D., volunteer president of the A.D.A., North Dakota Affiliate. "We estimate that approximately two million out of the 10 million Type II non-insulin-dependent diabetic Americans now use these oral drugs to control their disease," he said.

"The association urges that physicians, pharmacists and other health care professionals provide accurate, up-to-date information to people with Type II diabetes that emphasizes a regimen of effective diet, nutrition and exercise in the management and control of this form of the disease," Dr. Ryan stated.

"This regimen remains the treatment of choice for non-insulin-dependent diabetic patients in the United States. However," he explained, "when such a treatment course does not achieve normal or near-normal blood glucose levels, physicians need to consider other individualized therapeutic modalities, such as oral hypoglycemic (blood-sugar lowering) agents or insulin. The anit-diabetes drugs now available are inexpensive and easy-to use by the patient. Each patient requires timely and regular medical monitoring and evaluation to determine the efficacy of this pharmacological intervention in the control of the patient's disease."

Dr. Ryan stated that "the association recommends continued professional education of physicians and health professionis who treat diabetic patients." He said that members of the diabetes health care team should make every effort to familiarize themselves with the new information available on the diagnosis and treatment of this serious health problem."

He cited the association's current clinical education program (CEP), a multi-year nationwide health professional education effort as a way for primary care physicians, internists, gynecologists, doctors of osteopathy and other health care providers to keep abreast of the information and developments in the field. CEP is a major part of the association's campaign to bring into effective treatment all Type II patients, especially the estimated 5,000,000 Americans who have the disease but do not know it.

He suggested that physicians and health care professionals contact their local American Diabetes association for information on future professional education programs planned in their communities.

"This association," Dr. Ryan stressed, "urges that patients who require therapy with either oral anit-diabetes drug or insulin become informed and educated about the protential risks and advantages of these alternative modes of therapy."

According to the association, patients who are most likely to respond well to oral drugs include: people who first become diagnosed with Type II diabetes after 40 years of age, have had this major form of the disease for fewer than five years, are of normal weight or obese, have never received insulin, or have been well controlled on less than 40 units of insulin per day.

Association strongly advises that oral drugs should not be used during pregnancy and lactation because their effects on the fetus-newborn child are unknown, and are unlikely to provide adequate blood sugar control during these stress-producing times. They are not recommended for treatment of patients with particularly stressful concurrent diseases or conditions, which include infections, trauma, acute myocardial infarction, nor for patients who are known to be allergic to this class of sulfonylureas or to sulfa drugs (which are chemically similar to this class).

Dr. Ryan assured both patients and professionals that the association will continue to monitor the treatment of Type II diabetes with the various anti-diabetes drugs that are now available, as well as those that are expected to become available. Timely medical reports containing the best available information will be issued by the association.

For more information on the education, service and research programs of the American Diabetes association, contact the local ADA affiliate where you live or work or write to the association's national headquarters, Two Park Avenue, Box PED, New York, N.Y. 10016.

AAA TIPS ON TRIPS

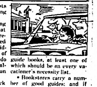
Facts From the American Automobile Association



There are ways to cut costs without giving up and staying home.

- Consider going during the off-season, when rates at hotels and motels are often reduced. Choose budget-priced accommodations, or consider camping. Make one meal of the day a picnic; this can do double duty at midday by allowing children a chance to run off some excess energy.
- If you purchase snack supplies locally before you leave, you can control quality as well as cost.
- For sightseeing, remember that at many of the continent's greatest wonders there are no admission fees. Plan your trip around a museum such as the Smithsonian, or one or more state or national parks.
- In National Park Service or Forest Service areas, a $10 Golden Eagle Passport can be an excellent bargain. It admits you and everyone with you in the same car to designated areas for a whole calendar year. Persons over 62 and the physically disabled obtain similar advantages with the free Golden Age and Golden Access Passports.
- Throughout the country there are hundreds of free memorials, gardens, museums, parks and other attractions. You will find most of the best ones listed in current guide books, at least one of which should be on every vacationer's necessity list.
- Bookstores carry a number of good guides: and if you're a Triple-A member, you can get comprehensive regional TourBooks free for the asking as part of your membership benefits.
- TourBooks help you avoid that great needless expense — the tourist rip-off. The attractions listed in TourBooks, for example, have been personally inspected and approved by trained field personnel. They also list a wide variety of over 20,000 AAA approved lodging and dining establishments, enabling you to choose those that best suit your budget and tastes.

For information on the Golden Passports, write Public Inquiry, National Park Service, Washington, D.C. 20040. To ask about the TourBooks and other features of AAA membership, contact your local AAA office or call 1-800-336-HELP (ask for Hank Brown) to get their address and phone number.

Play, Reading Workshops Offered At BSU

Workshops in classroom drama and reading enhancement will be offered for teachers during the week of July 9 to 13 at Bemidji state university.

Two character plays in the elementary, middle school and junior high school classroom are the topic of the one credit July 9 to 11 workshop to be held 8 to 11 a.m. in Hagg Sauer 102 on the BSU campus. The workshop is recommended for junior high teachers of literature, social studies and science, as well as elementary teachers.

Afternoon workshop, to be held July 9 to 13 from 1 to 5 p.m. for teachers of grades one to six and parents, shows methods that help reluctant and poor readers to become avid readers. This workshop is available for two credits and will also be held in Sagg Sauer 102.

Dr. William Kirtland, director of the reading center at Boise state university, will instruct and prepare texts for the workshops. Both workshops are available for graduate or undergraduate credit and apply to state license renewal. Pre-registration with deposits is required by June 29.

Meteor Shower Is A Feature Of The May Sky

Meteor shower created by Halley's comet and a magnificient but invisible swarm of galaxies that pull on earth are features of the May sky. Like flowers after an April rain, these sky decorations should bloom for winter-weary Minnesota starwatchers.

Meteor shower called the Eta Aquarids — due to peak about midnight on May 4 — is created each year at about this time as earth passes through debris from the tail of Halley's comet, left strung across the solar system on the famous comet's many past trips around the sun. When our plant intersects these pebbles and grains of comet dust — once in May and then again in late October — part of it collides with our atmosphere at high speeds. Burning from the friction created by this collision, the comet pieces create about 18 "falling stars" each hour. Meteor showers usually last two or three days but are often at their most intense when our planet crosses the thickest area of the old comet's path.

Halley comet's last passage through earth's area of the solar system was in 1910. The comet is due back again in 1985 and 1986 and has already been sighted by powerful telescope. A comet leaves part of its tail behind on every trip, and Halley's, a veteran of centuries of passages, may well be much less visible when it returns again in the middle of the 21st century than it will be on its upcoming trip, said University of Minnesota astronomer Marc Ondrechen.

Not visible like a meteor shower, but infinitely more powerful, is the Virgo cluster of galaxies, now close to due south at about 11 p.m. in the direction of the constellation Virgo, which is not related to the cluster. The gravity exerted by the 2,500-some galaxies clustered here — each containing about 100 billion stars — is so strong that this rich cluster is pulling the entire Milky Way galaxy toward it at 300 miles a second.

Galaxies that swarm there in the cluster cover an area of sky some 20 million light-years across and 50 million light-years away from us. One of them, M87, may be several hundred-times-more-massive than the Milky Way and may well hold a black hole at its center. Another, M100, has frothed with four supernova explosions visible from Earth in recorded time alone.

Contract Let For Bridges In This Area

Swingen Construction Co., Grand Forks, N.D., has been awarded a $359,934 contract for bridges to be built on township road 236 over the Snake river, 2.3 miles southwest of Warren, and on CSAH 44 over the Thief River, seven miles southeast of Holt. Work is to begin May 16 and be completed within 80 working days.

The company also was apparent low bidder at $383,719 for bridge widening and redecking on TH 32 over the Clearwater river in Red Lake Falls. Work is scheduled to begin June 4.

Heartworm Disease May Be Dog Killer

Heartworm can needlessly kill dogs, but not if the preventative program is properly used. Dogs should be heartworm tested by a veterinarian between now and mosquito season so the pet may be placed on the preventative pill, liquid or small dog cookie.

Dogs must be tested each year prior to being placed on the preventative medication because the only danger in use of the preventative is if it is administered to a heartworm positive dog. If the dog is positive, about 20 per cent of all positive cases which are given the preventative will go into shock and die. This only happens if the dog is heartworm positive — if used on heartworm negative dogs it is safe and very effective.

Mosquitoes carry microscopic baby heartworms and deposit them on the dogs' skin during the biting process. It takes about six months for the baby heartworm to migrate and mature in the heart to an ugly worm, six to 12 inches in length. These worms interfere with blood circulation by plugging one chamber of the heart and by clogging the arteries of the lungs. In addition, the disease is so complex that is also damages both the liver and kidneys.

Not every dog shows symptoms, but as one could imagine, a disease of this nature could make a dog tire easily, lose weight, exhibit a rough hair coat and have a hard time breathing.

University of Minnesota's 14-year survey reveals this unnecessary disease is well ingrained throughout the state of Minnesota. This survey also illustrates that the disease is irregular in locality appearance — that is, some years heartworm disease of dogs is low and some years it is high. This is directly proportional to the previous summer's mosquito population.

Report also reveals that towns which never had heartworm disease all of a sudden start finding positive cases. Most large towns and cities with good mosquito control do not have much of a problem, however, it does exist. In our mobile society the "sheltered house dogs" are being infected when they go on the family summer vacation to lake and wooded areas. Even the "lap dog" is not immune from this disease.

SATURDAY SCHOOL

Ronnie doesn't realize it . . . but right now, he's in school! Sitting on that warm rock with his dog and his trusty fishing pole, he's learning the ways of nature and the fun of living. There's hardly a minute, at home or at play, that he isn't learning something. And, of course, from Monday to Friday in the regular classroom, he studies man's accumulated knowledge and how to make use of it.

How about Sunday? Well, there's a lot of learning to be done on Sundays too, and it's the kind that helps a child to develop truth, honesty and integrity. The Church sets high standards for its young people . . . and youngsters love to be challenged! Church School encourages Ronnie to reach high and to strive for the best that's in him . . . so that he may become the man God meant him to be.

BACK TO BASICS COOKING

It's not surprising that pork continues to grow in popularity when you consider how well it accepts other flavors and seasonings. In this recipe, pork spareribs are baked to a tender and juicy perfection in a tangy pineapple sauce. Extremely easy to prepare, Pineapple Glazed Spareribs, gets a special lift from naturally brewed Kikkoman Soy Sauce. You'll find its characteristic flavor and aroma adds an unbeatable richness, without overpowering. The result of a centuries old natural fermentation process, Kikkoman Soy Sauce makes a tasteful contribution to many dishes. When you savor the taste of these great ribs, you'll know why naturally brewed soy sauce isn't just for Oriental cooking.

PINEAPPLE GLAZED SPARERIBS

3 to 4 pounds pork spareribs
1 can (20 oz.) sliced pineapple in syrup
½ cup Kikkoman Soy Sauce
¼ cup tomato catsup
2 tablespoons brown sugar, packed
1 clove garlic, pressed

Cut ribs into serving pieces; place in shallow foil-lined pan, meaty side down. Bake in 450°F. oven 20 minutes. Meanwhile, drain pineapple, reserving all syrup. Combine syrup with soy sauce, catsup, brown sugar and garlic. Remove ribs from oven and drain off drippings. Lower oven temperature to 325°F. Pour soy sauce mixture evenly over ribs; cover pan loosely with foil. Continue baking 45 minutes. Turn ribs over and top with pineapple. Brush ribs and pineapple thoroughly with sauce in pan. Return to oven and bake, uncovered, 15 minutes, or until pineapple is thoroughly heated. Brush ribs with pan drippings before serving. Makes 4 servings.
